Coal Mines Must Open, President Tells Lewis; Congressmen Demand Action on Defense Strikes; 'The Shooting Has Started,' Roosevelt Declares

Nazis Drive Deep Wedge In Defenses Of Moscow

By the Associated Press

Russian reverses just below Moscow on the central front and in the far south before Rostov were plain last night.

By all accounts the peril in the Ukraine, was both greater and more imminent and in Kuibyshev, the alternate Soviet capital, the Red leadership acknowledged as much by its preoccupation with the organization of a new war industry to the east of the Ural Mountains.

The German armies appeared to be inching forward generally. But while Stalin's government apparently accepted the growing possibility of disaster in western Russia—at least in the Donets and Don industrial areas of the Ukraine—all indications from Soviet sources supported the belief that the Russians were as concerned with the resistance of the distant future as they were with today and tomorrow.

The Soviet command in its communique for this morning addressed itself to the future more than the immediate present, giving nothing new of consequence as to the existing fighting areas but asserting that there had been "a sharp deterioration in the physical condition and morale" of the invaders, who were said to be approaching exhaustion.

It was from Russian rather than German sources that the principal information came yesterday concerning the offensives on Moscow. A German advance of some 15 miles beyond Maloyaroslavets, an area of weeks of fighting, to 50 miles below the capital was acknowledged in Soviet military dispatches, which reported that at that point Red counterattacks beat the invaders back across the Nara River.

It appeared that Serpukhov, a city of 77,000, stood near the core of this heavy new action—the most violent of a day that saw a sharp rise in the tempo of fighting all about Moscow. The Russian left wing in that area was acknowledged to be under attack of terrific power, and Soviet dispatches conceded that about Moscow generally the Germans were bringing up tens of thousands of reinforcements.

Fighting was reported still in heavy progress about Maloyaroslavets itself, and thus the situation appeared one of a German salient extended to a depth of 15 miles—to a point at or near the confluence of the Narva and Oka rivers.

Plane Downed, She Takes a Bus

Landlord Held In Attacking Of OPM Clerk

Former Utah National Committeeman Broke Into Room, She Says

Charged with ravishing a 19-year-old OPM employe, a 53-year-old man said by police at the Third Precinct to be Orman William Ewing, former Democratic national committeeman for Utah, will receive a preliminary hearing this morning in Police Court.

The alleged attack took place in the girl's apartment in a rooming house at 1101 Sixteenth Street Northwest, where Ewing is landlord, early Sunday morning.

According to the story she told police, the man entered her apartment on the first floor of the house by breaking the chain on the door while she slept. As she started to get out of bed, she related, the man shoved her back, held his hand over her mouth and nose and assaulted her. She was taken to Gallinger Hospital, where examination revealed she had been attacked.

District Attorney Edward Curran said last night the man would not have an opportunity to gain his release by bond unless it were ordered in court today.

Police revealed that Ewing, whose address was listed as 3226 Cleveland Avenue Northwest, had been arrested previously on charges of speeding, driving while drunk and driving without an operator's permit.

He was arrested yesterday at 3:50 a.m. at his Cleveland Avenue address by Officers E. W. Blackburn and G. W. Chapman of the Third Precinct.

Neutrality Change Held 'Asking War'

Vandenberg Opens Isolationist Attack As Connally Calls It Move for Defense

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

Neutrality Act modification was presented to the Senate yesterday as "a defense measure, not a war measure," as isolationists opened their attack on the free shipping bill as "an invitation to war."

An historic Senate debate opened with a speech by Chairman Connally of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, who said the Axis already has made war on American ships and this Government must free its hands for self-defense measures.

Senator Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, replied for the opposition that authority for armed merchantmen to move through combat zones directly to belligerent ports "asks for war" and will lead to "a shooting war on two oceans."

Administration leaders conferred on strategy with the President then returned to the Capitol to press for passage within ten days.

Galleries Crowded

Opposition leaders conferred last night but indicated there was no intention of filibustering.

Crowded but silent Senate galleries and a full but solemn chamber heard Connally present the committee's recommendations for repeal of all pivotal sections of the Neutrality Act.

Pacing, gesticulating, departing frequently for emphasis from his prepared text, Connally told the Senate: "As a proud Nation, the United States must claim its right to the seas, its right to use the seas, its right as a free and equal Nation among the nations of the earth."

Speaking from text, Vandenberg delivered the only other speech of the day, a warning that another A. E. F. will follow armed American merchantmen across the sea.

Reassured by Hull

"The ultimate acknowledgment by Congress of a 'state of war' will be a mere formality, ratifying a precipitated fact, if we approve the needless provocations and trends inherent in this resolution," shouted Vandenberg.

Senator George (Democrat), of Georgia, for the Administration, and Senator Taft (Republican), of Ohio, for the opponents, were tentatively slated to follow with speeches today.

Secretary of State Hull, meanwhile, was revealed to have informed the Senate Foreign Relations Committee "that there will be no purpose or intent to rush out somewhere and get into a real war."

In printed hearings of his testimony last week Hull was quoted as saying that "probably we won't be in any war until Hitler decrees that we shall, and it has not been at all

Hitler's Designs On Americas, Plan to Wipe Out Religion Cited

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

President Roosevelt charged last night that Hitler aims at domination of the United States and Latin America and said "the shooting has started."

He said he had a secret map in his possession, prepared by the Nazi government, which showed the reorganization of 14 South and Central American countries into six vassal states under Hitler's "new world order." One of the proposed puppet states, the President said, includes the Panama Canal—"our great lifeline."

He added grimly:

"That is his plan. It will never go into effect."

In a Navy Day address broadcast throughout the world, the Chief Executive also formally charged that the Hitler regime has drawn up a detailed plan to wipe out all religions and set up an International Nazi Church.

"The Shooting Has Started"

"America has been attacked," he declared at a Navy League dinner here.

"We have wished to avoid shooting. But the shooting has started. And history has recorded who fired the first shot. In the long run, however, all that will matter is who fired the last shot."

Calling for a revision of the Neutrality Act to arm merchantmen and permit American freighters protected by American warships to carry war supplies "into the harbors of our friends," the President said that given this, "the goods will be delivered." The Navy, he added, believes in its tradition of "Damn the torpedoes, full speed ahead."

Sinkings Recounted

The President recounted the sinking of American-owned merchant ships and the attack on two United States destroyers. He declared that the attack on the U. S. S. Kearny was an attack on the Nation, and recited the States from which her dead and wounded came.

"Hitler's torpedo was directed at every American," the Chief Executive stated, and added grimly a few moments later:

"We do not propose to take this lying down."

Anti-Labor Feeling Sweeps Capitol; Byrd Chides President

By Robert De Vore.
Post Staff Writer

Senator Byrd (Democrat), of Virginia, last night served notice on the Administration that he would oppose revision of the Neutrality Act to permit American ships to enter combat zones until "sound and constructive measures" are taken to stop "at once all defense industry strikes."

The declaration came at the end of a long statement castigating John L. Lewis and chiding President Roosevelt for an "almost abject" plea to the United Mine Workers' chief to call off the captive coal mines strike.

The strike that has brought 53,000 men out of steel-company-owned mines brought demands for strong action from both sides of the Capitol yesterday in a sweep of anti-labor feeling more potent than at any time since the wave of defense strikes started.

Cox Would Outlaw Closed Shop

In the House, Representative Cox (Democrat), of Georgia, set to work at once on the draft of a bill which he said would "outlaw the closed shop"—solitary issue in the coal strike. Cox said he presumed the measure would be referred to the Labor Committee, but that he would immediately file a petition to discharge the committee and bring the bill out on the House floor.

To be effective, a discharge petition requires the signature of 218 members, and Cox predicted:

"We can get them, now."

Senator Connally (Democrat), of Texas, indicated the temper of the Senate which several months ago formally condemned defense strikes, by breaking into the neutrality debate with the warning:

"Just wait until we finish with the neutrality bill, then we will deal with the fourth member of the Axis."

Floor Attacks on Lewis

In a prepared statement, Byrd said:

"As a supporter, up to this date, of the President's foreign policies, I serve notice now that I do not intend to consider voting one step closer to war, except in our own defense, so long as sound and constructive measures are not adopted stopping at once all defense in-

Warns 'Menacing' Minorities

President Toughens Attitude Toward Labor-Capital Problem

President Roosevelt's utterance last night on labor-management problems was more strongly stated than his March 15, 1941, declaration on the same subject. Last night he said:

"Yes, our Nation must speak from every assembly line—yes, from every coal mine—the all-inclusive whole of our vast industrial machine. Our factories and our shipyards are constantly expanding. Our output must be multiplied.

"It cannot be hampered by the selfish obstruction of a small but dangerous minority of industrial managers who hold out for extra profits, or for 'business as usual.' It cannot be hampered by the selfish obstruction of a small but dangerous minority of labor leaders who are a menace—for labor as a whole knows that that small minority is a menace to the true cause of labor itself, as well as to the Nation as a whole."

March 15 on the same topic he said:

"The determination of America must not be obstructed by war profiteering.

"It must not be obstructed by unnecessary strikes of workers, by short-sighted management, or by deliberate sabotage.

"For, unless we win there will be no freedom for either management or labor.

"Wise labor leaders and wise business managers will realize how necessary it is to their own existence to make common sacrifice for this great common cause."

October 7, in a message to the A. F. of L. convention, he said of conflict between labor groups: "This is not the time to take chances with the national safety through any stoppage of defense work or defense production."

Text of President's Address

The text of President's Roosevelt's address last night follows:

Five months ago tonight I proclaimed to the American people the existence of a state of unlimited emergency.

Since then much has happened. Our Army and Navy are temporarily in Iceland in the defense of the Western Hemisphere.

Hitler has attacked shipping in areas close to the Americas throughout the Atlantic.

Many American-owned merchant ships have been sunk on the high seas. One American destroyer was attacked on September 4. Another destroyer was attacked and hit on October 17. Eleven brave and loyal men of our Navy were killed by the Nazis.

We have wished to avoid shooting. But the shooting has started, and history has recorded who fired the first shot. In the long run, however, all that will matter is who fired the last shot.

Hitler Misjudges American Spirit

America has been attacked. The U. S. S. Kearny is not just a Navy ship. She belongs to every man, woman and child in this Nation.

Illinois, Alabama, California, North Carolina, Ohio, Louisiana, Texas, Pennsylvania, Georgia, Arkansas, New York, Virginia—those are the home States of the honored dead and wounded of the Kearny. Hitler's torpedo was directed at every American, whether he lives on our sea coasts or in the innermost part of the Nation, far from the seas and far from the guns and tanks of the marching hordes of would-be conquerors of the world.

Hitler Plans to Reorganize Americas

The purpose of Hitler's attack was to frighten the American people off the high seas—to force us to make a trembling retreat. This is not the first time he has misjudged the American spirit.

If our national policy were to be dominated by the fear of shooting, then all of our ships and those of our sister republics would have to be tied up in home harbors. Our Navy would have to remain respectfully—abjectly—behind any line which Hitler might decree on any ocean as his own dictated version of his own war zone.

Naturally we reject that absurd and insulting suggestion. We reject it because of our own self-interest, our own self-respect and our own

Chief Executive Rebuffed Twice; U. S. Steel Cuts Output Sharply

By Alfred Friendly
Post Staff Writer

Twice rebuffed by John L. Lewis, President Roosevelt last night addressed a third appeal that the mine union chief send 53,000 striking coal miners back to work and then, in his broadcast Navy Day address, declared:

"Yes, our Nation must speak from every assembly line—yes, from every coal mine—in our vast industrial machine."

Earlier, in the third letter to Lewis, the President asked for an immediate resumption of mining.

Of the defense program he said:

"It cannot be hampered by the selfish obstruction of a small but dangerous minority of industrial managers who hold out for extra profits, or for 'business as usual.' It cannot be hampered by the selfish obstruction of a small but dangerous minority of labor leaders who are a menace—for labor as a whole knows that that small minority is a menace to the true cause of labor itself, as well as to the Nation as a whole."

The declaration, loudly cheered by the President's Mayflower Hotel audience, climaxed days of efforts by the Chief Executive to induce Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, to terminate at once the strike in "captive" coal mines owned and operated by steel companies as the source of their own fuel supplies.

Steel Operations Curtailed

Serving to emphasize the urgency of the President's appeal, immediate curtailment of steel-making operations of subsidiaries of the United States Steel Corporation was announced last night by Benjamin Fairless, president of the corporation. He said operations in the Pittsburgh and Youngstown districts would have to be curtailed 20 per cent starting today, those in the Chicago district 10 per cent, and a gradual closing down, leading to complete cessation, would take place in other districts if coal was not forthcoming soon.

The President's third request to the miners' chief followed within little more than an hour a blunt rejection by Lewis to a similar appeal made by the Chief Executive on Sunday. In a letter to the President, the United Mine Workers' leader had insisted patriotism was not an issue and that his union was engaged in a controversy with "a ruthless corporation—the United States Steel Corporation" and that his "adversary" was J. P. Morgan.

"In the Interest of Defense"

Morgan, he added, would dictate to Myron C. Taylor, former chairman of the "Big Steel" board of directors, the course of action he would follow in a meeting scheduled with Lewis tomorrow.

The President replied:

"I am sorry that in your letter to me early this afternoon you have not replied to my request that, in the interest of defense of our country, the captive coal mines must be kept running.

"Whatever may be the issues between you and Mr. Taylor or you and Mr. Morgan, the large question of adequate fuel supply is of greater interest and import to the national welfare. There is every reason for the continuance of negotiations. There is no rea-

Neilson, Jury Work Overtime; Autoist Convicted

Invoking night court for a second time within a week, Judge George D. Neilson last night waited patiently until 10:45 for a Police Court jury to finish up with a case begun seven hours before.

A jury which deliberated 35 minutes found Joseph Pugh, 29, Negro, of 5326 Eastern Avenue Northeast, guilty of negligent homicide in the death of Mary J. Blake, 73, of 38 T Street Northwest, struck by Pugh's car here last Christmas Eve.

Judge Neilson thanked the jury for its overtime work and said they could return to court at 11 a. m. today, two hours later than usual.

Last Tuesday Judge Neilson held court until 2 a. m. in a move to cut down a backlog of more than 900 cases.

Tobacco Firms Found Guilty

Lexington, Ky., Oct. 27 (U.P.).—A Federal District Court jury today convicted the "big three" tobacco firms, one subsidiary and 13 officers on four counts of violating the Sherman antitrust law.

The convicted companies were the American Tobacco Co., the R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. and the Liggett & Myers Tobacco Co. They were found guilty of combination and conspiracy in restraint of trade by price fixing, monopolization of the industry, attempts to monopolize and combination and conspiracy to monopolize.

Cloudy Weather Predicted Here After Day's Rain

Washington got rain yesterday, not much but welcome withal because of its recent rarity. The outlook was not for its continuance today. Partly cloudy weather was predicted by the Weather Bureau for this morning with colder temperatures toward night. Temperatures of around 62 were forecast for this morning.

The Weather Bureau had recorded a precipitation of .06 inches at 7:30 p. m. In the surrounding counties rain fell, too, but agricultural authorities observed that a week of such rain would be required to help the pastures that are completely dried out by the long drought.

The temperature stayed consistently in the 60's yesterday.

Traffic Deaths Rise to 75 Here

The District's traffic toll rose to 75 yesterday when Phillip Loketch, 63, of 4108 Fourteenth Street Northwest, was struck and fatally injured by a street car at Fourteenth Street and New York Avenue Northwest.

In nearby Maryland, two persons were struck and killed by trains. The victims were Col. Michael A. Dailey, chief surgeon of the Third Corps Army, and Mrs. Blanche Dent, of Beltsville, Md.

Rain, fog, slippery roads and poor visibility were blamed for a score of other accidents. (Further details on page 19.)

Chamber's Approval Expected

Senate Committee Indorses Bill for 100 More D. C. Police

By Charles Mercer
Post Staff Writer

The Senate Appropriations Committee late yesterday recommended that $120,333 be drawn from District revenues to add 100 police to the District force, effective December 1.

Approval of the measure by the Senate is expected later this week.

Passage of the bill, first introduced in the House last August by Representative John J. Cochran (Democrat), of Missouri, would provide Washington with a police force of 1616 men. It approximates a number which Superintendent of Police Edward Kelly and other officials have said it essential to adequate protection here.

Under terms of the bill $103,708 would come from the District's general revenues and $16,625 from the local gasoline tax and the motor vehicles fee. This would make up the sum necessary for salaries of 100 more policemen throughout the remainder of the current fiscal year which ends June 30.

Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney (Democrat), of Wyoming, chairman of the District Appropriations subcommittee which recommended the measure to the full committee, said yesterday he had been informed that increased District revenues in the current fiscal year would easily make up for the amount subtracted

First Time on Record

Kearny Hailed for Toughness In Surviving Torpedo Hit

The Navy disclosed last night that the torpedo which struck the destroyer Kearny in Iceland waters ten days ago made a direct hit in its boiler room and that the "resulting" explosion "opened up" the side of the ship and blew out the deck and superstructure.

Undersecretary James Forrestal, who revealed details of the attack on the vessel in a Navy Day speech before the Union League Club of Philadelphia, praised the Kearny for its "toughness" in surviving the explosion.

"Insofar as I have been able to discover," he said, "there is no record of any destroyer, sustaining a direct torpedo hit in so vital a part of the ship, being able to proceed to port."

Forrestal said that the Kearny was one of the so-called "top heavy" destroyers built several years ago, which through a mistake in design had their center of gravity too high. The Navy chief cited this fact in connection with the attack and survival of the vessel, he said, in view of the "considerable controversy" which raged then as to the "soundness of design" of the ships and of their "ability to meet the tests of action."

The story of the attack on the vessel, he added, is the "highest compliment that could be paid" to the Navy's designers.

Undersecretary Forrestal also praised the work of Commander Anthony L. Danis and his crew in good faith. Freedom of the seas is now, as it has always been, the fundamental policy of this Government.

Hitler has often protested that his plans for conquest do not extend across the Atlantic Ocean. His submarines and raiders prove otherwise. So does the entire design of his new world order.

For example, I have in my possession a secret map made in Germany by Hitler's government—by the planners of the new world order. It is a map of South America and a part of Central America, as Hitler proposes to reorganize it. Today in this area there are 14 separate countries. The geographical experts of Berlin, however, have ruthlessly obliterated all existing boundary lines; and have divided South America into five vassal states, bringing the whole continent under their domination. And they have also so arranged it that the territory of one of these new puppet states includes the Republic of Panama and our great lifeline—the Panama Canal. That is his plan. It will never go into effect.

This map makes clear the Nazi design not only against South America, but against the United States itself.

Your Government has in its possession another document made in Germany by Hitler's government. It is a detailed plan, which, for obvious reasons, the Nazis did not wish to publicize just yet, but which they are ready to impose on a dominated world—if Hitler wins. It is a plan to abolish all existing religions — Protestant, Catholic, Mohammedan, Hindu, Buddhist and Jewish alike. The property of all churches will be seized by the Reich. The cross and all other symbols of religion are to be forbidden. The clergy are to be forever silenced under penalty of the concentration camp, where even now so many fearless men are being tortured because they placed God above Hitler.

God of Blood and Iron

In the place of the churches of our civilization, there is to be set up an International Nazi Church—a church which will be served by orators sent out by the Nazi government. In the place of the Bible, the words of "Mein Kampf" will be imposed and enforced as holy writ. And in place of the cross of Christ will be put two symbols—the swastika and the naked sword.

The God of Blood and Iron will take the place of the God of Love and Mercy. Let us well ponder that statement which I have made tonight.

These grim truths which I have told you of the present and future plans of Hitlerism will of course be hotly denied tomorrow in the controlled press and radio of the Axis Powers. And some Americans will continue to insist that Hitler's plans need not worry us—and that we should not concern ourselves with anything that goes on beyond rifle shot of our shores.

The protestations of these American citizens—few in number—will, as usual, be paraded with applause through the Axis press and radio during the next few days, in an effort to convince the world that the majority of Americans are opposed to their duly chosen government, and in reality are only waiting to jump on Hitler's bandwagon when it comes this way.

The motive of such Americans is not the point at issue. The fact is that Nazi propaganda continues in desperation to seize upon such isolated statements as proof of American disunity.

The Nazis have made up their own list of modern American heroes. It is, fortunately, a short list. I am glad that it does not contain my name.

All of us Americans, of all opinions, are faced with the choice between the kind of world we want to live in and the kind of world which Hitler and his hordes would impose upon us.

None of us wants to burrow under the ground and live in total darkness like a comfortable mole.

American Will Defied

The forward march of Hitlerism can be stopped—and it will be stopped.

Very simply and very bluntly—we are pledged to pull our own oar in the destruction of Hitlerism.

And when we have helped to end the curse of Hitlerism we shall help to establish a new peace which will give to decent people everywhere a better chance to live and prosper in security and in freedom and in faith.

Each day that passes we are producing and providing more and more arms for the men who are fighting on actual battlefronts. That is our primary task.

And it is the Nation's will that these vital arms and supplies of all kinds shall be neither locked up in American harbors nor sent to the bottom of the sea. It is the Nation's will that America shall deliver the goods. In open defiance of that will, our ships have been sunk and our sailors have been killed.

I say that we do not propose to take this lying down.

Our determination not to take it lying down has been expressed in the orders to the American Navy to shoot on sight. Those orders stand.

Furthermore, the House of Representatives has already voted to amend part of the Neutrality Act of 1937, today outmoded by force of violent circumstances. The Senate Committee on Foreign Relations has also recommended elimination of other hamstringing provisions in that act. That is the course of honesty and realism.

Our American merchant ships must be armed to defend themselves against the rattlesnakes of the sea.

Our American merchant ships must be free to carry our American goods into the harbors of our friends.

Our American merchant ships must be protected by our American Navy.

It can never be doubted that the goods will be delivered by this Nation, whose Navy believes in the tradition of "Damn the torpedoes; full speed ahead!"

Our national will must speak from every assembly line in our vast industrial machine. Yes, our Nation must speak from every assembly line—yes, from every coal mine—the all-inclusive whole of our vast industrial machine. Our factories and our shipyards are constantly expanding. Our output must be multiplied.

It cannot be hampered by the selfish obstruction of a small but dangerous minority of industrial managers who hold out for extra profits, or for "business as usual." It cannot be hampered by the selfish obstruction of a small but dangerous minority of labor leaders who are a menace—for labor as a whole knows that that small minority is a menace to the true cause of labor itself, as well as to the Nation as a whole.

The lines of our essential defense now cover all the seas, and to meet the extraordinary demands of today and tomorrow our Navy grows to unprecedented size. Our Navy is ready for action. Indeed, units of it in the Atlantic patrol are in action. Its officers and men need no praise from me.

Our new Army is steadily developing the strength needed to withstand the aggressors. Our soldiers of today are worthy of the proudest traditions of the United States Army. But traditions cannot shoot down dive bombers or destroy tanks. That is why we must and shall provide, for every one of our soldiers, equipment and weapons—not merely as good, but better than that of any other army on earth. And we are doing that right now.

For this—and all of this—is what we mean by total national defense.

The first objective of that defense is to stop Hitler. He can be stopped and can be compelled to dig in. And that will be the beginning of his downfall, because dictatorship of the Hitler type can live only through continuing victories—increasing conquests.

The facts of 1918 are proof that a mighty German army and a tired German people can crumble rapidly and go to pieces when they are faced with successful resistance.

"We Will Not Fail"

Nobody who admires qualities of courage and endurance can fail to be stirred by the full-fledged resistance of the Russian people. The Russians are fighting for their own soil and their own homes. Russia needs all kinds of help—planes, tanks, guns, medical supplies and other aids—toward the successful defense against the invaders. From the United States and from Britain, she is getting great quantities of those essential supplies. But the needs of her huge army will continue—and our help and British help will have to continue!

The other day the Secretary of State of the United States was asked by a Senator to justify our giving aid to Russia. His reply was: "The answer to that depends on how anxious a person is to stop and destroy the march of Hitler in his conquest of the world. If he were anxious enough to defeat Hitler, he would not worry about who was helping to defeat him."

Upon our American production falls the colossal task of equipping our own armed forces, and helping to supply the British, the Russians and the Chinese. In the performance of that task we dare not fail. And we will not fail.

It has not been easy for us Americans to adjust ourselves to the shocking realities of a world in which the principles of common humanity and common decency are being mowed down by the firing squads of the Gestapo. We have enjoyed many of God's blessings. We have lived in a broad and abundant land, and by our industry and productivity we have made it flourish.

There are those who say that our great good fortune has betrayed us—that we are now no match for the regimented masses who have been trained in the Spartan ways of ruthless brutality. They say that we have grown fat, and flabby, and lazy—and that we are doomed.

But those who say that know nothing of America or of American life.

They do not know that this land is great because it is a land of endless challenge. Our country was first populated, and it has been steadily developed, by men and women in whom there burned the spirit of adventure and restlessness and individual independence which will not tolerate oppression.

Ours has been a story of vigorous challenges which have been accepted and overcome—challenges of uncharted seas, of wild forests and desert plains, of raging floods and withering drought, of foreign tyrants and domestic strife, of staggering problems—social, economical and physical; and we have come out of them the most powerful nation—and the freest—in all of history.

Today in the face of this newest and greatest challenge, we Americans have cleared our decks and taken our battle stations. We stand ready in the defense of our Nation and the faith of our fathers to do what God has given us the power to see as our full duty.

The President's Day

By International News Service

PEP TALK: Briskly at 10 a. m., sharp, the Congressional Big Four, Vice President Wallace, Senators Barkley and Connally and Representative McCormack one-stepped into the President's office for those last-minute orders, the final pep talk and the ringside admonitions. Big Tom Connally departed first with the job of opening the neutrality debate and carrying his right high. The Congressional seconds followed solemnly after, brimming with Presidential key-words and shorthand advice.

RETREAT: Signally for Maj. Gen. Edwin (Pa) Watson, Mr. Roosevelt gave notice that he wanted the barriers thrown up, the door to his office locked and the key conveniently swallowed for the day. Last night's speech began the last mile in polishing and sharpening. Dependable, editorial Judge Sammy Rosenman joined the President on request, and together they curried and whittled, added and subtracted, rounded and slimmed the all-important 20 minutes of words into a shining sheath of prose—ready for the market.

HANDSHAKE: After lunching in the blind-grab fashion off a tray at his desk, with one hand tearing down and reassembling the Navy Day address with the other, the President finally heeded an interruption. Mrs. Roosevelt had invited the National Youth Association delegates over for tea and talk, wanted Mr. Roosevelt to shake them by the hand. The NYAers began clustering in the executive office lobby at 1:30 p. m., Mr. Roosevelt let the secretariat swing wide the gates at 2, shook their hands, said a few words, smiled and nodded, nodded and smiled as they were shepherded outward. Later Social Security Administrators Paul V. McNutt released the letter from the President suggesting consolidation of NYA and CCC.

THE AFFAIR of the letters between John L. Lewis and Franklin Delano Roosevelt clipped on another chapter on the dot of 4:12 in the afternoon. Mr. Roosevelt, who had sent a letter to Lewis at his home in Alexandria, via Presidential staffer William Hassett Sunday night, had received a reply. Mr. Roosevelt was thinking over a reply to the reply with the idea of replying immediately. At 6 on the dot Mr. Roosevelt replied—in spades.

DEMI-TASSE AND CATERER'S BOMB: After an early, none-too-gay dinner at the White House, the President bowed out on the little knot of guests, slipped into his raincoat and fedora, moved outward through the White House gates in the secret-serviced limousine to the Mayflower Hotel. Scheduled to speak at 10, the President planned things to include a demi-tasse, black, and a few words with friends at the speakers' table before going on the air.

Stark Says Navy Assures U. S. Survival

By the United Press

Chicago, Oct. 27.—Admiral Harold R. Stark, chief of naval operations, declared tonight that the readiness to use armed force—"especially naval might"—is the only assurance the United States and other democracies have to survive "the maelstrom into which the world has descended."

"The most certain way of suffering the destruction of war would be through timidity, weakness and shrinking within our shell," he told a Navy Day banquet here. "We should choose the opposite course as the best means of obtaining justice for ourselves."

Noting that President Roosevelt has clearly stated that Americans are determined to protect their rights and principles, Stark said that "the Navy follows him with complete loyalty and energy."

The carrying out of Mr. Roosevelt's "shoot first" orders, Stark continued, means that vessels of any nation which would deny the freedom of the seas policy will be attacked.

Walsh Thinks Navy Is In No Position for War

Boston, Oct. 27 (AP).—Senator David I. Walsh (Democrat), Massachusetts, declared today that the Navy is not in a position to wage a foreign war.

In an address prepared for a Navy Day observance on Boston Common, the chairman of the Senate Naval Affairs Committee said:

"Proud as we are of our superb Navy, I should issue a warning to my fellow countrymen. It is that our Navy and air force of today has not been designed, is not trained and is not nearly ready to wage war effectively on foreign lands; and it is not within our power or means to create naval establishments of sufficient strength to police the entire world. We can unquestionably maintain a Navy that will keep us safe from invasions and assure peace and prosperity for our people."

Knox Calls for Repeal Of Neutrality Act

Detroit, Oct. 27 (U.P.).—Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox today urged repeal of the Neutrality Act, charging the act imperils the security of the United States and jeopardizes the safety of those nations fighting Germany.

At a naval and total defense day celebration, the secretary pointed out that neutrality has disappeared and that security is the only thing for which nations can strive.

"We neither think nor act neutral in the present war," he said. "It is only honest to make our laws consistent with our action."

The secretary said the Navy's combatant ships now in commission total 346, with 345 more under construction or under contract, for a grand total of 691 ships. The auxiliary fleet, he said, numbers 323 ships with a prospective addition of 209 ships. Knox said the Navy now has built and in commission 208 auxiliaries, has converted 118 more peace-time ships into auxiliaries, has 180 more on the ways, and has 29 auxiliaries in process of conversion.

He revealed that "the air arm of the fleet on October 1 of this year comprised 4,535 planes on hand, with 5,832 being built." He said the Navy was aiming at a goal of 17,000 trained pilots for naval aviation and that at the end of this year, there would be 6,000 trained pilots, with 4,000 more in training.

Four battleships will be completed in 1946, when the two-ocean Navy of 691 combatant vessels of 3,491,865 tons will be all ready for action. He said that speed-up efforts have made it possible to set November, 1946, as the competion date for the entire program "or a year ahead of the most optimistic date that the shipbuilders were willing to accept as their deadline."

The naval air service now consists of 5100 planes and 6100 pilots, Forrestal disclosed, and is aiming at a goal of 15,000 planes and 25,000 pilots, 12,000 of the latter being in reserve. Of the 5100 planes on hand, 2270 are "useful combatant types," he added.

bringing the torpedoed vessel to port. The new destroyer, according to an official Navy announcement was attacked by a submarine, "undoubtedly German," southwest of Iceland, October 17.

Facts on Program

The Undersecretary also disclosed some facts and figures on warship and airplane building. He said that the Navy would complete 31 combatant ships this calendar year, and that it expected to put 98 fighting vessels in service in 1942, 132 in 1943, 79 in 1944 and 24 in 1945.

'The Shooting Has Started,' Roosevelt Declares of the Western Hemisphere and obliteration of existing religions will be "hotly denied" by the Axis powers today. And, he continued, although the documents in the hands of the American Government make "clear the Nazi design not only against South America but against the United States itself," some Americans will continue to deny that Hitler's plans are any concern to us.

Striking at these opponents of his foreign policy, the President said that their words are employed to further Nazi ends by the propaganda experts of the Reich.

"The Nazis have made up their own list of modern American heroes," he added. "It is, fortunately, a short list. I am glad that it does not contain my name."

Nazis in Pulpits

The plan to abolish all religions—Protestant, Catholic, Mohammedan, Hindu, Buddhist and Jewish alike—would be imposed on a Nazi-dominated world if Hitler won, Mr. Roosevelt said. The property of all churches would be seized, the cross and other symbols of religion forbidden and Nazi orators would take the place of the clergy, he asserted.

Mein Kampf will supplant the Bible and "be imposed and enforced as Holy Writ," the President declared, while the "swastika and the naked sword" will replace the cross of Christ.

Mr. Roosevelt told the world that the "forward course of Hitlerism can be stopped—and it will be stopped."

Germany Can Crumble

Hitler "can only live through continuing victories," and once stopped and "compelled to dig in," his days are numbered, the President said.

"The facts of 1918 are proof," he added, "that a mighty German army and a tired German people can crumble rapidly and go to pieces when they are faced with successful resistance."

Once the United States has "helped to end the curse of Hitlerism," the President declared, "we shall help to establish a new peace which will give to decent people everywhere a better chance to live and prosper in security and in freedom and in faith."

"We Stand Ready"

The attacks on American merchantmen and warships, President Roosevelt said, were intended by Hitler to "frighten the American people off the high seas." The United States "naturally" has rejected the Nazis' demand that we keep our ships "abjectly" in our harbors or behind a line dictated by them, he added.

The President also rejected the suggestion that American prosperity has made us too soft and flabby to oppose "the Spartan ways of ruthless brutality."

"Today, in the face of this newest and greatest challenge," he concluded, "we Americans have cleared our decks and taken our battle stations. We stand ready in the defense of our Nation and the faith of our fathers to do what God has given us the power to see as our full duty."

Roosevelt Talk May Aid Action On Neutrality

By the Associated Press

Senator Pepper (Democrat), of Florida, last night expressed belief that President Roosevelt's Navy Day speech would hasten revision of the Neurality Act.

"The President's speech was an eloquent address which clearly demonstrated to the American people the necessity for arming our merchant ships and letting them sail to the ports of our friends," he said.

Representative Martin (Republican), of Massachusetts, House Minority Leader, declined to comment, saying he had not heard the speech.

Senator Van Nuys (Democrat), Indiana—"I don't know anything about any secret maps, but all the military experts agree that it is silly to believe Hitler could invade this continent. There might possibly be some sporadic bombings along the coast of South America, but there is no necessity for us to get into this thing. I have no fear that Hitler will invade America, despite the inflamatory statements of some persons who would like to see us involved in the war."

Senator Glass (Democrat), Virginia)—"I don't know how many votes the President's address will affect, but I know that I am going to vote for the bill which gives our ships the freedom of the seas."

Representative Luther A. Johnson (Democrat), Texas—"It was calculated to arouse the patriotic fervor of the American people more than any speech he has yet delivered and to intensify the determination of the American people that Hitler shall be destroyed."

Chairman Bloom (Democrat), New York, of the House Foreign Affairs Committee—"The President expressed the views and hopes of the majority of the American people."

Static Spoils Berlin Reception

Berlin (Tuesday), Oct. 28 (AP).—Atmospheric interference made it virtually impossible to hear President Roosevelt's radio address here. Authorities who could be reached in the early morning hours declined comment, apparently waiting for word from higher-ups.

Senator Davis Marks Birthday

Senator James J. Davis (Republican), of Pennsylvania, yesterday celebrated his sixty-eighth birthday with a luncheon given by members of the Pennsylvania Congressional delegation in the offices of House Minority Leader Joseph W. Martin, Jr.

Numerous messages of congratulations, including a letter from Secretary of the Navy Knox, poured into his office. His secretary said he was not observing the anniversary apart from his regular routine except by dining with his children last night.

War Sidelights

Crash Kills Nazi Who Fled Canada

Berlin, Oct. 27—((INS))—Major Baron Franz von Werra, Luftwaffe ace who escaped from a Canadian prison camp and made his way back to Germany to rejoin his fighter squadron, was reported tonight to have been injured fatally in a plane crash.

No details were released.

[Von Werra created an international furore last winter when he escaped from a Canadian prison camp and crossed the St. Lawrence River to the United States.

[Held by American authorities for illegal entry, Von Werra jumped his bail bond and fled. It was reported he proceeded to a South American port and thence back to Germany.]

Hitler Hides Scar

Los Angeles, Oct. 27 (INS).—Hitler's familiar hanging forelock hides an ugly scar on his forehead, Carleton Smith, music editor and author, said tonight.

Smith, who attended the Bayruth Music Festival with Hitler in 1933, said:

"Hitler probably got the wound in street fighting during the early days before he came to power."

Invasion Rehearsal

Istanbul, Oct. 27—(AP)—Travelers from northern Poland reported today that German forces there are being put through intensive training in rehearsal for invasion of England.

The Germans have gathered great barges powered with obsolete airplane motors all along the coast of the Baltic Sea and the Gulf of Danzig, the travelers said, and every day German soldiers practice debarking from these craft, swimming in full equipment and protecting themselves from air and sea attack while on the barges. Many thousands of soldiers are engaged in such maneuvers, according to this report.

Famed Stables Sold

Berlin, Oct. 27 (AP).—The racing stable of Baron Edouard De Rothschild, famous French banker, was auctioned Saturday at Neuilly at the government's request, the Strassburger Zeitung reported today.

It said eight horses "of the best breed" were sold for 618,000 francs (about $14,200) and the proceeds devoted to French winter relief. Six horses which remained, the newspaper added, are to be sold next week.

Grand Mufti Given Refuge By Italians

By the Associated Press

Rome, Oct. 27—Haj Amin Effendi Al Husseini, exiled grand mufti of Jerusalem, who long has been a fugitive from the British, took refuge in Italy today and it was authoritatively indicated he would carry on from here his anti-British activity among Moslems with the encouragement of Premier Mussolini, self-styled "protector of Islam."

The Fascists expected the mufti, who fled from Iran when the British occupied that country two months ago, to serve as a strong propagandist among the Arabs, whose sympathies Rome long has sought.

The Arab leader's presence in Rome was disclosed as Count Galeazzo Ciano, Italy's foreign minister, discussed with Adolf Hitler how best to use the Axis gains in Russia.

A radio broadcast from Bari hailed the mufti's "fight against Anglo-Jewish domination and exploitation" in the Near East, and said: "With the aid of God, the victory of the Arabs is certain and Italy is happy to be able to collaborate in achieving the national hopes of the Arab world."

Virginio Gayda, the authoritative Fascist editor, claimed there was "a growing insurrectional spirit of the Arab and Moslem populations extending from Palestine to Iran," and that new ferment is arising in India.

The editor said the Axis powers were determined "to use favorable political occasions against British imperialism everywhere possible."

The Fascist regime already has subjugated the Arabs of Libya. Today in Bengasi the cadi, or magistrate, of that Libyan city was received by Italian officials and read a message pledging the Moslems' "unchangeable attachment to the Fascist government."

Gayda indicated Axis hopes of gaining new political converts in Turkey and throughout the Near East, once Russia is beaten, and said Count Ciano was discussing a new diplomatic move with Hitler. Observers thought this might involve Turkey's entrance into the Axis program.

Need 'Few Firm Roads' for Victory, Berlin Explains

Copyright by New York Times

Berlin, Oct. 27.—Continued downpours of rain on the central front before Moscow today were given by an official German spokesman as grounds for the slowing down of German operations there, as well as for the failure of the Germany army to "liquidate the last remnants of the Red army."

The latter statement was made in explanation of the fact that the Russians are still unconquered, although their doom was portended more than two weeks ago in a speech made in Berlin by the Nazi press chief, Dr. Otto Dietrich. The spokesman said:

"You can be sure it is not the resistance of the Soviet soldiers that is holding us up. All the German army needs in order to liquidate the last remnants of the Red army are a few firm roads."

Recent Gains Hard-Won

The official German news agency, however, today reports local German successes in the past few days have resulted in the breaking up of Russian defenses "on a broad front." These messages refer to Soviet resistance as "extremely bitter" and state German gains were often won in violent hand-to-hand clashes.

At one point west of Moscow, it is asserted, a German division took a string of Soviet bunkers guarding eight bridges and then occupied the bridges as well, after encounters with Red soldiers who had been assigned to explode them.

At another point, according to these reports, a German infantry regiment advanced in a driving rain to within 800 yards of a strongly fortified Soviet position and held out in the marshy land under fire from Russian bunkers all night long. During the night, it is said, panzer units came forward and yesterday morning two units broke through the Russian defenses and succeeded in rolling up a line of fortifications.

Saturday Success Related

Numerous Soviet counterthrusts, strongly supported by artillery and tanks are admitted but are said to have failed in their purpose. On Saturday alone, it is said, 4000 Russian prisoners were made and 10 tanks and 87 cannon were captured or destroyed as a result of these assaults. On Sunday, it is claimed, another 13 Red tanks were taken.

Gains Claimed in South

On the southern front further German progress is claimed but no place names are revealed. For the first time in weeks, a D. N. B. message declares, Germans in the south ran into the resistance of elite troops described as "dispersed remnants" of Marshal Semyon Budyenny's best armies. The agency report continues:

"In bitter fighting the German troops broke the resistance of the Soviet forces who had taken positions in houses, trees and bushes. The remains of this Soviet division were mopped up in hand-to-hand fighting. One Soviet company resisted especially bitterly. Excepting a few who were captured, the entire company was destroyed."

Also on the southern front the Germans claim to have occupied two burning bridges and extinguished the fires, although under bombardment by Red artillery. As before Moscow, the Red troops in the south made counterattacks which likewise are said to have failed to halt the Germans.

Raids by the Luftwaffe on railways around Rostov on the Don continued yesterday and a number of trains are said to have been set afire, but there are as yet no German reports about ground fighting in the Rostov area.

In the Leningrad area, continued counterattacks by the Russians and continued bombardment by German artillery and the Nazi air force are reported. Of Leningrad's air raid defenses, one German report reveals "it is much stronger than what German fliers have experienced over England or anywhere else since the beginning of the war."

Picking of Jury In Sedition Trial Nearly Finished

Minneapolis, Oct. 27 (AP).—Most of the work of selecting a jury to try 28 persons on charges of seditious conspiracy against the Government was completed in Federal Court here today, the opening day of the trial, with indications the task will end tomorrow and presentation of evidence will start.

Questioning of 27 prospective jurors by Judge M. M. Joyce resulted in excusing of seven, leaving 20 persons to undergo final elimination Tuesday. With the defense reported to have already exercised nine out of its 10 challenges and the Government planning to use only one of its six, expectations were that the jury box will be filled tomorrow.

The defendants are mostly members or former members of the Socialist Workers Party and include several leaders of the old General Drivers Union 544, A. F. of L., now affiliated with C. I. O. 544.

Japanese, Red Troops Clash

By the Associated Press

Shanghai, Oct. 27.—A raid by 20 Japanese soldiers across the tensely patrolled Soviet-Japanese Far Eastern frontier, precipitating a clash in which both sides suffered casualties, was reported today by the official Soviet news agency, Tass.

Japanese officials here said they had no information of such a clash, which Tass said occurred four days ago.

The Russian account said the Japanese apparently were trying to take prisoners. (Such a raid might be to gain information on Russian border dispositions.) After fighting with Russian patrols the Japanese had to withdraw, taking their wounded with them but leaving caps, rifles and cartridges behind, Tass declared.

Strong Japanese reinforcements have been reported moving into northern and eastern Manchukuo as military circles and other factions in Japan have called for action against Russia in the Far East if the Red armies collapse before the Germans.

The brief Tass report placed the scene of the clash on Chertnova Mountain near the "border village of Raskino." Neither name appears on available maps, but the locality referred to was believed here to be along the poorly defined Soviet-Japanese frontier near the point where the borders of Siberia, Manchukuo and Korea come together.

(It was near this point, south of the big Soviet port of Vladivostok, that a pitched battle of several weeks was fought between Japanese and Soviet troops at Changkufeng in 1938. At various other points along the Siberian-Manchukuan and Siberian-Korean borders there have been recurrent clashes in the past 10 years.)

Advices from Foochow said today that the Japanese had withdrawn their naval garrison from Sharp Peak Island, a nearby coastal point. Foochow is about 400 miles south of Shanghai, approximately halfway to Hongkong and opposite the island of Formosa, and is at the mouth of the River Min, which flows through Fukien Province.

Neutral authorities here reported the Japanese are promoting a separatist movement in the South China provinces of Kwangtung, Kwangsi and Yunnan, which at present are especially important to Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek in his fight against the Japanese.

There have been no indications that the movement, being pushed through the Japanese-dominated Nanking government of Premier Wang Cing-wei, has had any important success.

143 Die in Revolt Against Serbs

Zagreb, Croatia, Oct. 27 (AP).—A newspaper dispatch from Belgrade tonight said 143 persons described as Communists had been killed and 89 captured in a two-day battle against the regular Serbian troops in Sumadien Province of dismembered Yugoslavia.

The Communists were said to have held positions in hills and woods in the area where they had stored a great quantity of military equipment.

In Osijek, near the Hungarian frontier, 15 persons also described as Communists, including two women, were executed.

Order for Guns Seen for Russia

By the Associated Press

The War Department contracted yesterday for several hundred thousand rifles and large stores of other weapons believed to be destined for eventual use on the Russian or other war fronts.

Three arms manufacturers received orders totaling approximately 46 million dollars for rifles. On the basis of part costs, the sum would purchase more than 500,000 weapons.

They were understood to be Springfield or Lee-Enfields.

Russian Infantry Told to Stop Tanks or Die to Save Moscow; Soviet Says Nazi Morale Is Breaking; Admits Rostov's Peril

By the Associated Press

Kuibyshev, Russia, Oct. 27.—A German advance 15 miles beyond Maloyarslavets—an area of weeks of fighting—to a point only 50 miles below Moscow on the Nara River was indicated tonight in military dispatches which reported that Soviet counter attacks subsequently had driven the invaders back across the stream.

The Nara joins the Oka River at Serpukhov, a city of 77,000 almost directly south of Miscow, and Soviet advices spoke of the heaviest of all the increasingly violent actions as raging on the Russian left wing in that vicinity.

Great battles are raging on the fronts before Moscow and in the Donets Basin, but Adolf Hitler's troops appear to be "on the verge of exhaustion," the latest communique from Moscow declared.

Morale Deteriorating

The communique said that during the past 20 days there had been "a sharp deterioration in the physical condition and the morale" of the invading Germans.

(The Soviets mentioned Mozhaisk, 57 miles west of Moscow, the industrial Donets Basin city of Kharkov and Taganrog, 30 miles west of Rostov on the Black Sea as the locale of fierce fighting.

(A Tass broadcast earlier quoted the Information Bureau as saying that the guns and bombs of the Red air fleet had destroyed almost a full infantry battalion and 28 tanks near Kharkov, and had inflicted heavy losses on two infantry regiments in the Mozhaisk sector, where at least 500 Germans were wiped out.)

Continued heavy action also was reported about Maloyaroslavets, itself, 65 miles southwest of Moscow, the base of the new German salient.

The Red armies, under injunction of the supreme commander of the center, Gen. Gregory K. Zhukov, to hold or die, were beating at this supreme German thrust with artillery barrages and infantry counterattacks.

"Not a step back! Halt the Fascists! Don't let them reach Moscow!"

"Every man must fight like ten!

"Cowards and panic mongers must be destroyed ruthlessly as traitors to the fatherland!"

Thus read the order from Khukov's headquarters.

Men Against Tanks

Everywhere, the Germans were hurling forward lengthening columns of infantry and tanks supported by bombers; the Russian command was gambling principally upon cannon and the raw courage of foot troops.

Fresh Nazi troops were reported moving up to the line by the tens of thousands.

While the great struggle for Moscow thus thundered on inconclusively, the Soviet's imminent peril was clear before Rostov in the far south, and here in this auxiliary capital of Kuibyshev the Soviet leadership was urgently occupied with the organization of a vast new alternative war plant east of the Urals.

Military advices had made plain that the Germans were beating powerfully at Rostov's approaches and upon the gates to the Crimean Peninsula.

Against the disaster inherent in the possible loss of the great industrial and coal-producing Donets Basin and of the lower stretches of the Don valley, Soviet technicians were declared already feverishly at work in distant areas.

Kuznets Output Speeded

The order for top speed production went to the Kuznets Basin, far to the east in Siberia. There, said official accounts, the daily average of coal mined last month was 2043 tons more than in June.

The production in the Kuznets area of iron ore, manganese and nonferrous metals, all prime military necessities, was said already to have mounted to 40 per cent above peacetime totals.

Moreover, factories evacuated from the Moscow industrial area were said to be now in operation in the Ural Mountains. In perhaps one of the most rapid instances of industrial retreat and remobilization in history, one such plant was claimed to have been reassembled six days after its arrival at the new site and, it was asserted, was producing as of tonight at a rate five times higher than in June.

There Will Always Be a Russia, Halifax Asserts

New York, Oct. 27 (INS).—Declaring "there will always be a Russia," Lord Halifax, British Ambassador, tonight called on the United States for all possible aid to stem the Nazi avalanche in Europe.

Viscount Halifax, who with Joseph E. Davies, former American Ambassador to Moscow, headed a list of prominent speakers at a Russian war relief rally, said the Russian spirit is unflinching and that for every yard of ground they are compelled to yield, they are exacting a murderous price from their invaders.

"Whatever may be the outcome of the present battle, one thing is claer: there will always be a Russia fortified, sustained and preserved by the devotion of her people."

Pelley Freed In $10,000 Bail

Asheville, N. C., Oct. 27 (AP).—William Dudley Pelley, 51, organizer of the Silver Shirts of America, was released from jail here under $10,000 bond.

He had been in jail since Friday, after losing an appeal to the United States Supreme Court in his battle against extradition to North Carolina from the District of Columbia.

Pelley must appear in Superior Court here December 15. He was convicted in 1935 of violating the State securities law. A two-year sentence was suspended on payment of a fine and on condition of "good behavior."

Two years ago Judge Zeb V. Nettles issued a capias on the grounds that he violated conditions of the suspended sentence.

EVENING CLOTHES
by HART SCHAFFNER & MARX

Funny how lots of men, when they want to look their dressiest, put on their oldest clothes! They figure that because they don't wear dress clothes as often as they do business clothes that a dinner jacket or a tailcoat will last nearly a lifetime. That's true . . . they will last!
What these same men don't figure is that Old Man Time is constantly getting in a double-play . . . one, on style . . . and two, on their figures. If you've had your present tailcoat (or dinner jacket for that matter) for more than three years it's pretty outdated by now. It's time you treated yourself to a new tailcoat or dinner jacket. And we'd like to introduce you to the smartest "night clothes" in town, exclusive at Raleigh.

2-Way Thrust At Suez Canal Held Likely

By the Associated Press

London, Oct. 27.—Increasing indications were seen tonight that British armies in the Middle East, ready for possible action against the Germans in the Caucasus, might be forced at the same time to oppose a two-way German thrust at the Suez Canal.

Some quarters expressed the belief such a Suez drive would topple Turkey from the fence and broaden the whole amphitheater of the war.

Only scraps of news reached London from the Russian front but reliable sources said these seemed to indicate:

1—The Germans were increasing their pressure toward the southeast obviously with the hope of taking Rostov on the Don, driving across the Caspian land bridge to Astrakhan on the Caspian Sea and moving south against the big oil ports of Batum and Baku.

2—Bad weather, along with stiffened Russian resistance, was slowing at least temporarily the German march toward Moscow from the Mozhaisk region where fighting was so near the Soviet capital that the guns could be heard in Red Square.

3—Russians in the Kalinin sector apparently have blunted the northern claw of the German pincer around the capital.

One source said that if Axis forces were able to mop up the Crimea and establish themselves firmly along the north shores of the Black Sea Hitler's next move probably would be to "swing through Turkey toward Suez from Russia at the same time as Axis forces in North Africa moved toward the canal from Libya."

There was increasing talk that British forces would make a fighting stand—perhaps actually alongside Red army units—against a German attack on the Caucasus.

(Neutral military sources in Iran said Gen. Sir Archibald Wavell had there and in Iraq 60,000 Indian troops alone which could be sent to the Caucasus.

Million Men Ready

(Altogether Britain has been reported to have a million men in North Africa and the Middle East, but much of this force would be required for the defense of Egypt from the west.)

("The Russians have reduced their garrisons throughout northern Iran and sent the troops back into the Caucasus," a British military spokesman at Teheran said. "Our forces haven't followed them there yet. But somewhere—in Moscow, London or Tiflis where we've had a military mission during most of the Russian-German War—the plans must have been laid for a joint defense of the Caucasus.")

"It is the Caucasus," one source declared, "that holds the key to the rich oil fields, the key to one of the doors of India, the key to blocking one route of supply to Russia, and one key to Suez."

He added that the mountains themselves form "very formidable barriers, poorly served by roads and capable of being held by a comparatively small force."

U. S.-Made Planes Reaching Teheran

Teheran, Iran, Oct. 27 (AP).—American-made warplanes are reaching this area in increasing numbers, but, Russian sources said today, no deliveries of military equipment have yet been made to the Red army by the British across Iran.

"Considerable quantities of cotton, jute and other raw materials have been trucked to us from the Persian Gulf and should be useful to our factories in the Caucasus," they said, but declared that actual military equipment had not yet been sent over Iranian routes.

Marine Sergeant's Daughter Holds 14 Medals for Shooting

ADMIRES HER MEDALS—Audrey Richard, 13, won five medals in a rifle match at Quantico (Va.) Marine Base

Audrey Richard, 13-year-old Macfarland Junior High School student who walked out of Quantico Saturday with five medals after a match against all comers, explained yesterday that she owes it all to daddy.

He is Gunner Sergt. Frank M. Richard, of the Marine Corps, who set about training his schoolgirl daughter to shoot and made a bang-up job of it.

Audrey, a strong girl, now has 14 medals for expert shooting. She thinks a steady hand, a true eye and good nerves generally have something to do with it, but mostly she credits good training. That's where her daddy helped. He showed her how the Marines shoot.

He took her to Camp Perry twice and let her try those ranges and enrolled her with the National Capital Club. She went about as mascot of the Marine Reserves team. When not on the range he was rehearsing her in sighting at home. She had never shot in competition anything other than a .22-caliber until Saturday, when, entering the free-for-all at Quantico, she picked up the .30-caliber rifle to win in the 300-yard, two 200-yard matches and the 1000-yard contests. She won another medal as high scoring lady in the contest. She scored second in the 600-yard match.

She lives here at 4027 Thirteenth Street Northwest.

E. W. Harris, Arlington, won the title as military rifle champion of Virginia with a 226 score out of 250. Second place went to A. W. Philbrick, Portsmouth, score 222, and third place went to Dr. E. L. Corey, University of Virginia, score 220.

Sergt. John Madero, Fredericksburg Company 104, won the State championship of the Virginia Protective Force with a 198 out of 250. Second place in the State C. P. F. championship went to Vance Saunders, Suffolk Company 24, score 197; third was Walter J. Bell, Fredericksburg Company 104, score 181.

T. B. Gresham, Lynchburg, won first place at 600 yards slow fire with telescopic sights with a perfect score of 40. Dr. Corey took first place with metallic sight rifles, shooting 47.

Winner on the 1000-yard range with metallic sights was W. W. Stalnaker, Portsmouth, with 45. At 200 yards standing first honors went to Dale Duncan, Arlington, with 47 out of a possible 50.

The tournament was sponsored by the Marine Corps rifle detachment, commanded by Capt. George O. Van Orden, and the Virginia Rifle and Revolver Club, of which John Stack, Hampton, is president.

Lieut. Bush Dies At Naval Hospital

Lieut. Aaron Bush, U. S. Naval Reserve, died in the Naval Hospital here Saturday, the Navy Department announced yesterday. He was 38 years old and was on duty at the Naval Research Laboratory in Anacostia when taken ill.

Born November 27, 1903, in London, England, he was educated at the University of Georgia, where he received his B. S. degree in electrical engineering in 1923, and at Columbia University, where he completed a postgraduate course in electrical engineering in 1925. On June 5, 1941, he entered Bowdoin College for instruction in the radio school and on August 21 went on duty at the research laboratory.

He was the son of Jacob Bush, Athens, Ga.

American Pilot Downs 2 of 6 Nazi Planes

By International News Service

London, Oct. 27.—Pilot Officer C. W. McColpin, an American with the Eagle Squadron, today shot down two German fighters in single-handed combat with six Messerschmitts, emerging tonight as the hero of a day of widespread air attacks and duels over the French, Belgian and Dutch coastal areas.

Seven Nazi planes, including two flying boats and five fighters, met destruction during morning and afternoon sorties across the English Channel and the North Sea, the Air Ministry announced tonight, admitting the loss of 11 British planes consisting of two Blenheim bombers and nine fighters.

Raided Cities Include Nantes

Some of Britain's new and powerful Hurricane fighters, mounting four cannon, participated in the offensive sweeps that struck at Nazi ships and "invasion" barges as well as land objectives.

Several German gun positions were silenced, a gasometer blown up and factories damaged by British bombs, aerial cannon and machine gun fire, said the air ministry which added that one formation of Blenheims inflicted damage on a Nazi supply convoy off the Dutch coast. The two bombers were lost in this action.

The daytime assaults followed night raids by "many squadrons" of British planes over northwest Germany, where the battered ports of Hamburg and Bremen were the chief targets, against docks and ships at Cherbourg, Egersund and Nantes and against airdromes in northern France. Four R. A. F. bombers were lost during the night.

The 28-year-old McColpin, of Los Angeles, was flying over northern France in a formation of three American-piloted planes in the afternoon when he became separated from his fellow-fliers by a sudden rain squall.

Dives on Six Nazis

The other pilots swung back to return home, but McColpin flew on and upon reaching clear skies encountered the six Messerschmitts flying 500 feet above the ground.

He maneuvered his plane into position, then dived at the Nazi squadron.

One Messerschmitt blew up, McColpin related, and a second one plummeted to earth in flames.

The other four Messerschmitt pilots were too surprised by McColpin's bold attack to catch up with their assailant. The American flier wheeled around and made off as fast as his Spitfire would take him. So fast did he travel that he caught up with his two squadron companions before landing safely at his home base.

Petain Issues Labor Charter; Strikes Barred

Copyright by New York Times

Vichy, Oct. 27.—Marshal Petain's labor charter heralded for months as the cornerstone of his national revolution, was published in the official tournal today.

It appeared after last minute alterations of a text which has been under discussion by a committee of the national council since February.

The charter makes no pretension of creating a corporative state, or even of setting down rigid rules for relations between capital and labor. It establishes instead a general system for professional organizations and the principles and spirit in which production is to be organized under the new regime.

Strikes Prohibited

Aimed at establishing social peace, the charter proclaims "the lockout and the strike are and will remain prohibited."

The charter sets down the principle that wages shall be paid in accordance with the social value of the job executed. It provides for arbitration of all types of disputes within the structure of a state superintended professional organization. Labor unions are not abolished, but retained locally, regionally and nationally.

They are restricted, however, to organization within the single professions or industries and are "strictly excluded from all political or confessional activity."

This provision is important since the now abolished General Confederation of Labor was accused of having exerted great influence over the government of Leon Blum. There still exist labor organizations which openly profess religious affiliations.

Committee Basis of System

The employers, workers, employes, technicians and administrative services will be organized professionally but the foundation of the whole system is in the mixed social committees in which employers, workers and employes will be equally represented.

The committee will include a government commissioner and will have powers to fix wages, establish working hours and contracts, deal with all employment and dismissals as well as health and social security. The government will act as last court of appeal.

This type of organization is prescribed for all establishments employing more than 100 workers which means about 7,100 organizations in all. The bulk of France's partisanship and industry remains in some 540,000 small industries employing less than 100 workers each. These artisans will have a special section in the union organization of each industry in accordance with their members in the profession.

Nazis Reprieve 100 Hostages to Give French Time to Find Officers' Assassins

By International News Service

Vichy, Oct. 27.—To give the French people another chance to find assassins of two Nazi officers, Germany tonight postponed for an unstated period the reprisal execution of an additional 100 hostages at Nantes and Bordeaux.

The additional hostages were scheduled to go before firing squads, beginning with 50 at Nantes after midnight tonight and 50 at Bordeaux after midnight Wednesday.

In Paris, Gen. Otto von Stulpnagel, Nazi commander in chief for occupied France, explained the postponements were "to give opportunity to the population to help discover the culpable persons" who assassinated the German commandant at Nantes and a Nazi major at Bordeaux last week.

Vichy Grateful

Von Stulpnagel communicated his decision to the French government in Vichy, where authoritative sources said the German authorities had "taken into account the deep emotions of the French people," aroused by the execution of 50 hostages at Nantes and another 50 at Bordeaux last week, though the persons shot admittedly had no specific connections with the assassinations.

A Vichy government spokesman, however, declined to state whether the German overseers had taken into account Saturday's condemnations by President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill of the Nazi method of reprisal shootings.

The French government had no comment on Mr. Roosevelt's statement.

Concerning Gen. Charles de Gaulle's radio call to the people of France to stage a five-minute "standstill" Friday in protest against Nazi executions, the Vichy government spokesman observed:

"The government wishes to ignore completely the radio statements of Monsieur de Gaulle."

Previously, Von Stulpnagle announced that three more Frenchmen had been shot for "illegal possession of arms"—a charge that has sent dozens before firing squads in the last few weeks.

U. S. Demonstration Of Sympathy Urged

Sacramento, Calif., Oct. 27 (AP).—A minute of silence throughout America was suggested to President Roosevelt today by Gov. Culbert L. Olson as a manifestation of sympathy to the French people over German executions of civilians.

The governor, in a telegram, urged the President to issue a proclamation calling upon sympathizers with the subjugated French people to stand at attention for one minute at 10 a. m. (Eastern Standard Time) next Friday.

The time coincides with the start of a five minute period urged upon the French by Gen. Charles de Gaulle, head of the Free French forces in Africa, as an anti-German manifestation.

U. S. Launches Sub Grouper

Groton, Conn., Oct. 27 (AP).—This marine town celebrated Navy Day with the launching of another submarine for the United States Navy—the six million dollar Grouper.

The Grouper was launched at the yards of the Electric Boat Co., which has ten other underseas craft under construction.

Its sponsor was Mrs. Albert T. Church, of Annapolis, Md., wife of the rear admiral. It is 300 feet and 1450 tons.

Advance Gifts Unit of Chest To Report Today

The advance gifts unit volunteers of the Community Chest will meet today for their second report meeting at 12:30 p. m. in the Willard Hotel, E. N. Lewis, secretary of the unit said yesterday.

Audited results of the first report meeting held last week, according to Lewis, show section M leading with 40.87 per cent of the quota attained. John E. Parker is chairman of this group.

Second place was section C, led by Mrs. Charles A. Goldsmith, with 35.87 per cent of quota; third place was held by Section F, under Frank Jelleff, with 22.75 of its quota, while section E, Lloyd B. Wilson and H. L. Rust, jr., cochairmen, stood in fourth place with 19.41 per cent. At the meeting today a large score board will show the new ratings as the gifts are reported.

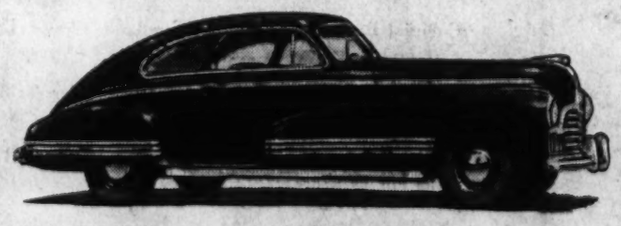
THIS FINE CAR WITH THE LOW PRICE—GENERAL MOTORS' MASTERPIECE



with the things you've always liked—and it now costs less!

(Come in—let us give you the full story on Pontiac's quality features for 1942)

- The famous Pontiac Triple-Cushioned Ride—even further improved—is still yours in 1942.
- Pontiac's new Unisteel Bodies by Fisher give you the strength and quality for which they have long been famous.
- Vital engine parts—pistons, bearings, connecting rods and crankshaft—are unchanged in the 1942 Pontiacs. The only major change is in the lifetime oil cleaner—and that's improved.
- For even easier handling, travel of the gear-shift lever has been reduced 30 per cent. Pontiac's exclusive Tru-Arc Steering is also retained.
- Riding comfort has been improved, and so has roadability. Pontiac's famous gas and oil economy remains at the same high peak.
- For 1942 Pontiac front wheel brakes have been increased in size and all four brakes are now triple-sealed.

Full Speed Ahead on National Defense

Pontiac is devoting two entire plants to the production of a new type of heavy machine gun for the United States Navy. Thousands of Pontiac's skilled craftsmen are helping to build this new gun which naval authorities describe as "the most effective weapon of its size ever produced." Defense comes first at Pontiac—and Pontiac is going full speed ahead!

IN 1941, thousands of owners of lowest-priced cars discovered for the first time they could own a big car that gave them an entirely new conception of motoring enjoyment—yet pay no more in the long run!

As in 1941, again in 1942 any new car buyer can afford a Pontiac. Although Pontiac is improved in 15 important ways—improvements made without interfering with defense needs—Pontiac is still priced just above the lowest-priced cars.

And, owners say they usually get those few extra dollars they paid for a Pontiac back again at trade-in time! Then, too, owners say Pontiac is costing them no more to own because all of Pontiac's vital economy and long-life features have been retained—unchanged—in 1942.

Your present car may cover part or perhaps all of the down payment on a 1942 Pontiac. The balance may be paid in convenient monthly installments.

Spy Suspect Tells Of Staying Citizen

Says He Resisted Ford Co. Requests To Become German

His Uncle Sam Brings Him Home

By Pat McGrady
Associated Press Staff Writer

New York, Oct. 27.—Edmund Heine, 50, hefty and heavy accented, today answered Government charges of espionage with a four-hour-long story of his uphill fight to maintain his identity as an American.

He told a Brooklyn Federal Court jury trying him and 14 others on charges of espionage conspiracy that he sent his three sons to an American school in Berlin, that he established an American school for them and their companions in Cologne, that he fought in Germany for the Ford Motor Co. against "keen and mean" competion, that he eventually gave up his $40,000-a-year job with Ford rather than surrender his acquired American citizenship.

"That was in 1934," Heine testified. "I was called back to Detroit and asked to revert back to German citizenship, because it would help business. I refused, despite the fact that would have meant a sizable increase in salary."

Less than a year later he was summoned back to Detroit again and company officials told him, he said, he would not return to Germany.

Heine said that while he was managing director of the Ford company in Germany, the Association of German Automobile Manufacturers complained of him to Adolf Hitler and warned Germans against buying American cars.

He said his business affairs were plagued with injunctions and legal actions of all sorts, whispering campaigns and boycotts and that he, himself, became the butt of jibes, some charging he had left Germany as an army deserter in 1914.

Heine said he immigrated in 1914, after he was disabled in the German army and declared unfit for further service.

He worked for the Chrysler Corporation in Spain, until civil war ruined that business; and then, he said, he took a year's vacation in the Bavarian Alps. On the outbreak of war, the American consulate advised him to return to the United States.

At the same time, Heine testified, officials of the German People's Car Co. asked him to accept a $2000-a-month executive job with them. And when he said he would consider it on his trip to America, they asked him to get information here for them and to straighten out certain financial matters.

Heine said that a Dr. Wirtz, head of the German company's aviation department, had asked him specifically to get American airplane production figures and data on types being produced.

In pursuit of this information, he testified, he rewrote reports from American aviation magazines, made notes on technical exhibits at the New York World's Fair, bought published pictures of new-type aircraft, inspected plants and paid civilian technicians to point out certain features on commercial planes.

He said Wirtz had given him a list of four names to whom he might transmit his reports to evade British censorship. They were: Lily Stein, who has pleaded guilty; Heinrich Eilers, on trial; and Heinz Jung and Ernesto Eilers, both of Lima, Peru, unapprehended defendants.

Heine said he also undertook to arrange here for the immigration of 5000 Jews each year from Frankfurt Am Main and that he failed in this mission.

Awaits Report

City to Ask $175,200 for Blue Plains

The Board of Public Welfare yesterday was instructed to submit within the next few days written recommendations to the Commissioners on its position in connection with the proposed new Home for the Aged and Infirm.

When the board's report is received, said Commissioner Guy Mason, the city officials are prepared to request a $175,200 deficiency appropriation to effect improvements at the present institution at Blue Plains, pending further action on a new structure.

Following a conference yesterday between Welfare Board members and the Commissioners it was announced that general approval had been given for a new home considerably smaller than the Blue Plains institution.

The Commissioners already have prepared preliminary plans and specifications for a million dollar structure at Glenn Dale, Md., but said no further steps would be taken until the Welfare Board has acted officially.

Diphtheria Clinics Set For Rockville Area

Diphtheria toxoid clinics for children of pre-school age of the Rockville area will be held at Derwood and Hunting Hill, Md., at 9:30 a. m. and 11 a.m., respectively, tomorrow and at the Brosius Building, Rockville, at 1:45 p. m. on Thursday.

According to Mrs. Raleigh S. Chinn, chairman, the health committee of the Rockville Parent-Teacher Association has been making a survey of the community and has located 21 children who are expected to attend one of the clinics. The list is expected to be considerably increased.

Nazi Move to Drive All Jews From Europe Believed Behind New Exodus to Russia

By Louis P. Lochner
Associated Press Staff Writer

Berlin, Oct. 27.—Complete elimination of Jews from European life now appears to be a fixed German policy.

Such a development is indicated by the press echo to the letter last Saturday of Marshal Ion Antonescu, Rumanian chief of state, disclosing banishment of Jews by Rumanian authorities to Ghettoes in the Ukraine and the words of Adolf Hitler before the Reichstag on January 1, 1939, when he promised "annihilation" of Jews in Europe.

"You speak of tragedy and make an appeal in favor of the Jews," Antonescu said in reply to a protest from Rumanian Jewish committees. "I understand your grief. You should have promptly understood the grief of the entire Rumanian nation. Consider that we have paid with our blood for the hate of your fellow believers in Bessarabia, Odessa and Marascow."

Czechia to Be Cleared

Yesterday the well-informed Krakow newspaper, Krahauser Zeitung, predicted Jews soon would be removed from the cities and villages of the German protectorate of Bohemia-Moravia.

The German press holds that Jews are getting just what they deserve in Rumania. Croatia's new law forbidding Jewish-Aryan marriages is also greeted with approval.

Several times each week transports now start eastward with Jews from the Rhineland and Westphalia, Berlin, Prague or Vienna.

The deportees are given several days' warning that they must give up their apartments. Thereafter at any hour of the day or night they may exkpect the Gestapo or regular police to call for them. Their homes, with all goods, are sealed and declared state property.

Housed in Synagogues

Taking only articles regarded as essential for personal use, they arrive at synagogues converted into refugee camps.

According to Jewish sources— official confirmation of these details is unavailable—some refugees are obliged to leave behind wedding rings, watches, fountain pens and shaving outfits. Most Jews are said to take 100 marks (about $40) with them. Some Jews said that 90 of these marks were required for transportation costs so that they would arrive at their destinations with only 10 marks (or about $4).

So far as can be learned the uprooted Jews are classified as "criminals," "antisocial elements," and "owners of catastrophe apartments." The latter means apartments suitable for Aryan refugees from cities subject to bombings.

The first two types are sent to the government general (unannexed) area of Poland, chiefly to Litzmannstadt, though some Jews are being banished to Riga, occupied capital of Latvia, and Minsk, in occupied Russia.

Jews report that some of their coreligionists before starting eastward sign statements acknowledging themselves to be enemies of the German state. In such cases their property is forfeited.

Others reportedly sign statements renouncing pensions, old-age payments and their personal property.

Many suicides are spoken of in Jewish circles.

Mae West to Ask Divorce From Wallace

Los Angeles, Oct. 27 (AP).—Lawyer Kenneth N. Chantry said today that Actress Mae West would file suit tomorrow asking a divoce from Frank Wallace, vaudeville actor, on a charge of cruelty.

Wallace's suit for $1,000 separate maintenance was transferred here today from San Bernardino County on Miss West's plea that she is a resident of Los Angeles County. Chantry said the divorce would be asked in a cross-complaint.

Roll Call Ends; Officials Confident Quota Is Reached

While expressing confidence their goal of 200,000 members will be reached when all forms are returned, officials of the District Chapter, American Red Cross Roll Call, last night formally closed the annual membership drive.

Success of the Roll Call was felt assured when volunteer workers reported late yesterday they had obtained 175,000 members. The remaining 25,000, it was believed, will be found on membership forms to be returned to headquarters soon.

In a message to the 15,000 volunteers who cooperated in the Roll Call, Edgar Morris congratulated them on obtaining the highest membership in history.

The various Roll Call units, through which the membership campaign has been operating, have been headed by the following prominent Washingtonians:

Miss Mabel Boardman, special gifts; Mrs. Homer Case, booths; Maj. Gen. James C. Magee, governmental; David E. McCoy, chairman, and J. F. O'Donnell, vice chairman, general business; E. Barrett Prettyman, honorary chairman, and Preston B. Kavanagh, active chairman, professional; T. Stanley Holland, financial; Robert C. Owers, utilities; Mrs. Joseph E. Davies, honorary chairman, and Mrs. E. G. Montgomery, Mrs. James K. McClintock and Mrs. N. A. Burnell, vice chairmen, residential; Mrs. Albert F. Lingle, Takoma Park, D. C. Branch.

Letts Returns Today To District Bench

Byrd's Text Scoring Lewis' Strike Order

The statement by Senator Byrd (Democrat) of Virginia, assailing the action of John L. Lewis in closing "captive" coal mines follows:

I know of no more disgraceful or humiliating episode in American history than John Lewis' action closing coal mines, essential to the operation of the steel plants, all with vital defense contracts. The letter from the President to Mr. Lewis is couched in such polite and diplomatic language as to be almost abject in presenting his plea to Mr. Lewis to keep the mines open.

Twenty-four hours after the request, the mines were still closed, and the President apparently had not received the courtesy of reply. John Lewis knows the power of force and despises weakness. Perhaps Lewis would have responded more quickly to a demand in stronger, more emphatic and direct language.

I have repeatedly said on the floor of the Senate that John Lewis considers himself stronger and bigger than the Government of the United States.

During the process of the coal strike in April, I stated in the Senate that the April strike placed the country, in the future, at the mercy of John Lewis. Coal reserves have been depleted and subsequent events have sustained my April statements. Thirty million tons of coal production were lost in this strike, and it was not certified to the National Mediation Board by Miss Perkins, Secretary of Labor, until nearly four weeks after its beginning.

In Lewis' Power

So now it is in the power of Mr. Lewis to close up as tight as a drum every coal-dependent industry in America.

Even upon withdrawal of this action by Mr. Lewis, it still represents the culmination of strike after strike, delay after delay, that have sabotaged our defense efforts for many months. From January 1 until now, more than seven million man-days have been lost in defense strikes alone, and these man-days lost are equivalent to the time required to build more than 1000 four-engine heavy bombers, which could have been sent to England to bomb Hitler when he was engaged in Russia. Instead, only about 40 have been sent. But the actual man-days lost do not tell the whole story, as the confusion and disorganization incident to strikes and threatened strikes reduce appreciably the production capacity of those plants where strikes have existed or have been threatened.

"We must recognize now that for the Government to take charge of the plants is not a solution of the strike problem, as this does not prevent the constant recurrence of other strikes. Today, from information sent me by the Army and Navy, 48 defense strikes are in existence, and this number or more have been in progress for many months. The afternoon papers report that the giant Navy Yards in Brooklyn are closed down and that the shipyards in the Los Angeles area have been ordered to stop work.

Offered Strike Curb

I introduced legislation in the Senate declaring strikes in defense industries to be contrary to public policy and as deserving of the condemnation of Congress. This resolution was adopted by the Senate, after a long and heated debate, by a vote of 46 to 25. Not receiving the support of the Administration, it was allowed to die in the House. In this emergency, with greater and greater powers being vested in the Executive, it must be obvious to all that constructive legislation to stop, and stop quickly, strikes in defense industries, can only be achieved with the approval and support of the President.

The longer forceful action is delayed, the greater will be our failure to prepare ourselves and to send implements of war to England, when every hour, and in fact every minute, counts.

The present National Defense Mediation Board, established by Executive Order, by the very terms of its power, cannot be effective. It can neither begin nor conclude. It cannot even investigate a strike unless Miss Perkins, the Secretary of Labor, gives it permission to do so, nor can it enforce its decisions after a verdict has been rendered.

No agency can be effective without the power in the original instance and without the power to make operative its decisions. Miss Perkins remains as Secretary of Labor in the face of her proven incompetence and a Nation-wide demand for her removal.

Menaces at Home

If we cannot meet at home the challenges to our defense effort, this, in itself, demonstrates our incapacity to solve the problems of foreign nations. We have menaces at home today as great or greater than those abroad, and these home menaces must be dealt with before we can hope to cope with the others.

Today the United States Senate is debating legislation which, in my sincere judgment, if and when enacted by the Congress under existing conditions, ultimately will make a total and unlimited offensive shooting war on the part of the United States as inevitable as any human prediction can be today—a war that will almost certainly involve America on both the Atlantic and the Pacific Oceans, and ultimately will mean sending millions of American boys in expedition forces to fight on foreign soils.

As a supporter, up to this date, of the President's foreign policies, I serve notice now that I do not intend to consider voting for one step leading us closer to war, except in our own defense, so long as sound and constructive measures are not adopted stopping at once all strikes in defense industries and removing barriers of incompetence and inefficiency now permeating our defense program.

LaGuardia, Miss Perkins Tell ILO to Adopt World Plan

Associated Press Staff Writer

New York, Oct. 27.— A joint appeal for the expansion of the world's developed resources to create a good standard of living for all nations was made today by Secretary of Labor Perkins and Mayor Fiorello H. LaGuardia at the 1941 conference of the International Labor Organization.

To the 160 delegates of 33 nations who unanimously elected her conference chairman, Miss Perkins said:

"We do not live in a world of fully developed and unlimited resources. We know that there is not enough cotton produced in the world for each person to have the equivalent of three shirts, two pairs of overalls, half a dozen socks each year.

"Our problem is that of finding some way to stretch existing resources and to develop new ones to produce a more abundant life for people who have suffered the privations of war, from Chungking to London."

Mayor LaGuardia said that the I. L. O.'s job was to set a living standard for all countries and that the job "has got to be done in terms of 'rosbraten,' spaghetti, goulash and beefsteak."

"I hope this meeting will not have a protocol but a program," he said. "This poor world has been protocoled to death and protocoled into war."

The LaGuardia plan, as he suggested it:

"The formula for the reconstruction of destroyed areas in Europe is very simple: I would make the Nazis rebuild everything that they destroyed."

". . . The world cannot continue in peace with some countries prospering and other countries hungry. Nature has provided sufficient food to satisfy all . . . now work out the formulas and insure centuries of peace and happiness."

The Perkins formula:

"Man—not the machine—is the key: man-made unemployment ought not to exist in the postwar world.

". . . The three fields in which there must be a great extension are those of health, nutrition, and housing. There can be no excuse for inadequate curative and preventive medical services.

"Reduce those barriers to trade which have limited the economic life and comfort of the people of the world. The world is rich, but every nation that must depend upon its resources alone is poor."

the meeting, first I. L. O. conference since the outbreak of the war, was called to discuss labor issues raised by the war and the spread of totalitarianism. The 22-year-old organization was created out of the League of Nations.

The conference accepted an invitation from President Roosevelt to hold its final session in the White House November 6.

Coal Mines Must Open, President Tells Lewis

"It is, therefore, essential that the mining of coal should go on without interruption.

"For the third time your government, through me, asks you and the officers of the United Mine Workers to authorize an immediate resumption of mining."

Notified of Lewis' letter in New York, J. P. Morgan authorized this statement:

"What utter rubbish!

"True, I am one of the directors of the United States Steel Corp., but every other statement about me in Mr. Lewis' letter is untrue."

Earlier, at a tense and crowded press conference, Lewis proposed a meeting with the President and Morgan "for a forthright discussion of the equities of this problem"—the granting of a closed shop in captive mines owned by the Nation's steel companies, where United States Steel plays a dominant role.

"If you would use the power of the State to restrain me, as an agent of labor," Lewis wrote, "then, Sir, I submit that you should use that same power to restrain my adversary in this issue, who is an agent of capital. My adversary is a rich man named Morgan, who lives in New York."

Before the press conference, there was distributed a mimeographed listing of the officers and directors of 'Big Steel," in which the names of J. P. Morgan, his son, Junius S. Morgan, and Morgan partner, T. W. Lamont, were included.

Morgan, Lewis argued, "dominates" the steel company's board and will decide what Taylor, who was formerly board chairman, "will do when he meets me Wednesday."

Morgan, whose "great wealth is increasing from his profits on defense orders," should be asked to make a "contribution" in the form of signing the Appalachian coal agreement that already covers commercial mines in the industry and provides the closed shop, Lewis said.

Defense output is not impaired by the strike, he said, nor will it be "for an indefinite period."

Lewis was believed to be referring to reports that supplies of coal by the steel mills are sufficient for operation for some days or even two or three weeks.

No Question of Patriotism

His letter to the President read:

The President,
White House.
Washington, D. C.
Sir:

Your letter at hand.

I have no wish to betray those whom I represent. There is yet no question of patriotism or national security involved in this dispute.

For four months the steel companies have been whetting their knives and preparing for this struggle. They have increased coal storage and marshalled all their resources. Defense output is not impaired, and will not be impaired for an indefinite period. This fight is only between a labor union and a ruthless corporation—the United States Steel Corporation.

Lest we forget, I reassert the loyalty of the members of the United Mine Workers of America as citizens of our Republic. This union gave 70,000 of its members to the armed forces of the United States in the last World War. The per capita purchase of war securities by its members during that period exceeded those of any other segment of our national population. They are willing, when required, to make equal or greater sacrifices in the future to preserve the Nation and its free institutions.

If you would use the power of the State to restrain me, as an agent of labor, then, Sir, I submit that you should use that same power to restrain my adversary in this issue, who is an agent of capital. My adversary is a rich man named Morgan, who lives in New York.

You are aware that twice on Saturday I talked on the telephone with Mr. Taylor in New York; that I urged he meet me on Sunday, so that the mines could work Monday; that Mr. Taylor refused to meet me on Sunday, or Monday or Tuesday, suggesting a meeting Wednesday; that Mr. Taylor's reason was that the board of directors of the United States Steel Corporation would meet Tuesday in New York; that this board of directors would determine whether or not Mr. Taylor, in behalf of the corporation, would accept or reject the Appalachian Agreement, when he and I met on Wednesday.

There are sixteen members of the board of directors of the United States Steel Corporation. Mr. J. P. Morgan is a member of the board. Mr. Morgan determines who else shall sit on the board. Mr. Morgan dominates the board. Mr. Morgan will decide what Mr. Taylor will do when he meets me on Wednesday. Mr. Morgan's great wealth is increasing from his profits on defense orders. Mr. Morgan has a responsibility at least equal to my own. Mr. Morgan should be asked to make a contribution. I submit, Mr. President, that it is not unreasonable to ask Mr. Morgan's companies to accept the wage agreement approved by the National Defense Mediation Board, and accepted and signed by other captive and commercial coal companies in the Nation.

You know, Sir, that I am to meet Mr. Myron C. Taylor at 10:00 o'clock Wednesday morning. This is the hour and the date fixed by him. If Mr. Morgan will permit Mr. Taylor to accept the Appalachian Agreement like all other coal operators, then the business can be disposed of in ten minutes and coal production resumed on Thursday. No impairment of defense production will have taken place; but if the country needs additional coal by reason of such stoppage, I will recommend to the mine workers that they make up the lost production by working additional days each week, until the lost production is regained.

In the interest of settlement, I would be glad, Mr. President, if you concur, to meet with you and my adversary, Mr. J. P. Morgan, for a forthright discussion of the equities of this problem. Respectfully yours

(Signed: JOHN L. LEWIS)

The mine workers' chief, speaking under the glare of photographers' lights, told reporters that the strike which began yesterday after the weekend rest period, would remain unchanged until he met with Taylor tomorrow.

Asked about reaction to his strike order in the field, Lewis said it had been followed in "entire conformity" and with "enthusiastic cooperation." He dismissed reports of a defiant back-to-work movement in some Pennsylvania collieries owned by the Bethlehem Steel Co. as due to "a local misunderstanding as to the number of men to remain on emergency work."

In his reply, Mr. Roosevelt apparently declined seriously to consider Lewis' suggestion of a conference with him and Morgan, and made no mention of it.

Meantime, the Mediation Board, which Lewis had accused yesterday of failing to meet its responsibility of issuing a recommendation on the dispute, wired the Nation's leading figures in the steel industry, asking them to reply to the procedural formula for arbitration which the board suggested last week as a means of settling the dispute.

The wires, asking for a point blank answer, were sent to Eugene Grace, head of Bethlehem Steel Co.; Irving S. Olds, president of United States Steel; Tom Gridler, of Republic Steel Corporation, and Ernest T. Weir, of the National Steel Corporation.

Terminal Contract Dispute Settled

The Building Trades Council yesterday announced a satisfactory settlement of a union-management difficulty involving work on escalators and toilets at the Washington Terminal.

The management, which had wanted, it was said, to allot a contract for partial repairs to a contractor and perform a portion of the work with its own maintenance staff, has agreed to allow McCloskey & Co., of Philadelphia, which employs union workmen, to have the contract. Union plumbers and electricians raised the issue and the Building Trades Council adjusted it.

New Labor Disputes Arise To Hamper Defense Program

By the Associated Press

New defense labor difficulties appeared yesterday while main interest was centered in the captive mine shutdown.

Shipbuilding and repair activities were hampered by a spreading welders' strike springing from a quarrel within the A.F.L. and by a walkout of C.I.O. men at the Robins Drydock and Repair Company, Brooklyn.

The welders' strike forced closing of the Lake Washington Shipyard, Houghton, Wash., the Pacific Car and Foundry Company, Benton, Wash., and the Seattle Structural Division of the latter firm. About 4000 men were idle.

In addition, some welders also were on strike at some shipbuilding and airplane concerns in the Long Beach-Los Angeles area in California, but operations were not halted. About 75 were out at plants at Florence, Ala.

The welders desire a separate union of their own within the A.F.L., a request which was denied them by the recent A.F.L. convention. The convention held the welders should join existing A.F.L. metal trades unions, affiliating with the boilermakers, for instance, if they worked principally on boilers.

Wage questions figured in the strike at the big Robins drydock, which has a contract with the U. S. Maritime Commission to repair damaged British merchant ships entering New York Harbor. At least 14 vessels are there now for overhaul or repairs.

The C. I. O. Industrial Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers, claiming as members 5800 of the 6000 men employed at the yard, said the management had promised a 5 per cent wage increase, then had withdrawn it. Present scales were not disclosed.

With the yard closed, the Defense Mediation Board asked the management and union to "refrain from any action which might aggravate the situation." It promised to hold a hearing as soon as possible.

At Bendix, N. J., members of the C. I. O. United Automobile Workers talked of putting pickets about the plant of Air Associates, Inc., again. The union's strike against the company was called off last week when the management agreed to reinstate strikers whose jobs it previously had given to new employes.

The 65 strikers refused, however, to go to work yesterday morning when employment cards were given them reading, "Assigned to a position," without specifying their former posts.

Air Associates, holding five million dollars' worth of contracts for airplane parts, employs about 700.

The C. I. O. United Automobile Workers called a strike at the Chrysler Motor Parts Corporation, Kansas City, Kans., because the National Labor Relations Board denied its petition for a collective bargaining election. The board said the company had a contract with an A. F. of L. union. The C. I. O.-U. A. W. said 90 per cent of the 95 workers petitioned for the election.

During the day, announcement was made that the United Mine Workers (C. I. O.) had reached an agreement with major Illinois coal mine operators covering 27,000 miners. The new contract granted wage increases ranging from $1 to $1.60 a day. Under the new scale, the minimum is $6 and the maximum $7.80 for a seven-hour day in various classifications.

About 15,000 commercial coal miners in Alabama went back to work under a contract which increased wages 25 cents a day to $5.75.

dustry strikes and removing barriers of incompetency and inefficiency now permeating the defense program."

He explained that this meant he would vote for the ship-arming provision of neutrality revision, "but not the balance" of the bill on which Senate debate began yesterday.

"Unless this Administration is willing to prepare us for war, I am not willing to vote to put us into war," Byrd added.

Democratic Representatives Colmer and McGehee, both of Mississippi, and Republicans Hoffman, of Michigan, and Ford, of California, joined Cox in floor attacks on Lewis, "racketeering" and "labor despotism" and "weak-kneed appeasement" on the part of the Administration.

By a "do-nothing policy," the Government "has become a coconspirator with the racketeers in the setting up of a labor despotism in this country," Cox declared.

"John L. Lewis holds every branch of the Federal Government in Washington in his vest pocket," Cox said. "He has again become the strong man of the Nation, though not so usable, so sinister and so dangerous as Sidney Hillman who seems to have been anointed as the fair-haired boy of the Administration."

Ford called upon the President to "cease weak-kneed, mealymouthed appeasement appeals, and tell this subversive group that we are going to have a defense program, even if it does interfere with their support of the Axis."

Representative Randolph (Democrat), of West Virginia, ranking member of the Labor Committee, told the Associated Press in New York that Congress should "join hands immediately with the President to bring about resumption of work in the captive coal mines."

Gore Charges Profit Tax 'Run-Around'

Recent "inordinate" salary increases for top executives in the steel industry and other leading producers of defense materials indicate that "the excess profits tax is getting the run-around," Representative Gore (Democrat), of Tennessee declared last night.

For the record of the House Banking Committee, which today starts executive consideration of price-control legislation, Gore submitted tables showing that the highest paid executives in 12 steel companies with over 100 million dollars in assets received salary rises ranging up to nearly 150 per cent during 1940.

Gore also submitted figures demonstrating that in the last fiscal year 33 companies registered with the Securities Exchange Commission granted pay raises totaling 10.6 per cent of 1940 salaries to each of their three highest paid executives.

$63,000 Pay Rise

One of these companies, the report showed, the top-salaried executive of the Carpenter Steel Co. was raised from $87,310 a year to $101,500, while the W. & B. Jarvis Co. granted one of its executives a raise from $17,000 to $80,000.

In all but two of the 33 companies, the highest paid executive received more than $10,000 yearly. Eight of the executives received over $50,000 and 15 of them more than $30,000.

Bethlehem led the big steel companies with salary increases, boosting its top executive from $271,000 in 1939 to $478,000 in 1940. In the same period, National Steel granted an increase from $176,000 to $245,000, Jones & Laughlin from $118,000 to $135,000 and American Rolling Mills from $76,000 to $106,000.

Gore, author of a measure to fix a ceiling on prices, rents and wages, including executive salaries and commissions, and to limit defense profits to 8 per cent, declared:

"It seems the excess profits tax is getting the run-around. Any effective price-control bill must contain a limitation on profits and a general ceiling on salaries, wages and prices.

"When such salary increases are allowed, is it any wonder that workers ask for increased wages? Unless Congress and the Administration move effectively to halt the rising cost of living and limit inordinate profits for defense contracts, we can expect a disastrous wave of strikes during the coming winter and spring.

"The situation cannot be met by feather-leg proposals like the Henderson bill."

Edwin S. Smith To Lead C. I. O. Drive in Oil

C. I. O. President Philip Murray last night announced appointment of Edwin S. Smith, former member of the National Labor Relations Board, to direct a campaign to unionize the 500,000 workers in the oil industry.

A joint announcement by Murray and President O. A. Knight, of the Oil Workers' International Union (C. I. O.), said the Standard Oil Co., "largest remaining nonunion industrial corporation, employing some 65,000 workers, will be a major concentration point in the campaign."

It said the $200,000 drive will be financed jointly by the C. I. O. and the oil workers. Locals of the oil workers' union have ratified an assessment against all members for the drive.

Smith, long charged by the American Federation of Labor with pro-C. I. O. bias, failed of reappointment to the NLRB when his term expired recently. Gerard D. Reilly, Labor Department solicitor, was appointed last September 17 to Smith's place on the board.

Fr. Sheehy Carries Drive Here For Funds for Naval Chapels

C. U. Professor Says Services Are Held in Messhalls

LIEUT. COMDR. MAURICE S. SHEEHY

Carrying his campaign for Navy chapel appropriations to Washington officialdom, Lieut. Cmdr. Maurice S. Sheehy, chaplain of the Jacksonville, Fla., Naval Air Station and professor at Catholic University, arrived here yesterday morning to spend a few days with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. M. J. Sheehy, 1013 Urell Place Northeast.

"We Navy chaplains have to use mess halls and barracks for divine services while the Army has received an appropriation of twelve million dollars for its chapels," Father Sheehy declared.

Secretary Knox has "expressed himself most emphatically in regard to a decent place for religious services," he said, but added that appropriation requests always ran aground in Government budget channels.

"And the boys in the Navy are going to church in large numbers," said Father Sheehy. "Last Sunday we had 1500 at a Field Mass at our air station. Our temporary chapel will seat only 350.

Despite his criticism of chapel facilities, Father Sheehy had high praise for naval construction work. "When I first saw the Naval Air Station in Jacksonville last January, it was little more than a few temporary barracks in a mudhole along the banks of the St. Johns River. When I reported for duty there in March, it was a rapidly expanding and smoothly functioning unit, with one of the largest trade schools in the Navy. The training given aviators there compares most favorably with training given anywhere else in the world. The morale, thanks largely to our commanding officer, Capt. Mason, is excellent.

"But we must do something to insure immediate and favorable action on chapels. This country has always been and still is fundamentally religious, as the Navy regulations make clear. We may have to do some shooting as well as shouting to break the logjam on chapel appropriations."

Father Sheehy will be the guest of honor at a Loras College alumni party at the Willard Hotel Thursday evening. Dr. James L. McGrath, alumni president, and Edward Heffron of the National Council of Catholic Men, are in charge of the arrangements.

Group of 'Captive' Miners Defies Union Order to Strike

By the Associated Press

Johnstown, Pa., Oct 27.—Union leaders failed tonight to get defiant miners of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation's "captive" Rosedale Mine to agree to obey the strike order of the United Mine Workers of America.

Ignoring the walkout instructions of John L. Lewis, U. M. W. chieftain, several hundred of the men worked in the pit today. One report said 347 of the 475-man day crew checked in.

John Ghizzoni, international board member of the union, declared, however, less than 200 of a day shift he estimated as exceeding 560 had worked and that only 20 of 300 reported tonight.

A hall in the Cambria City, a city ward, with a seating capacity of about 300 was crowded tonight by the miners.

Ghizzoni said "five or six men" in the audience had stood up and said they were going to work and "we were told they would have some followers."

"But the mine is closed down and it is going to stay closed down."

After several speakers said they feared the workers of the steel-company owned captive mines could not win a battle against the corporations alone, the assembly voted to telegraph a request to Lewis to call a strike of all commercial mines also.

The members of the Rosedale Local No. 6471 voted 243 to 23 of Saturday, a member reported, to ignore the strike order. Tonight's meeting was called after leaders asserted the earlier one was not properly representative.

Car Care

Cold Weather Starting

Electricity may leak from a wire or connection just as water leaks from a hose. An ignition leak often starts starting trouble. A "short circuit" hardly noticeable, may drain your battery of power. Cold weather puts extra strain on a road-weary motor with valves leaky, rings loose and cylinders gummy from hot weather driving. Before your balky car makes you late some morning, have Call Carl make a wiring and motor check-up. Call Carl electrical experts use meters and guages, not guess-work. Call Carl guarantees you Certified materials and specialized mechanics in every branch of car repair. Argentine Deputies Leave Williamsburg

Aboard special train en route Detroit, Oct. 27 (AP).—A party of Argentine deputies, their wives and children left Williamsburg by special train at 10:15 a. m. today en route to Detroit where they will see first hand the Midwest's industries being transformed into "arsenals for democracies."

The eight deputies and their families, numbering 25 in all, guests of the United States Government, spent the weekend in Colonial Village at the invitation of John D. Rockefeller, jr., and this morning had nothing but superlatives to describe their three day stay in the Virginia peninsular area.

PERFECT APPLE PIE
(The American Favorite)

6 to 8 medium-size cooking apples
Pastry
¾ cup sugar
1 tbsp. flour
½ tsp. nutmeg
1 tsp. cinnamon
2 tbsps. butter

Wash apples, pare and cut into ¼-inch thick slices. Line 9-inch pie pan with pastry rolled to nearly ⅛-inch thickness; trim off edges; moisten; arrange apples in overlapping layers; sprinkle each layer and top with combined sugar, flour, and spices; dot with butter. Roll pastry for top crust thinner than lower crust; cut design in top to allow steam to escape; place on pie; trim edge, allowing ½-inch of dough to extend over sides. Tuck edge of top crust under lower crust; pinch together with fingers; flute sides or press down to edge of pan with tines of fork. Bake in hot oven (450° F.) for 20 minutes; reduce temperature to moderate (350° F.) and continue baking 40 minutes longer, or until apples are tender and crust is golden-brown. Makes one 9-inch pie. Serves 6 to 8.

BITING into a cold, crisp Stayman . . . munching tart-sweet slices of a big Delicious, along with handfuls of hot buttered popcorn . . . cutting into a perfect apple pie and watching the golden syrup ooze out between the tender crusts . . . Neutrality Act Revision Called Asking for War to his advantage so far to do that."

"It is all-important, however, that we defend our rights on the Atlantic against an avowed movement of force and lawlessness," Hull told the committee.

"We should pursue a somewhat resolute course, not enough to be foolhardy, not enough to get unnecessarily into trouble, but enough to command the respect that one brave man has for another. That is what we are thinking about. It may not work out, but that is what we are thinking about."

Hull told the committee that this is "no ordinary war;" that Hitler, who "delights in misery and human suffering," has subjugated 15 nations and is headed this way, and that "where an invader, with all of the methods of barbarism that one can conceive, is at large in the world, there is no time to sit down and talk about the technical rules of neutrality which must give way to the rules of self-defense."

He said he wanted "to be written down for the next thousand years as being the enemy of Hitler while he pursues his present course and his present policy."

The committee's published hearings also revealed that:

Admiral Harold R. Stark, chief of naval operations, testified that more than half of the "successful" attacks on merchant vessels in the present war have been against unarmed ships, that armed merchantmen have brought down "a considerable number of planes" and that submarine raiders would not risk presenting a surface target if a ship mounted guns, and would be less effective submerged.

John Cudahy, former Ambassador to Poland and Belgium, who appeared in opposition to Neutrality Act revision, described Hitler's appearance at a recent interview as that of an "ill" man who "looks as if he had a malignant disease." He described the men around Hitler as "nobodies" who "distrust and hate and despise one another" and who "will be at each other's throats when No. 1, as they call him, goes out." He said Ribbentrop, not Goehring, was No. 2 when he (Cudahy) was there and that "Goehring hates him heartily."

Connally yesterday opened the Administration's plea for repeal of Section 2 (prohibiting American ships from entering belligerent ports), Section 3 (providing combat zone restrictions on shipping), and Section 6 (ban on arming of ships), with a call for return to international law.

Hopes that those sections would prevent sinkings of American ships have "proven illusory," he said, as "Hitler has decreed the death of our citizens and the destruction of our ships wherever his armed vessels may find them."

Then Connally called the roll of the eight American-owned vessels sunk by the Axis.

Passage of the Administration bill, the Texan argued, will allow American ships to fend off attacks, to deliver lend-lease supplies and to bring back strategic materials necessary to the defense of this country. This Government, he declared, "should no longer submit to the dictates of Hitler and the Axis powers."

"The stronger we are, the less chance there will be for a successful attack being made against us," Connally said. "We will increase our strength by protecting our shipping from attack on the high seas and by delivering defense material to those countries now fighting aggression."

Senator Vandenberg predicted that the first American ship carrying an American crew and cargo through combat zones would be shortly followed by the first American transport that takes the second A. E. F. to Europe."

Vandenberg said the Senate Foreign Relations Committee "has all but sounded the battle charge" and that the pending bill "almost inevitably invites" war; "indeed, that it virtually guarantees" it.

Vandenberg said he was convinced that a British victory and a Nazi defeat would be to the advantage of America but "not indispensable to our own successful survival." He said he believed "we can give more 'aid to the Allies' as a nonbelligerent than as a belligerent" and "can contribute more to an ultimate rational peace."

Radcliffe Asks Removal Of 'Severe Restrictions'

Senator Radcliffe (Democrat), of Maryland, in a radio address on Sunday called for removal of the Neutrality Act's "severe restrictions upon the routes of our ships." The address was erroneously attributed in yesterday's Post to Senator Tydings (Democrat), of Maryland.

Senator Radcliffe declared, "We owe it to our seamen, to our ship owners and to all the people of the country" to arm American ships.

The Neutrality Act, he said, was "evidence of self-restraint" in a world "harassed and tortured by war," but the provisions of the act "are outmoded and are now hostile to our interests. We should be derelict in our duty to ourselves if we continued to operate under such limitations."

Tired Kidneys Often Bring Sleepless Nights

Doctors say your kidneys contain 15 miles of tiny tubes or filters which help to purify the blood and keep you healthy. When they get tired and don't work right in the daytime, many people have to get up nights. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder. Don't neglect this condition and lose valuable, restful sleep.

When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may also cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

For the fiscal year 1941, funds were appropriated to provide the local force with 1437 men. The District Appropriation Act for the fiscal year 1942 carried funds providing for 75 additional policemen and 4 detectives in the salary grade of captain, or a total increase in personnel of 79.

Following passage of the Cochran bill in the House last August, the Senate committee failed to act due to the absence of members, it was said.

Stricken From Lend Bill

Representative Cochran introduced his bill again as a rider to the lend-lease bill earlier this month. While the Senate Appropriations Committee struck it from the lend-lease bill, the matter was referred for consideration to the subcommittee headed by Senator O'Mahoney.

Last Friday Superintendent of Police Kelly testified at an executive session of the subcommittee, declaring that more police are necessary for adequate law enforcement in the District. The subcommittee's recommendation to the full committee followed on Saturday.

Representative John E. Rankin (Democrat), of Mississippi, speaking briefly on the House floor yesterday on the need of adequate protection in the District, said that he believes additional military police are needed to patrol streets.

29th Division Ready For a Daybreak Advance

By Marshall Andrews

Post Staff Correspondent.

Pageland, S. C., Oct. 27.—A few miles north of here the Twenty-ninth Infantry Division lay hidden in heavy woods tonight, waiting for dawn when it will advance against the right of the Sixth Corps in the onset of a week of mock warfare.

In contrast to last week, this maneuver opened with no stupendous night march which might threaten to end within a matter of hours. The Twenty-ninth, only division of Second Corps to move today, left its base camp at 6:30 a. m., made a leisurely march into bivouac areas and sat down to wait the order to attack. It leap-frogged the Forty-fourth and Twenty-eighth Divisions, which remained in their base camps, and took up positions on the left of the corps line.

Opposite it lay the famed First Division, in which bitter memories may remain of the shellacking administered to it at Ogdensburg last year by the Virginia Brigade of the Twenty-ninth. In that maneuver, the Virginians, by a march reminiscent of Stonewall Jackson's foot cavalry and by excellent dispositions, split the First into three elements and forced suspension of the maneuver until the First could be put together again.

Behind the screen of horsemen and scout cars from the 104th Cavalry, the corps will jump off at 5 a. m. tomorrow, its objective to cross Rocky River and establish bridgeheads on the north bank. The Sixth Corps, the triangular First Division on the right, and the big square Twenty-sixth (Massachusetts) on the left, will do what it can to hold the Second Corps south of the river.

Perhaps the Sixth will throw its divisions across the river first and make its stand south of the stream. Perhaps its commander, Maj. Gen. Carl Truesdell, will elect to lie behind the river and force the Second to attempt a crossing under its guns. Whatever tactics develop, the fight will be for the river with a crossing by one corps or the other a practical certainty.

Should Truesdell send his corps south of the river, he would find himself in a parlous situation should Maj. Gen. Lloyd R. Fredendall's heavy Second Corps push him back to its south bank. He would be then under the necessity of making a withdrawal across the river, with its bridges almost certainly under crushing artillery fire, a task no commander would relish.

It appears likely that the battle will develop into an effort by the Red Sixth to prevent the Blue Second Corps from laying pontoon bridges and fording the river.

Widow, 7 Children Left Destitute by Fire

Frederick, Md., Oct. 27.—A widow, Mrs. Harvey Covell, and her seven children were left destitute when fire destroyed their dwelling on the Dorsey Norris farm, near Unionville, early yesterday morning. The family was forced to flee the blazing building in their night clothes and were unable to save any personal belongings.

Congress Sends 2d Lend-Lease To Roosevelt

The House and Senate yesterday voted rapid-fire approval of the $5,985,000,000 second lend-lease appropriation and sped the bill to the President for his signature.

Final passage came after a conference agreement removed the Senate prohibition on use of the funds for purchase of agricultural products grown outside the United States.

The appropriation, bringing to $12,985,000,000 the sum for tanks, planes, guns, munitions and food to send Axis foes, was supplemented by $176,467,239 in additional deficiency appropriations for various Government departments.

Senator Adams (Democrat), of Colorado, was briefly questioned on removal of the "buy America" amendment by Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat), of Wyoming, its sponsor.

Adams said the lend-lease administrator and the House conferees objected to the requirement that funds marked for agriculture be spent solely in this country, but said he was assured that "no products will be purchased outside of the United States if they can be obtained here."

Among 20 Senate amendments approved by the conferees was an increase in appropriations for United States Housing Authority administrative expenses from $500,000 to $900,000, and a $10,000 appropriation to finance the jjoint investigation of nondefense spending.

Dropped from the bill along with the "buy America" amendment were funds for a personnel department in the Department of Justice and an increased appropriation for the Women's Bureau.

W. O. Culver, Wheaton Store Owner, Is Dead

William Oliver Culver, 56, a member of a pioneer Montgomery County (Md.) family, died yesterday at Georgetown Hospital following a heart attack Friday.

Born in Colesville, Md., Mr. Culver was a resident of Forest Glen, Md., 30 years. He owned a merchandise store in Wheaton.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Maude Culver; his mother, Mrs. Caroline D. Culver, of Forest Glen; five brothers, John T. and Francis E., of Forest Glen; Joseph K., of Bethesda; Edward L., of Gettysburg, Pa.; George P., of Washington; and three sisters, Mrs. John C. Brennan, of Washington; Mrs. William F. Harding, of Spencerville, Md., and Miss Marie Culver, Forest Glen.

Funeral services will be tomorrow at 2 p. m. at the Warner E. Pumphrey funeral home, 8424 Georgia Avenue, Silver Spring, Md. Burial will be in St. John's Cemetery, Forest Glen.

Odlum Favors U.S. Loans to Aid Small Plants Priorities Peril

Copyright by New York Times

Many thousands of small manufacturing firms in the United States will be forced out of existence under the new stepped-up national defense production program unless some special Federal help is granted to them, Floyd B. Odlum, the new OPM director of the divisions of contract distribution, told the Senate Defense Investigating Committee yesterday.

Odlum said the only alternatives to liquidation which he has been able to discover so far are either allocation to these firms of enough critical raw materials to keep them barely alive or the grant of Government financial aid or Government-insured bank loans to tide them over the defense preparation period.

The diversion to such firms of less than 2 per cent of scarce raw materials now allocated for defense purposes would keep alive some 130,000 small manufacturers in the first six months of next year, Odlum estimated. Adoption of such a policy should be coupled with insistence that these firms use substitutes for the scarce critical materials, he added, also commenting that there were chances that some of them might get defense contracts in the interim.

In addition to this group of manufacturers, he said, there was a group of about 30,000 who ought to be able to get defense contracts in the next six months "if we can concentrate on that problem." For these, he added, he was convinced that raw materials should be made available to cover the interim period.

For firms which cannot possibly convert to defense production, Odlum advocated chiefly the second solution of Government loans to enable them to remain above water. He did not elaborate on the idea, but said it would not "cost very much."

"These firms," he said, "are in about the same position as that of a farmer who finds his crops ruined by Army maneuvers over his fields. The Government owes them an obligation."

Either Government loans or Government-issued bank loans should be granted other threatened firms which ultimately might be able to get defense contracts, the witness said. These funds would tide such firms over the interim period and also enable them to retool for defense work, he explained.

If the Government insured bank loans to such firms, he asserted, the over-all loss should not be more than 25 to 35 million dolars, and he held this to be an outlay which could be justifiably charged to general defense, considering the harmful effect on public morale of letting these firms go under.

Odlum won frequent commendation from Senator Truman, committee chairman, for the program he outlined.

"It sounds like good common sense," the chairman said several times, "although I think this committee deserves some credit, because we have been hammering away for months on the problem of how to save these small businesses."

Odlum said the chief present problem was in getting funds and office space for the staff he considers necessary to handle the job he has been given. The former utilities and investment trust executive also admitted that he had been in official Washington life such a short time that he was proceeding somewhat cautiously to avoid "getting my wires crossed."

"Right now," he said, "I am spending 90 per cent of my time on the drudgery of organization instead of on a constructive tackling of the problem I have been given. I can't get enough money and I can't get space—although I understand now I am going to get some room in a police station tomorrow.

"However, in two months I expect to be on top of the job and I'm getting closer to that outcome every day."

Berlin Diary

By WILLIAM L. SHIRER

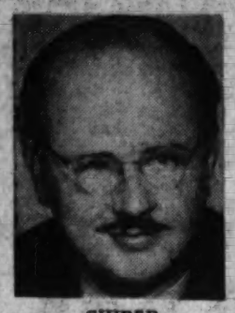
INSTALMENT XVI

Hitler at Compiegne

(June 19-21, 1940)

PARIS, June 19, 1940.—It is still a mystery to me how this campaign has been won so easily by Hitler. Admitted, the French fought in the towns. But they did not fight in the fields, as in all other wars. The grain 20 yards from the main roads has not been touched by the tramping feet of soldiers or their tens of thousands of motorized vehicles.



SHIRER

I do not mean to say that at many places the French did not fight valiantly. Undoubtedly they did. But there was no organized, well-thought-out defense.

From all I've seen, the French let the Germans dictate a new kind of warfare. This was fought largely along the main roads. And on the roads the Germans had everything in their favor: Utter superiority in tanks and planes, the main implements for road fighting.

An Austrian soldier told me last night that it was unbelievably simple. They went down the roads with tanks, with artillery support in the rear. Seldom did they meet any serious resistance. Dug-outs or posts here and there would fire. Usually the heavily armored German tanks paid no attention. Infantry units on trucks behind, with light artillery, would liquidate the pillboxes and the machine gun nests. Once in a while, if resistance was a little strong, they'd phone or radio or signal back for the artillery. If the big guns didn't silence it, an order went back for the Stukas, which invariably did.

I keep asking myself: If the French were making a serious defense, why are the main roads never blown up? Why so many strategic bridges left untouched? Here and there along the roads, a tank barrier, that is, a few logs or stones or debris—but nothing really serious for the tanks. No real tank-traps, such as the Swiss built by the thousands.

This has been a war of machines down the main highways, and the French do not appear to have been ready for it, to have understood it. This is incredible.

Gen. Glaise von Horstenau (an Austrian who betrayed Schuschnigg shamelessly and has now been named by Hitler one of the chief official historians of this war) put it another way last night. His idea is that Germany caught the Allies at one of the rare moments in military history when, for a few weeks or months or years, offensive weapons are superior to those of defense. He explains that this fantastic campaign probably could have taken place only in this summer of 1940.

Had it been delayed until next year, the Allies would have had the defensive weapons—antitank guns, antiaircraft guns, and fighter airplanes—to have offset the offensive arms of Germany. There then would have ensued, he thinks, the kind of stalemate which developed on the Western Front from 1914 to 1918, when the powers of offense and defense were about equal.

PARIS, June 21—On the exact spot in the little clearing in the Forest of Compiegne where, at 5 a. m. on November 11, 1918, the armistice which ended the World War was signed, Adolf Hitler today handed his armistice terms to France. Even the same table in the rickety old wagon-lit car was used. And through the windows we saw Hitler occupying the very seat on which Foch had sat at that table when he dictated the other armistice.

The armistice negotiations began at 3:15 p. m. A warm June sun beat down on the great elm and pine trees, and cast pleasant shadows on the wooded avenues as Hitler, with the German plenipotentiaries at his side, appeared. He alighted from his car in front of the French monument to Alsace-Lorraine which stands at the end of an avenue about 200 yards from the clearing where the armistice car waited.

The Alsace-Lorraine statue, I noted was covered with German war flags so that you could not see its sculptured work. But I had seen it some years before—the large sword representing the sword of the Allies, and its point sticking into a large, limp eagle, representing the old Empire of the Kaiser.

Through my glasses I saw the Fuehrer stop, glance at the monument. Then he strode slowly toward us, toward the little clearing in the woods. I observed his face. It was grave, solemn, yet brimming with revenge. There was also in it, as in his springy step, a note of the triumphant conqueror. There was something else, difficult to describe, in his expression, a sort of scornful, inner joy at being present at this great reversal of fate.

Now he reaches the little opening in the woods. He pauses and looks slowly around. In a group just behind him are the other German plenipotentiaries: Goering, grasping his field marshal's baton in one hand. Next to Goering are the two German army chiefs—Gen. Keitel, chief of the supreme command, and Gen. von Brauchitsch, commander in chief of the German army. Then there is Dr. Raeder, grand admiral of the German fleet. There are two nonmilitary men—Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop, and Rudolf Hess, Hitler's deputy.

In the center of the clearing is a great granite block. Hitler walks slowly over to it, steps up, and reads the inscription.

It says: "Here on the eleventh of November, 1918, succumbed the criminal pride of the German empire . . . vanquished by the free peoples which it tried to enslave."

I am but 50 yards from Hitler and see him through my glasses as though he were directly in front of me. I have seen that face many times at the great moments of his life. But today! It is afire with scorn, anger, hate, revenge, triumph. He steps off the monument and contrives to make even this gesture a masterpiece of contempt.

Suddenly, as though his face were not giving quite complete expression to his feelings, he throws his whole body into harmony with his mood. He swiftly snaps his hands on his hips, arches his shoulders, plants his feet wide apart. It is a magnificent gesture of defiance, of burning contempt for this place now and all that it has stood for in the 22 years since it witnessed the humbling of the German empire.

Off to one side along the edge of the clearing is a large statue in white stone of Marshal Foch. Hitler skips it; does not appear to see it.

The Germans stride over to the armistice car. Hitler steps up into the car, followed by the others. We can see nicely through the windows. Hitler takes the place occupied by Marshal Foch in 1918. The others spread themselves around him. Four chairs on the opposite side of the table remain empty. The French have not yet appeared. But we do not wait long.

Exactly at 3:30 p. m. they alight from a car. They too glance at the Alsace-Lorraine memorial, but it's a swift glance. Then they walk down the avenue flanked by three German officers. We see them now as they come into the sunlight of the clearing—Gen. Huntziger, Air Gen. Bergeret, Vice Admiral Le Luc, and M. Noel, French Ambassador to Poland.

The German guard of honor, drawn up at the entrance to the clearing, snaps to attention for the French as they pass, but it does not present arms. The Frenchmen keep their eyes straight ahead. Their faces are solemn, drawn. They are the picture of tragic dignity.

They walk stiffly to the car, where they are met by two German officers. The Germans salute. The French salute. There are no handshakes.

Now we get our picture through the dusty windows of that old wagon-lit car. Hitler and the other German leaders rise as the French enter the drawing room. Hitler gives the Nazi salute. Ribbentrop and Hess do the same.

Hitler, as far as we can see through the windows, does not say a word to the French or to anybody else. He nods to Gen. Keitel at his side. We see Gen. Keitel adjusting his papers. Then he starts to read. He is reading the preamble to the German armistice terms. The French sit there with marble-like faces.

The reading of the preamble lasts but a few minutes. Hitler, we soon observe, has no intention of remaining very long, of listening to the reading of the armistice terms themselves. At 3:42 p. m., 12 minutes after the French arrive, we see Hitler stand up, salute stiffly, and then stride out of the drawing room, followed by Goering, Brauchitsch, Raeder, Hess, and Ribbentrop. The French, like figures of stone, remain at the green-topped table. Gen. Keitel remains with them. He starts to read them the detailed conditions of the armistice.

Hitler and his aides stride down the avenue toward the Alsace-Lorraine Monument, where their cars are waiting. The whole ceremony in which Hitler has reached a new pinnacle in his meteoric career and Germany avenged the 1918 defeat is over in a quarter of an hour.

Bioff Says Cash He Received Was Film Lobby Funds

By the Associated Press

New York, Oct. 27.—William Bioff, West Coast labor leader, today pictured himself as a one million dollar messenger boy for Joseph M. Schenck, former chairman of Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation, and said he had been wined and dined in London, Paris and Rio de Janeiro at film executives' suggestion and expense.

Bioff told a Federal Court jury he collected money from motion picture producers "as a favor" to Nicholas M. Schenck, president of Loew's, Inc. He said he turned it over to the former Fox head, and quoted Nicholas Schenck as saying it was being used "strictly for the benefit of the industry."

When Bioff testified he made about a dozen deliveries of cash to Joseph Schenck between August, 1935, and February, 1937, Judge John C. Knox interposed to ask how much, in the aggregate, he delivered.

"I would say over a million dollars," Bioff replied.

The labor leader is on trial with George E. Browne, president of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes (A. F. L.), on charges of extorting $550,000 from Loew's, Twentieth Century Fox, Paramount Pictures, Inc., and Warner Brothers Pictures under threats to call a strike of motion picture operators. Earlier, executives of the companies testified that they paid approximately $811,000 to meet Bioff's demands and alleged threats to ruin their business.

Also turned over to Joseph Schenck, Bioff declared, was about $236,000 which he (Bioff) received as commission on purchases of raw film by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Corporation. The defendant quoted Nicholas Schenck as saying in 1935 in asking the money transfer:

"He told me the industry was being sandbagged in all parts of the country by legislatures; that he had to use cash.

"He said it wouldn't show on the books. I told him I would be very glad to do it."

Three years later, Bioff testified, Joseph Schenck suggested that he make a trip to Rio de Janeiro, explaining "that Government agents were checking the books of various companies, and it would be better for me (Bioff) to be out of their way."

Bioff added that he and his wife took a 22-day trip, with their passage paid.

Bioff said that when he returned to New York he received a request to get in touch with Charles Moskowitz, in charge of Loew's theaters in the metropolitan area. He said Moskowitz "advised me that conditions were much better and I should proceed to London." From London, he said, he went to Paris at the suggestion of a Twentieth Century-Fox executive with all expenses paid.

Some time in 1939, Bioff said, Joseph Schenck told him that revenue agents were checking his books and that he (Schenck) had told them Bioff was going to pay him back for the expenses of the two trips.

"He asked me to write a letter and he gave me $500," Bioff added. "He told me to put the $500 in the letter and that it would look like a first payment on the amount I owed him for the trips."

Later, he said, Schenck told him "he wanted me to make some money" and gave him 1000 shares of Twentieth Century-Fox stock.

Joseph Schenck was convicted of income tax evasion last April and sentenced to three years. He is free pending appeal.

Supreme Court Agrees to Rule On Overtime

By the Associated Press

A ruling on the proper method of computing "overtime" paid employes under the Wage-Hour Act was promised yesterday by the Supreme Court.

The tribunal agreed to pass on a Circuit Court decision holding that the Dallas News had not violated the wage-hour law by determining overtime on the basis of an agreed hourly wage which was above the required minimum pay.

Challenging this ruling, the Wage-Hour Administration asserted that the proper method of fixing the hourly rate was by "averaging the weekly wage over the number of hours worked."

This would require an employer to pay a larger amount, when employes were worked in excess of 40 hours a week, than if a smaller hourly wage had been agreed upon in advance. The act requires payment of time and one-half for overtime.

Defending its arrangement, the newspaper said the method advocated by the administration was designed to limit overtime work.

Such a purpose, it was added, was "square in the face of the needs of national defense upon which our very existence as a free people depends."

Philip B. Fleming, the wage administrator, had contended that a final decision in favor of the newspaper would "largely destroy" the section of the legislation providing for a 40-hour work week.

Under such a decision, the administrator asserted, mostly weekly salary arrangements could be converted into "arrangements for minimum or low basic hourly rates requiring no additional compensation for work weeks in which the statutory maximum is exceeded."

The wage-hour administration said the newspaper, before the law became effective, made agreements with its employes for a basic hourly rate of pay arrived at by dividing the weekly salary "by an arbitrary devisor, generally 60."

Such an arrangement, the administration added, permits an employe to work as much as 53 1-3 hours a week without any compensation in addition to his weekly salary.

The newspaper said the method was not "arbitrary" but was formulated in an effort to continue the already existing salary arrangement to assure employes "the obvious benefits of uniformity of pay incident to the salary system."

Here is an illustration of how the two systems would work out:

Suppose an employe's regular salary was $40 a week but his basic hourly wage had been fixed by agreement at 67 cents. If he worked 50 hours in one week the newspaper would be obligated to pay for 40 hours at 67 cents and for the other ten hours at time and one half, or about $1 an hour. This would total $36.85 and no payment over the $40 regular salary would be required.

Arlington Man Commits Suicide

The body of Dwight L. Hollingsworth, 65, was found yesterday hanging from a tree in the backyard of his home, 5521 Lee Highway, Arlington, Va. Dr. W. C. Welburn, county coroner, issued a certificate of suicide.

Louis Dolphin, who operates a hothouse nearby, first saw the body and notified police. Members of the family had not seen him since he retired the night before. He had been in poor health, they said.

Five Dealers Ask Court to Forbid Wholesale Liquor Discounts

A controversy over distribution of Washington's retail liquor business, which has raged for years before the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board and last spring brought on a grand jury investigation, but no indictments, was renewed yesterday in a civil action filed in the District Court.

Five retailers, who professed to speak for some 300 others, asked the court to order seven wholesalers to stop granting allegedly unfair discounts to a group of nine dealers, who were alleged to have been able to get a disproportionate share of the city's business by means of cut-rates.

Those bringing the suit were Patrick A. Gusrue, of the Penn Wine and Liquor Co., 1705 Pennsylvania Avenue Northwest; Sam Hutcher, 300 Kennedy Street Northwest; Tillie Brown, 1100 Ninth Street Northwest; George A. Chacos, 1114 Eighth Street Southwest, and Sarah Frank, 1330 U Street Northwest.

The retailers named as defendants were Maurice Milstone, 939 Pennsylvania Avenue Northwest; Ney Distributing Co., 903 Pennsylvania Avenue Northwest; Frank Sachs, 2003 Fourteenth Street Northwest; Samuel Eisenberg, 4326 Wisconsin Avenue Northwest, Star Liquor Co., 513 Eleventh Street Northwest; Ben Rose, 930 Bladensburg Road Northeast; David Lesser, 1448 New York Avenue Northwest; Jack and Harry Siegel, 2442 Eighteenth Street Northwest.

The wholesale distributors named as defendants were E. M. Fleischman Distilling Co., 418 Florida Avenue Northwest; International Distributing Co., 917 E Street Northwest; E. Kahn & Co., 118 E Street Northwest; Beitzell & Co., 1337 New York Avenue Northeast; Foreman, Inc., 1460 Okie Street Northeast; Holly-Stover, Inc., 2035 Seventeenth Street Northwest; Roma Wine & Liquor Co., 1315 Fourth Street Northwest.

Besides an injunction against the practice complained of, the suit asked for court costs and attorneys' fees.

Lewis' Reply

John L. Lewis has replied to President Roosevelt's reasonable appeal for continued production of coal for the steel industry by a thinly veiled political stratagem. The President asked that "work continue at the captive coal mines pending the settlement of the dispute." In simple terms he pointed out that coal is essential to make steel, and that we must have steel to forge weapons for defense of the freedom which the United Mine Workers, like all other Americans, enjoy. The flippant reply of Mr. Lewis is: "There is yet no question of patriotism or national security involved in this dispute."

Mr. Lewis attempts to put the President in the position of backing up J. P. Morgan in this controversy. The attempt is plain demagoguery. This line of attack merely exposes the political nature of the fight which the head of the United Mine Workers is making. It strengthens the impression that Mr. Lewis is demanding a closed shop for 53,000 workers in the so-called captive mines in order chiefly to embarrass the Administration. He knows that the Government cannot back up such a demand without encouraging hundreds of other unions to strike in defense industries for similar concessions. Mr. Lewis further knows that the problem of sending the miners back to work against the orders of their boss will be an extremely complicated one if the Government is forced to undertake it. And he is taking full advantage of this critical situation in order to gratify his political hates.

Thus, as a political fencer, Mr. Lewis has done well. But this is no time for this kind of slickness, and, unless we are grievously mistaken, the country will not stand for it. The man whom Mr. Lewis supported in the last campaign recently referred to the "psychopathic" madness of those who are playing politics against the Administration's foreign policy. The shoe seems to fit Mr. Lewis. But for the present let us merely say that Mr. Lewis cannot carry this dangerous game to the point of interrupting the production of steel for weapons without destroying his own influence and inflicting a severe blow on organized labor.

Long-Range Fighters

The British, it appears, now want fighter planes which possess not only tremendous speed, fire power, maneuverability—fighter essentials which have preoccupied designers—but very great range as well. This is, of course, a sizable order. But its immediacy has just been reemphasized by the tenor of British comment on the battle performance of the newly arrived Bell Airacobra. What particularly impresses R. A. F. pilots, apparently, is the fact that the American-built fighter has a range of nearly 1000 miles at 335 miles per hour. Most British fighters have less range, and British designers have been working for some time to produce ships that can stay in the air longer.

The need for such ships has, of course, become increasingly apparent with the R. A. F.'s shift from defensive to offensive air tactics. Daylight bombing raids over enemy territory have naturally involved the use of accompanying fighters to ward off attacking Messerschmitts and Heinkels. And so great is the disparity between fighter and bomber fuel capacity that the R. A. F. command frequently has to dispatch fighters in relays to cover its bombers. This technique is ingenious but makeshift. And the emphasis in fighter design now, as the British aeronautical correspondent, William Courtenay, pointed out in Sunday's Post, is toward twin-engined models able to carry sufficient fuel for a cruising range of, say, 2000 miles.

The development of such craft would make possible daylight bombing raids from England on Berlin, south Germany, and north Italy. For the accompanying fighters would have the fuel capacity and hence staying power to stick with the heavy bombers all the way to such distant objectives and back. Ability to hammer the enemy in daytime as, at present, at night, would almost certainly alter the complexion of the war in the air. It could, of course, be done from British bases in the Mediterranean as well as from England. Nor should we ignore the implications for us of land-based fighter planes capable of operating upward of a thousand miles at sea. When this is possible—and twin-engined fighters of such range are well past the blueprint stage—enemy bombers will have little chance of living in the air above convoys, and even less chance of slipping en masse through our continental air defenses.

Parrot Cry

One of the momentous debates on our country's foreign policy opened yesterday when the Senate took up the resolution which would virtually scrap the Neutrality Act. The resolution is offered on the President's initiative. It would comply with the Presidential request for authorization to arm our merchant vessels and it would also fulfill the Presidential hope that the ban be lifted on their entry into the so-called combat zones. There is thus one charge against the President that, surely, cannot come with any grace from the opposition. This is the charge of dictatorship. Mr. Roosevelt had resisted the suggestion that he could bypass Congress altogether in getting rid of the Neutrality Act. He could have done so by revoking his own Neutrality Act proclamations. For the shipping prohibitions in the act were valid only after the President had issued the proclamations naming the combat zones. What he named, in other words, he could have simply unnamed. He chose rather to ask Congress to undo the statute under which he has acted in all good faith since the war began.

There are other ways in which the President could have by-passed the act without doing the slightest violence to its spirit or letter. The Neutrality Act was aimed at the prevention of private contact with belligerent ports. It prohibited the arming only of American vessels which are documented under the laws of the United States. However, ships owned by the United States Government, as distinguished from ships owned by private American interests, are not documented. Therefore, the act in no way restricts the arming of Government-owned merchant vessels. Nor does the act prohibit the President from arming American flagships carrying solely Government-owned cargoes. The Neutrality Act provides that no American vessel "engaged in commerce with any foreign state" shall be armed. Certainly American merchant vessels carrying lend-lease cargoes are not engaged "in commerce." Rather they are engaged in the delivery phase of a well-defined Government program which is distinctly Government and not private business.

The President, accordingly, has been punctilious in the extreme in cooperating with Congress in the conduct of our foreign policy. He has stuck to this policy even when the emergency has thrown upon him great freedom of action as Commander in Chief of the Navy. In this role the President has authority to use the naval forces in any way necessary to secure the country's defenses. These broad powers enabled President Wilson to arm merchantmen with naval guns and Navy crews in 1917 after a filibuster had prevented Congressional authorization. Similarly President Roosevelt, without permission of Congress, could place naval guns and Navy crews on merchantmen. It would be fantastic to think that the Neutrality Act abridges the President's role as Commander in Chief. This could not be done. For the country's security is the responsibility of our Commander in Chief, and Congress can no more pare down the authority in this respect which the Constitution gives to the President than the President can limit the constitutional powers of Congress.

The historian, indeed, may say of the President that, if anything, he has been more laggard than precipitate in fulfilling his constitutional duty as Commander in Chief. The country at large has consistently jogged him into his successive actions. In the matter of arming merchantmen the American people began to clamor for action under the President's powers as Commander in Chief as soon as Hitler began to put our vessels and the lives of our seamen in jeopardy by his ruthless sinkings outside any declared combat zones. But in this respect Mr. Roosevelt preferred to await the will of Congress. That is to say, he refused to exercise powers which he clearly had; and instead, proposed that our foreign policy be made by the united action of Congress and the Chief Executive. The Senate now has an opportunity of acting with the sense of responsibility which the President has shown and which is demanded by the critical days through which we are living.

Naval Oversight

A Navy Day reflection occurred to us which did not find its way into any of Monday's speechmaking. It will astonish our readers that in the huge appropriations that have been made in recent years for our swollen Navy there has not been a single item for chapel accommodation. The sums that have been spent on the new shore stations have been big enough to provide the sailors with all manner of conveniences and amenities. These, indeed, are lavish and varied enough to make any sailor of an older generation envious. But not a cent has been reserved for structures which would enable the men of the fleet regularly to make their religious observances. Afloat, of course, our sailors are mustered every Sunday for divine service. Ashore some provision is made, but it is makeshift, the chaplains being compelled to ask permission for the use of other halls for chapel. Sometimes there may be some difficulty in making the arrangements. In every case, according to our information, the commanding officers are eager to afford provision for chapel, but the chaplains feel always that they are putting the station to inconvenience.

This is a situation which should never have been allowed to occur. Obviously the omission is due to an oversight at the time that appropriations were made. Ours is a religious nation, with freedom to worship written into our Constitution, and we are apt to take it for granted that our sailors have equal facilities, if not the same opportunity, to worship as they have at home. This is probably what Congress feels. If we thought about the matter at all, we should probably think that in these days when morale rates so high, the insurance of the facilities for meeting the Navy's spiritual needs would have been given topmost consideration by our Navy Department. The point, however, needs no laboring. That the omission is an oversight is shown in the $12,200,000 item for chapel accommodation which appeared in the last Army appropriation bill. What's good for the Army is good for the Navy, and we hope that the omission will be filled at the earliest opportunity.

More Policemen

The epidemic of thievery in the District last weekend showed more clearly than ever the need for an expanded police force. No less than 20 robberies occurred in relatively few hours. Residents were threatened or assaulted; homes and stores were broken into; parked automobiles were stripped. It was a shocking demonstration of lawlessness. And it must certainly have been in the minds of members of the Senate Appropriations Committee yesterday when they recommended adding 100 policemen to the local force. Such an increase is imperative, and the sooner the better. Assuming that the committee's recommendation is confirmed by the Senate and President, it should be possible to induct the new men by December 1, according to plan. For the committee also recommended that approximately $120,000 be appropriated from District revenues to pay the new officers' salaries through the end of the fiscal year.

Thus it seems that the Police Department's perennial request for expansion is about to be granted. This is not to say that crime will then disappear. Boomtown conditions with attendant excesses guarantee trouble ahead anyway. But with an increased police force there is at least a better chance of insuring the public safety. Sometime ago Senator Adams remarked that what the District needs is better, not more, policemen. To our way of thinking he was only half right. Yet it is quite clear that without an alert force, without vigorous crime prosecution, expansion of personnel means nothing but an added drain on taxpayers. Maj. Kelly, we are confident, will see to it that we have not only more but also better officers of the law.

Horror Story

There seems to be an opportunity for some gifted young writer of tales, if we have any in our midst, in that strange and eerie story from Police Headquarters the other day. Within the bounds of a populous city, which is also the Capital of a vast, wealthy and powerful Nation, is a small lake or inlet. In the center of the lake is an island with an area of some 120,000 square feet, mostly covered by dense undergrowths. Aside from this vegetation and some inconsequential fauna (including mosquitoes) the only living things upon the island until a few weeks ago were a man and a dog. The man was a middle-aged Negro of no particular occupation and strongly asocial temperament. He made his home in a kind of shanty on the island, but was driven occasionally to the mainland by the necessity to forage for scraps of food. About the dog nothing is known except that it was of no particular breed, and that it, too, was unsociable by nature. Thursday morning a chance visitor from the mainland, another Negro, found the dismembered skeleton of the solitary islander. The bones had been scattered in various directions some distance about the shanty. Police deduced that it was the dog that had scattered them. Mad with hunger, it had devoured the corpse of this man who had died of hunger. The rest of the tale, of course, must be filled in by the imagination of some specialist in the macabre, for it will never appear in the coroner's report.

HOPE

Boys in the lazy afternoon
Who hear a motor's throaty tune
Will race to watch the plane go by
Across an open patch of sky,
To bet—in millions—and exclaim
And argue of its type or name.

I hope they never run to spy
Some planes across their sunny sky
And see, amid their stakeless bets,
The unfamiliar silhouettes—
Then turn in panic haste to run
With shadows dropping from the sun.

Russia's Historic Role

Is it any wonder that the Soviet government, after learning from the British and French military commissions in the summer of 1939, of the utter helplessness and unpreparedness of those two countries, decided to stay out of any pact with them? Now we know why the Soviet government, which had been advocating "collective security" for so many years, found itself compelled to avoid an alliance with two hopelessly unprepared nations, fearing that it would be called upon, as was the case in 1914-1917, to bear the entire brunt of the war during the first two or three years? The so-called miracle of the Marne in 1914, which stopped the German barbarians dead at the very gates of Paris, was no less than the Russian invasion of East Prussia which compelled the Germans to withdraw the bulk of its troops from the West.

If it were not for the invasion of the Soviet Union, the Swastika would have been fluttering from the mast of the Buckingham palace by now. And so we now find a repetition of Russia's historic role in stopping with the blood of its gallant sons the march of the Huns against western civilization. Russia's resistance is a real miracle, for those of us who knew the weaknesses of the Tsarist army must admit that if the German forces had to face such armies as the Tsar had at his disposal, commanded by officers in corsets and afraid to soil their hands, Hitler would have been way past the Ural Mountains by now, and the world would have been candemned to slavery for the 1000 years which Hitler has been promising his minions he would rule.

As late as 1930, Russia had no motor industry, no aviation industry, no chemical industry, no oil refining industry worthy of the name, and no tank of other modern equipment industries. From a most backward nation, she has managed to create all those industries and be able to withstand the onslaught of the most efficient, most modern forces the world has ever known—that is a miracle.

And with our help, the German menace to the world, including ourselves, will be forever broken within the next two years.

Unity And Liquor Prohibition

"Every one realizes now that this country is facing a great emergency. And an emergency always demands not only a united effort of all the forces and skill available, but a quickening of all the operations and processes necessary to meet and conquer the thing that produced the emergency. The fact that this Nation is definitely threatened with war, both from the east and the west, makes the emergency of two fold gravity. And unless we as a Nation are solidly united on every detail of our national defense program, we shall find ourselves in a most embarrassing situation.

We must first realize the fact that Germany is waging a war of revenge as well as a war of conquest. Any nation that contributed anything toward the defeat of Germany in the last World War will be attacked before this war is over if Germany is the victor. Hitler is determined to do this to prove that the Germans are a superior people. It is therefore futile to believe that a nation as brutal as Germany is will not attack the United States when the opportunity comes.

The unfortunate divisions so manifest among us are proving the greatest possible impetus to the aggressor nations, and they are moved to take advantage of the situation, especially is this true with Germany. We see the most disrupting divisions in both branches of the National Congress, between the supporters of the Administration and the isolationist group. And this division delays the passage of vital legislation that would promote the national defense program, and invites divisions in other important avenues of the Nation's industries. If the Representatives in the Congress emphasized the importance of our present emergency by showing a solidly united front, that would prove the worth of democracy in such an hour as this; men like Col. Charles A. Lindbergh would not dare to stump the country as he is now doing.

We realize that Germany, Italy and Russia are ruled by dictators, but we hear of no divisions among them; and very little dissension is heard either in the House of Lords, or the House of Commons in England, except to urge a more vigorous prosecution of the war program.

Organized labor has taken advantage of this division to institute strikes in various industries at a time when we need above everything else to show loyalty to the Government, and to prove to the world that is so hopefully looking to America for an example of the worth of democracy in the hour of a great national emergency. It hardly enhances the value of organized labor in the estimation of public opinion, to take advantage of capital in such a time as this, and to embarrass the Government, when it desperately needs the skill of every engineer and machinist, the stroke of every hammer and the turn of every wheel in the production of war materials.

We need to be united on the question of man-power. A few days ago the President expressed deep concern because 50 per cent of the selective service men were turned down because they were found to be unfit for military service. But we recall that the present Administration repealed the eighteenth amendment to the Constitution with the hope that the sale of intoxicating liquors would produce revenue enough to help save the country from bankruptcy. And we see now to our regret that a greater value was placed on dollars and cents than upon human lives. Mrs. Ida Wise Smith, president of the Women's Christian Temperance Union, stated a few days ago in Roanoke, Va., that "The men in the Army camps and Navy shore stations be given the same protection they had in 1917-'18, and that the Government stop the open sale of beer on military reservations." This statement is encouraging, because it is a part truth. If we are going to have men physically prepared to meet the tremendous strain on the moral, mental and physical manpower, we must abolish the use of strong drink entirely, lest we find ourselves equipped with the finest and most modern military machinery, and without the men to handle them. A groggy nation can never hope to win a war. It has been stated on good authority that the greatest contributing factor in the defeat of France was that when her soldiers met the husky hordes of Germany, they were physically unfit to stand the test because of their overindulgence in strong drink. Germany saw this danger of intoxicating liquors among soldiers, and abolished its use five years ago. Russia realized the importance of the move and abolished its use among her soldiers last year.

It is high time for this Nation to decide what it is going to do to win for democracy.

America Should Help

As one who saw the fall of France, and had predicted the danger years before, I raise my too feeble voice now here, in my own country, where I see the same apathy, the same selfishness, the same short-sighted view: "It can't happen here." Hitler is in reality only the direct outcome of individual, then national, then collective egotism. Bitter experience seems to prove that nations do not, any more than persons, profit by any examples or experiences but their own. This time, we Americans must really wake up, because if Russia, too, should fall, it would no longer be a question of one country against another, but one or more continents against each other. We would be completely hemmed in by enemies on the Atlantic and Pacific; and because some of the Central and South American countries are closer, by race, culture and religion to Europe than to us, they might throw their weight to the winning side. Whereas, if we give our President, supreme and able captain of our "Ship of State," NOW, our full moral support, we would be helping not only ourselves, but would give new heart to the helpless and discouraged peoples abroad.

The fact that again today, despite full knowledge of vicious, murderous reprisals of death-penalties, courageous Frenchmen dared to mow down one of their oppressors, ought to make us ashamed of our own lack of action. So I plead earnestly with my fellow citizens to "wake up, act while there is still precious little time left." The Neutrality Act must be repealed, and we must declare war immediately. Before I left Paris, last year, a French Swiss told me disdainfully, "America will come in at the end, as during the last war. And then she will say that she won the war and will want to dictate terms to us, who gave far more in every way."

Let us not put ourselves in such a position today. Our form of government has worked comparatively well for about 150 years; we are the wealthiest and one of the most powerful nations in the world. Our prestige, therefore, is enormous upon impoverished, worn-out Europe. Let us transfuse our new, free blood to her, while there is still time before the death agony. It is our only hope to help abolish the worst foe of mankind the world has ever known. Then only shall we rightfully have earned the power to direct the Peace Conference on a Federal Union of Democracies basis.

Arming Ships

We hear that merchant ships ought to go "under the protection of their own guns." A Senator remarks that one ought to go down a dark alley with gun in hand. It is a noble thought.

How has it worked before? In the World War, not one sinking of an enemy ship was credited to an armed merchant vessel—while many armed merchantmen were themselves sunk. I say this on the authority of an American admiral, with a cordial invitation that the truth of it be investigated.

You might as well send a man with a little shotgun down an alley lined with machine gunners.

It is a fearful sacrifice of American sailors, under false pretenses, deliberate, and in accord with the usual plan to spill American blood and thereby incite America to war.

The Post Impressionist

Ghost Town News

"This is still a good town," the editor said, squinting from under his green eyeshade as he hand set the type, letter by letter, for the Friday final and only edition of Virginia City's weekly newspaper. "People call it a ghost town, but it isn't dead and it isn't dying. It's a good camp, rich-looking, if you ask me."

The editor is like that—full of civic pride for every deserted doorway, every sagging balustrade turned out in Jigsaw Gothic, for wasn't it Virginia City, high on the sunrise flank of Mount Davidson of Nevada's famed Comstock Lode, that one day struck it rich—rich enough to help build San Francisco, pay part of the Civil War debt and finance the laying of telegraph cables under the Atlantic Ocean?

Outside a sudden gust of wind swooped down from the bleak mountain slope and whipping up a tremendous load of ten-dollar-a-ton dust from ore-paved C Street, it glazed the window of the small room that was news room, composing room and press room rolled into one. Churring across the panes that reached to the inordinately high ceiling, the momentary sand storm cut off the long view of abandoned mills, dark entrances to tunnels and forgotten glory holes that dotted the sage-gray mountains.

"There's still gold out there, just awaiting to be brought out," the editor said confidently. "The only difference is that today you have to dig to find it."

Once these same hills of the Comstock Lode seethed with life. Men burrowed like ants to bring out the Big Bonanza, $400,000,000 in silver and $300,000,000 in gold. But that was three-quarters of a century ago when Virginia City was a lusty boom town of more than 30,000 people. Then celebrities gathered in the lobby of the garish International Hotel to swap tall tales and talk of new veins and leads that were being found. From the ornate boxes and the orchestra dress circle of Piper's Opera House, the Big Four, Mackay, Flood, Fair and O'Brien and hundreds of others who laid the foundations of many of the fortunes of today, gathered to applaud Edwin Booth, Frank Mayo, Patti and Modjeska.

It took two newspapers to record the swift pace of events that went with breathtaking fortunes made, and frequently lost, in a day. One of the papers, the Territorial Enterprise, kept the town talking, laughing or fighting mad over its series of news hoaxes perpetrated by a cub reporter-miner-columnist, Sam "Josh" Clemens, whose by-line later became Mark Twain. Writing, he discovered, was the only polite way on the Comstock to make a living sitting down so he lounged about in the somewhat homey atmosphere of the Enterprise—a city room with a lean-to fitted up with bunks ranged along the sides, one above the other, where editor, publisher, printer and all hands bunked in miner's cabin style. In the daytime it served as a dining room with a Chinaman, "Old Joe," as cook.

There was civic pride on a grand scale in Virginia City in those boom days. It was a dynamic, contagious spirit that asserted itself in the building of a fine school, a magnificent theater and a beautiful cathedral, St. Mary's in the Mountains. These and more were built with the thought that the Lode was inexhaustible.

But today the splendid homes are withered and gray with age. Fragile skeletons of many storied public buildings cling precariously to the steep slope 6200 feet up in Nevada's desert mountains. Others have burned or crumbled back to their place in the gold-tinged dust. No longer are there rip-roaring dramas to be recorded in the news. Only a little handful of people remain to look or even hope for a revival.

"Will the town ever come back?" the editor of the Virginia City News is often asked, and his answer is always the same. "The town has never gone away," he explains patiently. "It was the people that went away—but they'll be back. Yes, sir! They'll be back!"

Thus the editor and his ghost town news loyally carry on in the old spirit of the Comstock. Every Friday the paper comes out in fine form, eight pages in all, six "boiler plate" and two carefully and neatly hand set. It takes two full days to set up the sheet and the rest of the week for its 475 copies to be put into circulation. In one corner it proudly carries the caption, "Center of a thriving mining district," and in the other, "Published on the famous Comstock Lode."

It doesn't matter that there is no teletype, no typewriter nor even a telephone to disturb the quiet of the one-room office. In fact, that is an asset rather than a liability for many of the buildings in Virginia City have slipped out of line, due to the shrinking of the big timbers that are supporting more than 700 miles of underground workings, and have had to be condemned. Each year a few more find the strain too much and they crumble or burn undisturbed.

But when that happens to the office of the Virginia City News, as it has in the past, the editor picks up and walks to another deserted building and the paper appears as usual, on Friday, loyally exemplifying in determined headlines, the code of all good journalism, "Fidelity to the public interest is vital."

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Showdown Has Come

MR. JOHN L. LEWIS would certainly agree, that if the country is in peril, no loyal citizen would dream of closing down the coal mines and of threatening to stop the production of steel. The only conceivable explanation of what Mr. Lewis has done is, therefore, that he has searched his conscience and does not believe that the emergency is critical enough to make it the duty of every man to rally to the defense of his country.

LIPPMANN

On no other ground could he, or would he, attempt to justify his action. The strike he has called involves no question which can possibly be described by him as of such vital and urgent importance to the miners that they will be irreparably injured if the settlement is postponed because it takes time to negotiate or arbitrate it.

THE QUESTION is whether in coal mines owned by the steel companies, in the so-called "captive mines," there shall be the same kind of union shop as there is in almost all the rest of the mining industry. In itself the demand of the miners is certainly not unreasonable. But since these captive mines have been operated for years without the union shop, Mr. Lewis should explain to the country why he feels justified in saying that on October 27, 1941, it became so important to have the union shop in these mines that, rather than permit delay for negotiations, a crippling blow must be struck at the national defense.

It is no explanation for Mr. Lewis to say that he does not like the Mediation Board, or Mr. Hillman, or the President. For what is at stake is the defense of the United States—a far greater thing than any man, be his name Roosevelt, or Hillman, or Lewis. Since Mr. Lewis will not and cannot deny that his action is a blow at the national defense, there is only one explanation he can offer as a loyal citizen of this country. It is that he thinks defense is not the most important business of Americans, that the emergency proclaimed by the President and recognized by the unprecedented appropriations of Congress is not in fact critical, and that private interests are quite justified in behaving as if no supreme national interest were at stake.

AS A MATTER OF FACT this is just what Mr. Lewis does believe, and he is fully entitled to say that he does not stand alone, that on the contrary he is doing nothing which is not the logical and justifiable consequence of the position taken by men of unimpeachable loyalty and of proved conservatism. On August 5 Mr. Lewis was invited to join ex-President Hoover, ex-Vice President Dawes, ex-Governor Lowden, and Mr. Alf Landon in a public statement which declared that "few people honestly believe that the Axis is now, or will in the future be, in a position to threaten the independence of any part of this hemisphere if our defenses are properly prepared." Obviously, if this is true, if these Republican leaders are right that there is no imminent and no serious threat to the security of this hemisphere, then a strike which tied up the steel industry for a few weeks would be at worst an inconvenience.

Seven days afterwards, on August 12, the Republican organization in the House of Representatives placed itself on record before the country and the world as believing that, despite the urgent pleas of the Chief of Staff, it was safe to dislocate the organization of our partially-trained Army. As a matter of fact, Mr. Martin and his Republican friends did not intend to defeat the Army extension bill. They meant to "teach Mr. Roosevelt a lesson" and show their own strength by letting the bill pass only by the narrowest margin: at the last moment they were in a panic when it appeared that they might succeed only too well and have enough votes to defeat the bill. For they no more meant to wreck the Army than Mr. Lewis means to wreck the armament program: the Republican politicians were only staging a political strike to gain what they thought would be a political advantage.

SO MR. LEWIS should not be singled out as the specially appointed scapegoat. He is in eminently respectable company, and nothing he has done is in any way inconsistent with the views of his associates in the August 5 declaration, or with the action of the Republican organizaton in the House.

If the Hoover-Lewis view of the war and the national security is sound, then the mine workers are not striking against the national interest when they strike against the steel companies; they are doing only what, in the absence of the national emergency, they would normally do. If Mr. Martin was justified in defying the President, the Secretary of War, and the Chief of Staff on the critical question of Army service, then Mr. Lewis is doing nothing more reprehensible when he defies the President on the critical question of production to provide weapons for the armed forces.

IT IS NECESSARY to insist upon this—the background—of Mr. Lewis' action because only with these things in mind can we see the fundamental issue. The issue is not labor unionism, or the union shop, or the labor policies of the New Deal, or the labor policies of the steel companies but whether the isolationist position can any longer be reconciled with the defense of American security. On this fundamental issue we have now come to a showdown. Mr. Lewis would not be striking if he were not an isolationist, if he did not believe that our foreign policy is wrong and that there is, therefore, no urgent need for an all-out effort of total defense. This is the position of Mr. Martin and his Republican followers. And this, though they shrink from the consequences, is the position of Mr. Hoover and Mr. Landon when they stake their influence on the view that America is not involved in the war and has no vital interest in the outcome of the war.

It is impossible in practice to reconcile the isolationist position with total defense, even though theoretically most of the isolationist leaders approve the idea of national defense. For if the isolationists are right, if the country is not threatened by the Berlin-Rome-Tokyo alliance, if the defeat of Britain, China and Russia would not be a threat to the security and the vital interests of America, if our greatest danger comes not from Hitler but from Mr. Roosevelt, then the scale and scope and intensity of the effort for national defense are absurd.

IF THE NATIONAL DEFENSE effort is unnecessary, then it is wrong to conscript men, it is wrong to appropriate 60 billions, it is wrong to levy huge taxes, it is wrong to institute priorities, it is wrong to object to labor's striking for advantages. It is impossible to ask the country to make these sacrifices if men as eminent as Mr. Hoover, and a party as respectable as the Republican Party, continue to argue that there does not exist a danger real and great enough to call for such sacrifices. The issue, then, is broader and deeper than the mechanics of labor relations, than devices, legalities, and all other matters of ways and means. The question at issue is the national will of the American people. For only when that will is clear, can the ways and means be found to serve it.

So the showdown is necessary. A decision must be taken by the Nation as to whether or not the Republic is in danger, as to whether or not, therefore, we are to have national unity and national discipline such as a great occasion requires, or whether we are to have business-as-usual, politics-as-usual, labor unionism-as-usual. Until we have settled that issue, we cannot settle conclusively and effectively any other issue. We are at the end of debating and the time of decision is at hand. We have to know now what we think and what we mean to do, and what course, having taken our decision, it will be the duty of all men to support.

Nazis Beat Copper Lack

By Clarke Beach

Associated Press Staff Writer

Mystery of War

ONE OF THE real mysteries of this war is how Germany is getting along with so little copper.

The United States is faced with a critical shortage of copper, although it is not fighting, is just building up a supply of arms and is obtaining this year 1,500,000 tons of the material.

Germany, on the other hand, while waging battle on a gigantic scale, can't possibly be getting more than 250,000 tons of copper, defense officials estimate. Even assuming that she is obtaining all the copper mined throughout Europe, with the exception of Russia.

Germany mines only 33,000 tons a year, according to the Bureau of Mines, and the deposits are so poor that she has had to subsidize their operation since 1927. If Germany obtained all of Russia's output, she would still have available a total of only 350,000 tons, the bureau figures.

Great quantities of copper are used by the electrical industry, because, next to silver, it is the best possible conductor of electric current; half the copper consumed in this country is used by the electricians.

CHIEF military use of copper is for shell casings. This is because of another peculiar property of the metal: its rapid expansion when it is heated and its equally rapid contraction when it cools. When the shell's charge is exploded, the brass casing, which is about 70 per cent copper, instantly expands so as to seal the chamber and hold in the gas. It cools and contracts immediately afterward, making it possible to eject the casing from the chamber.

Shipbuilders are the next biggest military users. Because of its resistance to corrosion in salt water, brass is used in castings of propellers and a vast number of other nautical materials. A great quantity also is used for shipboard wire and cables, including the heavy degaussing cables, which encircle every ship now sent to sea as a protection against magnetic mines.

Germany, fairly well supplied with aluminum, probably is using some of that metal in electrical equipment and transmission lines, since aluminum ranks next to copper as a conductor of electricity. This country, however, being as short on aluminum as it is on copper, cannot consider diverting the light metal from airplane production.

For shell casings, American metallurgists believe that the Germans may have discovered a soft steel which can be used satisfactorily. If so, that nation is thus saving an enormous quantity of copper, and the scientists who made the discovery have contributed greatly to the Reich's military power.

AMERICAN scientists now are working on the problem of such a substitution. They also are considering the possbility of using some of the Treasury's great store of silver for breaker points in electric switchboards. Large surfaces of the metal are needed in these breakers, and therefore a considerable quantity of copper thus would be saved; but still the saving would not begin to fill the copper shortage.

Among other explanations of the Nazis' apparent copper supply is the possibility that before the war the Germans accumulated larger stockpiles than anyone here imagined. Also, Germany's conservation program has been going on for years, and it has been thorough and stern. Furthermore, a salvage crew accompanies every body of troops and immediately after they have engaged in battle, the crew recovers all usable metal from the ground.

Great Britain, which now mines practically no copper, once had highly productive fields. In her peak period, between 1830 and 1840, Britain produced 44 per cent of the world total.

While copper is widely scattered over the earth, there are four major sources of supply: The Rocky Mountain and Great Basin area of the United States; northern Michigan and Canada; the western slopes of the Andes Mountains of Peru and Chile, and the central African plateau of northern Rhodesia and the Belgian Congo.

Japan in 1939 mined about 108,000 metric tons, in a period when she had closed down many of her mines and imported foreign ore as a conservation policy.

TO PRESERVE American copper, the Supply Priorities and Allocations Board has launched a drastic conservation program, eliminating nearly all copper from nonessential civilian uses. This Nation also is increasing the supply of the metal by importing all that Latin America can mine, and by seeing that the mine operators there get all the equipment they need to increase production.

The Government also is encouraging United States miners to operate marginal fields by permitting a higher price to be charged for the products of those fields.

At best, however, not more than 1,800,000 tons will be available in 1942, says Donald M. Nelson, executive director of SPAB. Yet, 1,550,000 tons will be required for the Army, the Navy, and essential civilian uses.

This will leave less than one-third of the normal supply for ordinary civilian consumption.

Far Eastern Policy

By Edwin O. Reischauer

Ideal Answer Is Not War

THE CABINET crisis which brough Gen. Tojo to the helm in Tokyo underlines again what must be the three cardinal principles guiding our policy in the Far East. First, we must continue to stand by China, giving her ever increasing aid; second, we must maintain and sharpen our present economic and military weapons in the Pacific, making every effort to augment the land, air and sea power which the United States and its supporters can focus upon Japan; and finally, while pushing the two programs above, we must increase our efforts to find a pacific settlement of Japanese-American relations.

It is vital to recognize at the outset that the "Japanese question" is not an isolated problem. It is a part of the world-wide struggle in which we are engaged. Throughout the past decade it has been Germany and Japan who led the march of aggression, who trampled roughshod over the peaceful and orderly processes which the United States has championed. Today Germany and Japan are opportunistic allies. Working at opposite ends of a vast continental mass, they are effectively dividing the resisting forces. Each ship and plane and gun that Japan keeps tied to the Far East is a direct gain for the Nazis. And Hitler is pressing Japan to divert American attention, American cargoes and American striking power away from the Battle of the Atlantic.

Seen in this world setting, what does the new Tojo Government signify? Cabinet shifts such as this alter the political center of gravity less than most Americans think. The ruling group is much more closely in agreement than is suspected. Thus the present shift does not represent any great upheaval; but it is a move for the worse. The possibility of an attack on Russia is now more real. The eventual showdown between the United States and Japan seems now less distant.

BEHIND all this is a growing tension of hopes and fears in Japan. Her leaders feel that the long coveted port of Vladivostok may soon be ripe for plucking. Japan must be "ready" if the hour comes. Her leaders also see, however, that elsewhere time and tide are running against them. Past cabinets, in their view, were losing time and getting nowhere—precious time in which economic screws were tightening, in which reserves of oil and war materiel, however great, were diminishing, in which American production was building up the strength of all Japan's enemies in the Far East, in which America's might was daily growing. Any Japanese government, in short, is on the spot. To risk war with the United States is a life and death decision; yet each day the odds against them grow longer. Delay means dwindling chances of success; yet to jump might mean disaster.

What should be American policy at this juncture? On the one extreme, any idea of appeasement through selling out China must be completely rejected. On the other extreme, it does not seem that a declaration of war against Japan would best serve our ends. This would mean fighting Japan in her own waters where she would have the support of land defenses and planes, and where she might stall for months, avoiding any major battle. We may have no doubts about our eventual victory, but it would not be a lightning war. Nor can it be expected that long-range blockade would bring immediate collapse; Japan is virtually blockaded today. Moreover it is doubtful whether we could maintain the vital flow of war materials to England while using our shipping to supply fighting forces across the Pacific.

It is a common misconception in America that the only way to bring Japan back to peaceful ways is to "discredit" the military clique in war. The present policy is a national program; with it all leadership, present and potential, is identified. Given Far Eastern psychology, military defeat would be a disgrace always remembered, always demanding revenge.

WAR may be the final necessary step, but it is certainly not the ideal answer. At the moment our objective should be peaceful settlement. Japan wants to avoid war against us. If not, why should she hesitate while her position grows steadily worse? She is not now ready to accept our terms, but she may yet be. The key lies in a balance of forces which Tokyo daily appraises. On the one side is the tide of German success; on the other the growing strength of the United States and her Pacific allies. It is a direct proportion. A number of new battleships, let us say, might balance the collapse of Russia. Our role is therefore clear; we must in every way increase the military and economic force which we can focus in the Pacific. Every gun sent to the Dutch East Indies, every plane to China, every tanker to Vladivostok, every man to Manila, every ship to Singapore makes Japan less willing to go to war against us. The economic squeeze must be made ever more severe. Japan must be made to feel the pressure of gigantic power, for to that alone will she respond.

We should also without delay take steps to prevent Japan's getting into war with us "by accident." By this I mean we must make it crystal clear to her that further "coast-creeping" means war; that a military move into Thailand (Siam) would be considered in the same way as a move on Singapore. Unless this is absolutely stated, she might through a series of incidents stumble into a war she did not want.

WE should also make it unmistakably clear that should Japan stab Russia in the back while the latter is still effectively resisting Hitler, we would be compelled to put her in the same category as Germany. Tokyo must be told beyond all doubt that we would not sit passively by.

We must at the same time offer the Japanese some fair alternative while condemning their present expansionist policy. From their point of view we are telling them to abandon a policy into which they have poured incalculable gold and blood, and offering them nothing in return except our good will. We must offer them a positive reward, not at the expense of China, but in the form of a just economic order in which Japan can live prosperously. This means applying the Atlantic Charter to the Pacific, opening up the resources and markets of Southeast Asia and the Americas to Japanese trade. Areas like the Dutch East Indies, Australia and New Zealand can probably be induced to adopt freer trade, for they are the ones most interested in keeping Japan at peace.

It is my belief that Japan would respond to this combination of pressure and a positive offer. The central bloc of her rulers is more hard-headed, more realistic than is often thought. The group about the Emperor, the top admirals, and many generals are not hostile to compromise. It is not the fire-eating few who are dominant. If we keep increasing our military power, the day may well come when the Japanese Government will be ready to accept our offer.

TIME is on our side. Our hand is stronger now than it was a year ago, while for Japan the jump looks every day more dangerous. There is finally the possibility that Germany's successes may themselves urge Japan toward a peaceful settlement. Should Hitler break through in Russia and stand at Japan's back, she might suddenly find American cooperation welcome, and, like Russia before her, might be driven to join the opposition forces.

A pacific settlement would be for us and for the British Empire a triumph of world importance. It would fire the morale of all who resist aggression, and would mean that the arsenal of democracy need not be diverted from its major task of sending the instruments of war across the seas to Hitler's foes. This should therefore be our first objective.

Today's News Sidelight

Archangel, U. S. Supply Goal, Was Early Gateway to Moscow

Archangel, Russia's northern base to which American-made supplies are to be shipped from Boston, is nearly 5000 miles from the New England seaport, even when the trip is made by direct, peacetime routes, a bulletin from the National Geographic Society points out. The harbor, usually frozen over from late October until June, can be kept open at such times only by the use of ice-breakers.

"Archangel sprawls along the banks and islands of the estuary of the North Dvina River, a chilly stream which empties into the White Sea near the Arctic Circle. The port is about 180 miles east of the Murmansk railroad, whose traffic southward into the Russian interior has been disrupted by enemy soldiers and bombing planes.

"Archangel's railway to Moscow runs roughly parallel to that of Murmansk for several hundred miles. In all, the distance from Archangel to Moscow is about 700 miles, compared with roughly 1200 between Murmansk and the Russian capital. In addition, the more direct Archangel line runs through terrain that has fewer obstructions and marshes than the Murmansk route, an advantage especially important at the time of spring thaws.

"Remote Archangel was founded as the result of the shipwreck of an English trading captain, the only survivor of an expedition sent out in 1553 to pioneer a northern sea trail to the Far East. After finding refuge in the old monastery of St. Michael the Archangel—whose domes and cupolas then were the only sign of life along the thickly wooded shores—Capt. Chancellor set out by overland road to Moscow. There, in the capital of Ivan the Terrible, he made arrangements for trade between England and Russia which led to the establishment in 1584 of the first shipping facilities of Archangel.

"By the middle of the seventeenth century, the White Sea port had become an important center for traffic between western Europe and Russia. The following century, however, saw the rise of more convenient Russian ports on the Baltic, and Archangel, narassed by customs duties and restrictive regulations of Peter the Great, went into a decline. It was not until the railroad was laid to Moscow in 1898 that the port came back into prominence.

"When Russia was a participant in the 1914-18 World War, Archangel was a strategic supply base. In the turbulent days of the Russian civil war and Allied intervention the city became the northern base for British, United States, French and other foreign troops. But the opening up of the Northern country as a whole brought new industrial and commercial life to the city. When the Germans invaded Russia in June, 1941, Archangel's inhabitants numbered more than 281,000, compared with only 77,000 in 1926.

"Many new sawmills were built. Other factories began turning out such products as rope, paper, bricks, alcohol, soap, cellulose and various wooden and leather articles. Archangel normally operates shipbuilding yards and extensive fisheries. Its large harbor can accommodate hundreds of river and ocean-going vessels. Through the port passes some four-fifths of the entire White Sea trade."

Reprisal At Dawn

Make each dawn a ghastly horror—
Brutalize the birth of day;
Usher in the "Bright Tommorrow"
In the grimy, grisly way.
Thrust those hostages like cattle
Up against a dripping wall—
They are helpless to give battle,
So it takes no guts at all!

Take those youths with pale eyes staring
And which seem to query "Why?"
Drag those men with looks despairing—
Doomed like driven beasts to die;
Shoot that father, kind and gentle,
Baffled by the mortal storm!
Wholesale death is elemental
When the Nazis run to form!

There's an old man, bent and weary
Hauled with curses from his bed! . . .
March him through the twilight dreary—
Send a bullet through his head! . . .
Those two lads who look like brothers—
They know nothing of a plot—
Mow them down with all the others,
For a Nazi has been shot!

There's a kindly old professor
Captured when his country fell . . .
Do not grant him a confessor—
Sneer at him like imps of hell!
Take him with that young physician—
Pin them there against the stone!
When one pompous German's murdered
Then one hundred must atone!

Grab that man of science—quickly!
Take that artist and that clerk!
Give the gruesome orders thickly
In the rainy morning's murk . . .
Poet, laborer, attorney—
Prod them forward with your gun
On the bloody final journey
Where one hundred die for one!

Now they lie in ghastly bundles
Never fully knowing why
As the Nazi council trundles
Off to mark more men to die;

Forming letters hot and steaming—
And they spell the one word, "WAIT."

She does so with a waddle;
Indulgences in spicy fare
Have made the lady toddle;
Though rather startlingly obese

And has a neat and slender form
Like dress designers draft
Attracts the eye . . . but in her train
She pulls along a huge Great Dane!

Fair Enough

New Dealers Chum With Communists

I AM AFRAID that those of us who detest with equal fervor both communism and nazilism, Stalin and Hitler, sometimes tip the balance slightly in favor of Germany in reminding ourselves that the Soviet government is not to be trusted in any circumstances. Our own Government is partly responsible for this question. It is true beyond any question that many Communists and fellow-travelers have been given public positions and other aid and comfort by the three Roosevelt Administrations in the guise of "progressives" and "radicals." No Nazi ever has been shown such warm consideration and our rulers in Washington are quick to sniff a taint on many Americans who may be Nazi sympathizers and on some who insist that they are not. Nobody who is even suspected, however wrongly, of sympathizing with the Nazis can establish political or social relations with this Government. But, on the other hand, tolerance is strained on behalf of hundreds of individuals who have openly expressed sympathy with communism, Russia and Stalin.

PEGLER

This is a bad mistake, because if a pro-Nazi is a Quisling in our midst, a Stalinist or fellow-traveler is equally undesirable.

POSSIBLY some true "progressives" or "radicals" are unjustly accused of Stalinism, but if so they have many influential friends and clamorous, not to say abusive, defenders both in office and in print. On the other hand, the individual who is falsely accused of sympathizing with Hitler is simply out of luck. That unfairness by our own Government naturally arouses resentment on their behalf and the official tolerance for Communists and fellow-travelers who have openly expressed their sympathies creates suspicion among people who, in their hearts, damn both evils equally. And many of us, in our angry determination to expose the Communist and fellow-travelers and drive them out of the public service, are tempted to show that Hitlerism is no worse instead of hammering away on the fact that they are equally bad and practically alike. When you argue that one thing is no worse than another thing you find yourself defending the first thing.

I have given up trying to understand why President Roosevelt, Mrs. Roosevelt and Harold Ickes, in the Government, and John Lewis in the union movement believe they can associate and collaborate with Communists and fellow-travelers and remain politically pure when they all hold that anyone who runs with the Nazis is bound to get some of it on him.

IF WE CAN abide Communists and fellow-travelers in the Government and in the union movement why not Hitlerites and Quislings? The only answer given is that those who are called Communists and fellow-travelers are victims of a foul slander, but the same people who give this reply are quick to cry "Quisling" or "appeaser," another synonym for traitor, at men who only contend that the United States should take no part in this war.

If you have read this far you will have observed the operation of the process that I mentioned in the beginning. Hitler and Hitlerism are all that the Government's orators and writers have said and worse, for the man doesn't live who can adequately depict the evil of the monster and the danger of Hitlerism to us. But we have two enemies equal and alike, who have both been guilty of crimes against our safety and our hospitality and yet we find old collaborators or friends or members of the second enemy on chummy terms with our own Government.

Governing Occupied Russia Presents Dilemma to Hitler

By Ferdinand C. M. Jahn

United Press Staff Writer

In the occupation of vast Russian territories, Adolf Hitler has created a problem which may have important internal repercussions in Germany.

The fuehrer, for urgent military as well as economic reasons, must organize the administration of some 60 million persons—the population of Soviet occupied regions—which will be increased by 20 million if the Nazis take Moscow and its tributary industrial regions. Two courses are open:

1. The installation of a purely military administration.

2. An attempt to establish a restricted, local self-administration headed by native "Quislings."

By the first course the Germans would renounce any attempt to obtain the cooperation of the local population and resign themselves to the risk of universal sabotage and widespread rebellion. Such an iron-fisted rule would require a huge army of occupation.

Example of 1918

Even passive resistance would restrict greatly the production of raw materials and foodstuffs which Germany vitally needs. When Germany occupied the Ukraine in the war of 1914-18, this vast territory, aside from feeding the army of occupation, yielded the central powers only a few trainloads of food. The population seethed with unrest and many German and Austrian officers—including the German commander in chief—were assassinated.

The alternative—limited self-government—might win the cooperation of a small part of the population and permit larger withdrawal of Axis troops. Hilter, therefore, presumably will prefer this method, but here he is confronted by other difficulties.

Since all parties except the Communists have been banned for 25 years in Russia, and the entire political, social and economic structure is organized on strictly Communist lines, it would be difficult for the Nazis to find a nucleus in Russia from which to attempt to engineer the "conversion" of the country. Except for the Ukraine, national minorities with strong feelings are almost nonexistent. Hitler in seeking "autonomous" regimes would have no choice but to select "Reddish" local Quislings if he expects even partial cooperation from the masses.

Would Anger Army Chiefs

The German army's leaders come largely from the conservative, nationalistic nobility, which lost properties and estates during and after the last war to semisocialist regimes in Germany. It may be assumed, therefore, that these generals, aside from ridding the fatherland of the Russian Bolshevik menace, hope while crushing the Reds in Russia to strike indirectly at similar tendencies in Germany.

Even surface concessions which Hitler might make to Bolshevism in order to administer Russian territory, therefore, might alienate the sympathies of the powerful German army leaders.

With the high command of a militaristic state almost supreme in wartime, Hitler thus is faced with a real problem in administering Russian territory.

Marines Drive 'Insurgents' Out Of 'Neutralia'

By Jack Morris
Post Staff Writer

Hard-hitting United States Marines drew spontaneous cheers from an estimated 25,000 Navy Day celebrants in Fairlawn Park yesterday as they charged and captured a village of "insurgents" in the face of heavy gunfire.

The weather prohibited participation of parachute troops and dive bombers in the battle, but the deafening boom of two 3-inch naval howitzers in the besieged village mingled with the crack of some 250 rifles and 8 machine guns provided noise and smoke galore.

When the helmeted leathernecks, who had landed from the Anacostia River in rubber boats and motor launches, routed the defenders in hand-to-hand fighting and replaced the insurgents' yellow banner with the American flag, the band played the "Star-Spangled Banner" and the crowd's obvious reaction was:

"The Marines have landed and the situation is well in hand."

The action represented a punitive expedition by United States Marines to the country of "Neutralia," where "insurgents" had murdered two Americans.

An attack was decided upon after all peaceful means of settling the incident had been exhausted.

The attackers, 150 men from Quantico, Va., Marine Base, found stiff resistance in the insurgents, 125 of their fellow Marines and 2 gun crews from the Navy Yard disguised as guerrillas in straw hats, long sideburns and mustaches.

Thus, once again Fairlawn Park, headquarters of World War veteran bonus marchers during former President Hoover's Administration, heard the ring of rifle fire.

But this time harmless blank cartridges replaced the bullets from soldiers' rifles, and the men who fell on the field were only playing possum.

The Marines, strung across the park's athletic field in a thin line, found their advance impeded not only by fire from the village but by pseudo-land mines that went off periodically in yellow clouds of smoke.

Smoke screens, laid down to cover their advance, proved ineffectual in the high wind. Nevertheless, after crawling bit by bit nearer to the enemy fortifications, the leathernecks stood up and fired point-blank at close range in the face of a crescendo of replies from the defenders. Then the attackers let out a collective whoop and charged the insurgents, who fled the fortification, leaving their arms, after a hand-to-hand struggle.

Mopping-up operations were carried out by small boys who dashed into the village to gather up used cartridges while the American flag was run up over the village.

Navy Day Celebrated By 25,000 at Fairlawn

Intermittent showers and a heavy mist failed to dampen the spirits of a Navy Day crowd estimated by Park Police Capt. M. H. Raspberry at 25,000 in Fairlawn Park yesterday.

As gun factories in the Navy Yard across the Anacostia ground out even more arms for the world's largest fleet, the enthusiastic throng witnessed day-long demonstrations by sailors, Marines and Coast Guardsmen in honor of the Navy's founding in 1775 by the Continental Congress.

The audience, consisting largely of school children, some of whom had been given a part holiday and others playing hookey, cheered frequently during the demonstrations of arms and tactics and the colorful military ceremonies.

The band from the Navy School of Music, playing martial airs throughout the day, found lusty cooperation from the audience in group singing of patriotic tunes during lulls in the program.

Greatest interest in the program's practical side was evinced in catapulting of planes from a Navy barge in the river, deep-sea diving exhibitions from the diving boat Crilley and landing operations by Marines who then fought a mock battle with shore defenders.

Most impressive of the program's ceremonious side was the review of a blue-coated battalion from the Washington Marine Barracks by Rear Admiral George Pettengill, commandant of the Washington Navy Yard. A high-stepping Marine drum and bugle corps added color to the review.

A poignant note was added to the program when a 9-year-old boy, all diked out in a sailor's uniform, got lost in the crowd. The youngster, Raymond Davis, of 513 Twelfth Street Southeast, was not long in distress, however, for his father was a musician in the band.

Poll of Exhibitors Does Players a Handsome Turn

Two Local Productions Deserve Attention; Vote Leaders Move Step Nearer Stardom; Items of News and Gossip of the Theater

THE RECENT TRADE JOURNAL POLL of the country's motion picture exhibitors that resulted in the selection of Laraine Day, Rita Hayworth, Ruth Hussey, Robert Preston, Ronald Reagan, John Payne, Jeffrey Lynn, Ann Rutherford, Dennis Morgan and Jackie Cooper as the ten rising screen players best equipped to win early stardom, for once, redounded to the benefit of those it favored, as well as the 15 other young actors and actresses immediately following them in the voting.

LARAINE DAY

To date 27 roles have been assigned to 9 of the top 25 players named by the exhibitors as potential star material. Not that these 19 have been precipitately elevated to stardom, but the roles to which they have been assigned since the balloting assuredly are more important than any they might have received without it. Most of them have been put into the second leads in high-budget pictures in which sure-fire box-office personalities are starred. Running second in an "A" picture is in every way more helpful to aspiring talents than running first in a "B" picture.

As evidence that this is what is happening, take the case of Laraine Day. She will be seen next in "Unholy Partners," as the feminine lead with Edward Arnold and Edward G. Robinson, with "The Girl on the Hill," with Herbert Marshall and Anne Shirley, to follow. Columbia is following "You'll Never Get Rich," in which, as Washington well knows, she is costarred with Fred Astaire, with "Eadie Was a Lady" and "The Things They Do in Rio," for Rita Hayworth. Ruth Hussey already has been seen in a cofeatured role with Robert Young in "Married Bachelor" and soon will come to the screen in "H. M. Pulham, Esq." Ronald Reagan has graduated from "International Squadron" to "King's Row." And that's the way it's going all the way down the line.

Never before within the recollection of this department have the producers responded so quickly and so generously to an exhibitor poll. Their contract players ought to be pretty happy over the whole thing.

Astute Washington playgoers should not lose sight of the fact that there are two resident productions of more than casual interest coming up on local stages. With the Civic Theater's streamlined version of "The American Way" getting into its third and final week on Wednesday, Robert Ardrey's "Thunder Rock" is rapidly being whipped into shape as the second production of the season at Wardman, opening on Wednesday, November 5, with an entirely new cast. In view of their success with "My Heart's in the Highlands," it is highly fitting that Saroyan's "Jim Dandy" should receive its first public showing at the hands of the speech and drama department of Catholic University. That is what will happen on Wednesday evening at 8:30. The run will be for a full week, instead of the five days previously the rule. Both of these should be jotted down on the date pad.

Dots and Dashes

Sam Pearce, as was donein he case of last season's production of "Twelfth Night," will be sent out by the Theater Guild to lecture in advance on the background, production and general merit of Sheridan's "The Rivals" and other Guild productions, coming along in the course of the season. His route sheet leads off with Washington . . . "R. U. R.," by Karel Capek, will be the second production in the Guild's revival season . . . Watson Barratt is designing the sets for "The Rivals" and Emeline Roche for "Papa Is All," due at the National the week of November 10 . . . Having hurdled the "doctors' dilemma" last night, when the medicos on the membership list threw the Monday night shindig, the Washington Variety Club tomorrow will hold a luncheon meeting at the Willard, to be followed by the annual election of officers; on Saturday will present Gracie Fields at Constitution Hall for the benefit of the British War Relief, and on November 15 will pitch the big event of the year at the Willard in the fabulous form of its annual banquet and ball . . . Tonight at 9, the Drama Workshop of the Jewish Community Center will present "Come of Age," a play with music, by Clemence Dane, as the first of a series of experimental drama readings . . . And the Mount Vernon Players are celebrating their fifth anniversary with the production of "Kind Lady," to be presented tonight and repeated on October 29 and 31 . . . Margo, remembered in Maxwell Anderson's "Winterset" and more recently seen on Broadway in Sidney Kingsley's "The World We Make," has been signed by Oscar Serlin to appear opposite Sam Jaffe in the title role of Ferenc Molnar's "The King's Maid" . . . Sonja Henie, rehearsing for a road tour in her ice show, will return to Hollywood in January to get hot in something called "Iceland," for Twentieth Century-Fox.

PEGGY WOOD AND CLIFTON WEBB, costars with a fine flair for comedy in "Blithe Spirit," the new Noel Coward farce that opened a week's engagement in the National Theater last night. Leonora Corbett and Mildred Natwick complete the play's quartet of stars

'Blithe Spirit' Blithely Reveals Perils of the Plural Husband

By Nelson B. Bell

"BLITHE SPIRIT." John C. Wilson presents "an improbable farce," in three acts and seven scenes, by Noel Coward. Staged by Mr. Wilson; settings by Stewart Chaney. At the National Theater.

THE CAST

Edith.....Jacqueline Clarke
Ruth.....Peggy Wood
Charles.....Clifton Webb
Dr. Bradman.....Philip Tonge
Mrs. Bradman.....Phyllis Joyce
Madame Arcati.....Mildred Natwick
Elvira.....Leonard Corbett

Mr. Noel Coward, gazing into his crystal ball, saw delightful and delirious visions of what might happen to a debonair young man who had wed not wisely but too often. So incorporated these fantastic revelations in a stage piece called "Blithe Spirit."

"Blithe Spirit" was presented for the first time in Washington on the stage of the National Theater last evening to the huge enjoyment of a large and responsive audience, who perceived in it the gayest farce of this, or perhaps any other, season and further eloquent testimony to Mr. Coward's uncanny skill in giving body to the filmiest—please not filmsiest, Mr. Compositor—of dramatic materials.

In its opening passages, "Blithe Spirit" bears all of the honorable badges of thoroughly normal and conventional drawing-room comedy A husband and wife, each on a second matrimonial venture, are discussing the probable chicanery of a seance they are about to put on with a professional "medium" for the entertainment of Dr. and Mrs. Bradman, coming in for the evening. The conversation turns to Charles' first wife and the negligible degree to which her abundant charm differed from Ruth's. It is Coward in one of his more brittle moods.

Then arrives the clairvoyant, a voluble little woman, heavy with "controls," protoplasmic this and that and the hope of a concrete manifestation of the uniquely occult power she is not quite sure she possesses. The seance is an enormous triumph of optimism over doubt. Not only does Madame Arcati reach her "control," who "passed over," in 1884 and is still a girl of 7, suffering from a bad head cold, but by some miracle of accident materializes Charles' first ethereal helpmate, visible and audible only to the husband who never completely fulfilled her ideal of the perfect lover.

The domestic crisis precipitated by this ghostly visitation would seem to be trial enough, but when, in an effort to translate her former love to her own astral plane, Elvira brings about Ruth's death in a motor car crash and Mme. Arcati, in a futile effort to exorcise Edith's truant spirit and send her back where she belongs, only is successful in materializing the wraith of the second wife, the charade takes on qualities of fanciful and hugely diverting frivolity.

In fashioning his farce, Mr. Coward has dipped his pen in a bottle of the Thorne Smith ink, without retracing any of his characters or lines, and in placing it behind the footlights has been not unmindful of the eerie effects of invisibility disclosed upon the motion picture screen in such titillating exhibits as "The Invisible Man" and the "Topper" subjects. A little more imagination is required in the instant case, because all of the characters in "Blithe Spirit" are clearly and intriguingly visible to the audience side of the proscenium, if not to everyone on the other.

The cast of seven enter magnificently and merrily into the supremely blithe spirit of the supernatural lark and extract from it all of the breezy humor, the slightly mad mockery of marriage and the frailility of the mighty passions with which the author has stuffed it. Peggy Wood, Clifton Webb and Leonora Corbett, as the ectoplasmic triangle, play with the easy perfection of finished farceurs cast precisely in the Coward mold. Philip Tonge and Phyllis Joyce are fine complements in the secondary roles of Dr. and Mrs. Bradman and Mildred Natwick, for Madame Arcati, was an inspiration. Jacqueline Clarke, as Edith, the maid, who had more to do with the success of the Madame's experiments than anyone suspected, adds a quaintly comic touch of drollery to the otherwise smartly sophisticated proceedings.

Producer-director John C. Wilson's staging of the piece, Stewart Chaney's single setting and the "out-of-this-world" make-ups worn by Miss Wood and Miss Corbett in their apparitional appearances are not the least of the virtues of a play so preponderantly amusing that it can afford to retard its swift tempo briefly in the third act. An audience might burst a blood vessel otherwise!

Democratic Club Hears Breckinridge

Settled Policy Of This Nation Is to Resist Hitler, Women Are Told

By Lucia Giddens

A citizen who seeks to interfere with the execution of the Nation's "settled policy" of resistance to Hitler "is a marplot who skates close to treason," Col. Henry Breckinridge told the Woman's National Democratic Club yesterday at its Navy Day luncheon.

The speaker who is active in the Fight for Freedom Committee and who was Assistant Secretary of War in President Wison's Administration, prefaced that remark by saying that "through enactment of the lend-lease bill, representatives of the people have written the settled policy of this Nation to be resistance to Hitler till he and all his works have been destroyed."

Senator Carter Glass (Democrat), of Virginia, in his introduction of the speaker, expressed his viewpoint that "our Navy ought to go on the seas wherever it pleases to go."

Speaking at the club's headquarters on New Hampshire Avenue, Col. Breckinridge said:

"The latest dodge of the obstructionists is to play on our dislike of communism to stop aid to Russia in its fight."

He added that "the resistance of Russia has become a vital factor in American security."

The common sense of the American people "knows it is one thing to have Russia 56 miles across the Bering Strait and another thing to have Hitler there," he said.

Col. Breckinridge predicted that "the Nazis will be beaten in the battle of production," and added that "nothing makes me so sick and tired as the myth of Nazi invincibility."

U. S. Committed To Support China

To appease Japan at the expense of China "would be as futile, as dishonorable, as disastrous as the appeasement of Hitler at Munich," he said. "We are committed just as much to the support of China as we are committed to resistance to Hitler by Great Britain. Every assistance should be given the battling millions of China."

After America has helped to insure "the defeat and destruction of Hitler and his minions, then we can turn our energies to the vast and vital task of contributing to an organization of the world that gives some insurance against these terrible blood-baths," he said.

"My sympathy goes out to those who plan and work for a world order based on law and justice, 'the parliament of man, the federation of the world.' In the meantime let us keep our powder dry," he added.

Mrs. Fletcher Introduces Glass

Senator Glass was introduced by Mrs. W. Meade Fletcher, jr., chairman of the education committee. Mrs. Curtis Shears, president of the club, presided. Among others at the speakers' table were Mrs. Glass, Mrs. Paul V. McNutt, Michael Straight, vice chairman of Washington's Fight for Freedom Committee, and Mrs. Straight; Livingston Hartley of the Washington Committee to Defend America by Aiding the Allies; Mrs. Lucius Wilmerding, jr., of the Washington committee of Young America Wants to Help.

"The Europe That Is Passing" will be discussed by Clement E. Conger, formerly with the Washington bureau of the Chicago Tribune, at the meeting of the Carlyle Woman's Club of Alexandria at 8:30 tonight at Maury School.

Colored motion pictures of scenes in European cities will be shown. Proceeds will go to the general welfare fund of the club among whose interests are the Alexandria Hospital and the Alexandria Girls' Club.

Mrs. Gilmer Hoge is president of the club. Mrs. Glenn U. Richard is general chairman of the committee for tonight's program.

Luncheon Date Set

Mrs. W. Wintemute Sloan, president of the Political Study Club, and the executive board, will hold a luncheon at the Shoreham Hotel Monday, November 10, in honor of women of the press.

First Lady Attends Scout Program

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt yesterday visited National Girl Scouts Little House to see a demonstration of civilian defense activities as a feature of Girl Scout Week. Shown with her above are the Very Rev. Msgr. Edward Roberts Moore, of New York, who was presented a "Thanks Badge" by the National Board of the Scouts for his advice and help; Mrs. C. Leslie Glenn, a vice president of the Girl Scouts, and Marie Louise Ralph, who was the Girl Scouts' national delegate to the conference called by Mrs. Roosevelt last week for formulating a program of voluntary participation by youth in national defense

Pen Women Plan Creative Group Contests

The District Branch, National League of American Pen Women, as a feature of its defense program, will give awards in the monthly creative group contests in the form of defense stamps, it was announced yesterday.

Mrs. H. Lyle Campbell, president of the branch, is sponsoring a "patriotic story contest" and will give as prize for the best story submitted by members of the branch a national defense bond.

Angie Weaver Wright, art chairman of the branch, will open a class in oil painting at the Y. W. C. A. The class is planned especially as an outlet for women and girls who have come to Washington as workers in the defense program. Mrs. Wright, the wife of an Army major, studied at Corcoran Gallery of Art and established the class in art at the Honolulu Y. W. C. A.

J. Jeune Carter, branch chairman of drama, who is also regional chairman, has offered a prize for the best one-act play with a patriotic theme written by members of the branch. The drama group will hold its first meeting tonight at 8 o'clock at the studio.

The branch will hold a fellowship tea tomorrow from 3 to 6 o'clock at the studio.

Hostesses will be three new members of the league, Ruth Flanders McNaughton, Martha Norris McLeod and Bessie Wilmarth Gahn.

U. S. 'Larder' For World, A.A.U.W. Told

"We are becoming not only the arsenal but the larder of the nations that are fighting aggression," Dr. Eric Englund, assistant chief, Bureau of Agricultural Economics, Department of Agriculture, told the Washington branch of the American Association of University Women in a talk at its tea yesterday afternoon.

"Beleaguered Britain requires from us increased quantities of those foods which provide animal proteins, fats, fruits and vegetables," he said, pointing out that expansion in production of these foods is called for in the production goals for 1942.

"We are so situated that national shortage of agricultural products is not in prospect even with this great drain upon them," Dr. Englund said.

Speaking on "Agriculture's Contribution to National Defense," at the A. A. U. W. Clubhouse, Dr. Englund described developments in agriculture which, he said, "were an unrecognized preparation for meeting this oncoming emergency. This has to do with organization of farmers and governmental agencies.

"At the outbreak of the last war, we did not have anything like the present organization in agriculture," which, he said, would make for guidance and adjustments in the present situation.

Women Shoppers Group Will Be Tea Guests

Mrs. Cynthia Wentworth Hannum, president of the Washington League of Women Shoppers, will entertain members at tea at her home, 3004 North Thirtieth Street, Arlington, from 4 to 6 p. m. today.

D. A. R. Holds Ceremony at Alabama School

The Daughters of the American Revolution yesterday dedicated several new units of the Kate Duncan Smith School for mountain children, at Grant, Ala., with Mrs. William H. Pouch, president general, in charge of the program and a group of national officers in attendance.

At the school which is maintained by the D. A. R., ceremonies centered around the dedication of the Golden Jubilee Farm, given to the school by the Alabama Chapter of the D. A. R.; a new heating system contributed to nationally by practically every member of the organization; a classroom given by the Minnesota D. A. R.; two classrooms given by the Pennsylvania Chapter; and an office given by Mrs. Oscar W. Underwood in memory of her father.

The group of D. A. R. officials attending included some who went to Alabama from the national board of management meeting in Washington last week.

Among officials who had a part in planning the ceremony were Mrs. Joseph G. Forney, first vice president general; Mrs. William Floyd Bennison, third vice president general; Mrs. S. Tompkins, State regent of Pennsylvania; Mrs. Samuel James Campbell, of Mount Carroll, Illinois, treasurer general; Miss Harriet Simons, of Marshall, Mich., national chairman of the approved schools committee.

The school was founded 17 years ago by the Alabama Daughters of the American Revolution. It takes the place of several one-teacher schools scattered on the mountain, and has grown from a faculty of two teachers to 21. Seven buses are used to bring the 600 mountain children to the school from the surrounding countryside, since it is the only school within a radius of 75 miles.

The pupils and their parents are given vocational training. The school has a practice cottage to train its girl students in practical home-making. It also has a demonstration farm for the boys. A full-time health worker is maintained, to go over the mountain teaching the children and their parents better health habits.

Mrs. Harlan Stone Named to Board Of the Y. W. C. A.

Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone, wife of Chief Justice Stone, has been named to the board of directors of the Y. W. C. A., it was announced yesterday.

She and five other women were appointed to fill unexpired terms. The group, which will take their seats at the next board meeting November 26, includes Mrs. Wilbur J. Carr, Mrs. Eldred Dickinson, Mrs. Lynn R. Edminster, Mrs. J. Hillman Hollister and Mrs. Walter Ward.

Miss Mary J. Corbett, Y. W. A. secretary from Brazil, will speak at the first of a series of "World Fellowship" programs at the local Y. W. C. A. at a luncheon at 12:30 p. m. Thursday.

Mary Washington Unit Will Meet Saturday

A luncheon for alumnae of Mary Washington College, Fredericksburg, Va., in this vicinity will be held at 1:30 p. m. Saturday at Taft House Inn, 1603 K Street Northwest. A business meeting will follow.

Mrs. E. T. Creamer is in charge of reservations.

Inter-American Group to Meet

Members of the Inter-American Commission of Women, meeting in Washington during the first week in November, will be entertained at a luncheon at the Mayflower Hotel Saturday by the organized groups of Catholic women of Washington and vicinity.

Senora Ana Rosa de Martinez-Guerrero, representative from Argentina and chairman of the commission, and other members including Miss Mary Winslow, the representative of the United States, will be guests of honor.

Mrs. John F. Victory, president of the Washington auxiliary of the National Catholic School of Social Service, is general chairman of arrangements.

Republican Women To Fete Committee

The national defense committee of the League of Republican Women will be honored at a tea at 4:30 this afternoon at the clubhouse, 1612 Rhode Island Avenue.

Those pouring tea will be Mrs. James E. Watson, Mrs. R. A. Boone, Miss Temple Bailey, Miss Catherine Newton and Mrs. Joseph Herbert.

Pi Beta Phi Alumnae To Hear Talk on Peru

Frank J. Morris of the Pan American Union, will address the Washington Junior Alumnae Club of Pi Beta Phi, tonight at 9 o'clock at Columbian House, Twenty-first and G Streets Northwest.

Student life in Lima, Peru and his experiences while a student at the University of San Marcos will be the subject of Mr. Morris' talk.

Ready For Winter

Frigid temperatures will not concern this girl for she knows the Fieldcrest blanket on her bed will keep her like a pampered baby bunting. These blankets are woven with Celanese rayon yarn and myriads of unseen air spaces in the fiber provide lightness with the warmth. This blanket resists soil and dust. Good for a Christmas or wedding present because it is new, beautiful and pleasantly practical. Obtainable in peach, rose beige, dusty rose, winter rose, bland green, spring-flower blue and white

New Yarns Make Blankets Featherweight, Soil Resistant

By Martha Ellyn

The Post Household Editor

THE riotous color of the lovely trees around Washington this fall is equaled by the array of color found in the blanket departments of the stores.

Martha Ellyn

Time was when blankets were cumbersome, with no special appeal as to beauty—muddy grays dull tans and drab olives were the rule rather than the exception. But now the manufacturers have made blankets to give a feeling of real luxury—featherweight and lovely of color.

Among the newcomers in the fall blanket stock is a rayon mixture called "Celmar." It is composed of 50 per cent "Celanese Lanese" yarn, 25 per cent wool and 25 per cent cotton yarn. This combination of yarns gives the blanket not only the air-space necessary for warmth without excessive weight, but also gives lasting resiliency and resistance to soiling.

There's a wide range of colors from which to choose in these deeply napped and fluffy blankets. There is thus no difficulty in matching the color schemes of bedrooms. Another luxurious touch that makes the modern featherlight blanket so irresistable is the attractive binding of washable silk or rayon.

Caring For Blankets

Once the blanket is bought, it is up to the homemaker to see that the original beauty is kept intact. Of course, there is always the reliable dry-cleaner to whom to send blankets, but many housewives, especially if blessed with mechanical washing machines will want to launder them at home.

There are these important points to be remembered when washing blankets at home:

1. The ideal day for washing is a warm spring or fall day, when a breeze is stirring. Never wash blankets when temperature hovers around freezing point for they will not only shrink but roughen. A high wind is hard on wet wool fibers. High humidity also prevents rapid drying which is also important.

2. Wash but one blanket at a time. Shake thoroughly before washing to remove all loose dirt.

3. If binding is soiled, lay blanket on clean working surface and scrub with soft brush dipped in lather made of mild pure soap. Scrub gently. The same process may be used on spots on blanket itself.

4. Lukewarm temperature, 95-100 degrees is best, and if water is not soft it should be made so by borax or other mild softener. Borax should be added to water before soap is added. When scum forms remove, then add soap.

5. Rinse thoroughly two or three times in lukewarm water, removing water after each rinse. In the last rinse it is an excellent idea to use a reliable moth-proofing compound.

Machine Washing

6. If using washing machine, fill it with lukewarm water, using 3-inch suds made of mild soap. Run washer from 2 to 4 minutes. If blanket is not clean, remove water from blanket and wash second time for two minutes in fresh suds. Rinse two to three times, running washer about 2 minutes each time, removing water after each rinse. When wringer is used to extract water, be sure to loosen tension on the rollers. If spinner is used, do not run too long as it will cause wrinkles.

7. Hang blanket on clean clothesline, preferably covering line with something like an old sheet. Hang blanket on line lengthwise, with weight evenly distributed on each side. If a striped blanket, hang vertically. Never hang in direct sunlight and never use clothespins. Shake vigorously and press any water that may accumulate at bottom. Keep borders and edges straight. When partially dry, shake blanket gently and reverse it on clothes line. Never dry near artificial heat. After blanket is thoroughly dry brush with a soft brush to fluff nap, making sure to brush against the up and down of the nap.

8. Press binding with a warm iron (not hot) with a cloth between iron and the binding.

Ornament Instinct Dates Far Back

Ornament is a broad term that can cover a multitude of sins. It means every sort of decorative effect and it may be interpreted in almost any materials, color, form, texture or relief. As far back as we have the faintest glimmer of a record of man's activities, he expressed his striving for beauty in ornamental embellishments. So truly has man always reflected himself in his ornament that we can regard it as an accurate index of his time and read much about his activities and his philosophies from his idiom of ornament.

Mother Worries Because Her Nice Looking Son, A Junior in a Good Military School, Shows No Interest in Girls, Parties or Dancing

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have a son, almost 17 years of age, who is a junior in a good military school. He is a nice looking boy with a pleasing personality. The school has a Cotillion Club which holds several dances during the year. Because I feel that some social life is necessary for everyone, I have wanted my son to join the club; but so far, I have been unable to persuade him to do so.

He does not dance, which may account for his attitude. However, for the past two years, I have repeatedly offered to finance dancing lessons for him; but he shows no interest in the offer. While he has never dated girls, he isn't shy or ill at ease in their presence; and is extremely well liked by adults, because he is an amusing and entertaining youngster.

He has never had many friends his own age, and judging by what other parents say about their 17-year-olds' activities, he seems to lead an unusually sedate life. I have encouraged him to participate in social life, but he doesn't do anything about it, although he gives no reasons why. Should I just let nature take its course? Or should I try to help him in some way? K. W. M.

His Self-Sufficiency Should Be Respected

DEAR K. W. M.: In the matter of "social activities," persons of all ages tend to follow the pattern which makes them feel most comfortable—and the fact that your son shies away from girls, "dates" and dancing parties, when his circumstances are such that he could, if he would, be cutting something of a figure with the opposite sex, suggests that the most thoughtful thing you can do for him is to let him alone in his choice.

His social personality (as described), as well as his academic progress, indicate that he is "doing all right," in sticking to the slightly monastic course of action he seems to prefer. In working his way up to the status of junior classman in a "good military school," he has necessarily undergone a toughening and polishing process which would accentuate whatever qualities of self sufficiency and self containment are native to his character.

Since his poise and reserve are such that he can contentedly go his own way, apart from the "Cotillion Club" crowd, at the same time withholding the reasons for his preference from you, I judge him to be a strongly individual character, who has a somewhat precociously mature disinterest in juvenile-type frivolity. It is not uncommon for intelligent, well poised, socially personable youths to deliberately—even patronizingly—eschew the adolescent social whirl; and then, in the early twenties, to show excellent judgment with regard to the opposite sex, whether in falling in love or choosing a wife.

Says Engaged Persons Shouldn't Date Others

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Why do engaged couples insist that each keep on having dates with other friends up to the time the wedding date is set? The question is prompted by a sentence in a letter signed, "Undergraduate," which was published in your column of October 24. (In asking advice for his fiancee, who is troubled by another man's insistent court, he explains: "Both of us are 'dating' others until the time comes when we can set a definite date for our wedding.")

Granted that an engagement is a tentative commitment, and that, if either person is going to "lose his head" over someone else, it is better it happened before final vows are taken—still, it seems that such speculations should have been dismissed before the engagement was entered into, and that the interim before marriage should be regarded as a time for determining whether or not the engaged couple will tire of each other's exclusive company.

It is one thing to be exclusively in love with a man; and another thing entirely for a girl's devotion to him to be diluted by her affectional relationships with other boys who have some form of attraction for her. Though she may not realize it, an engaged girl who continues, during the betrothal period, to enjoy the attentions of Tom, Dick and Harry up to the last minute, is running a risk of making the adjustment to marriage more difficult for herself. She is going to feel "let down," afterward—to a degree commensurate with the number of hours she kept until the eleventh hour.

It seems better that the engagement period be utilized by each person to acquire some understanding of what life will be like, in the event he makes a final, binding choice in favor of the one versus the many. It is grossly unfair, to the individual and the marriage, to sign away one's freedom, until one has demonstrated, to his own and the other person's satisfaction, that the variety of experiences and associations each must forego, in process of making a good and a happy marriage, count a naught when compared with the values inherent in their exclusive companionship. Sincerely, S. M. J.

Economy in Cooking

If this country were really serious about the business of economizing, we might take a tip from the Italians . . . a big home in Italy often has no oven, but cooks on what we might call a hot plate. The baking and roasting is well done at a neighborhood rotisserie or commercial kitchen . . . think of the saving of fuel, equipment and labor that would mean.

Don't Worry, All You Need Is Symmetry

By Ida Jean Kain

IF YOU have a decidedly slight or stocky frame, you couldn't possibly get down or up to the specifications that are supposedly standard for your height. But don't let that worry you.

Any attempt to standardize measurements solely on the basis of height is the height of the ridiculous. The width of your bones is just as tangible a factor as their length. And not only that, but your frame makes a difference in what you should weigh for your height, and there's something else to be reckoned with.

So you can't go by the nice pat rules to the effect that the girl five feet tall should have a 25-inch waistline with an extra half inch of waistline for each extra inch of height or that she should measure 30 inches around the bust with an allowance of another inch for each inch of height.

Rules Really Simple

Both rules are so simple that it seems too bad not to be able to follow them. But the 25-inch waistline standard wouldn't work out for the slightly built girl—and the 30-inch bust standard wouldn't work out for anyone else.

What you want is symmetry. That means a nicely proportioned difference between your measurements, with structure and weight given their due. You have a lovely figure IF—

Your weight is within 10 per cent of normal for your structure.

Your waist is from eight to ten inches smaller than your bust.

Your hips and bust tally, or the hipline is not more than three inches larger.

But you can't have any such proportions unless you take a certain amount of regular exercises. A few minutes' exercise daily will make a much greater improvement in your figure than an hour of exercise now and then.

Some Reconditioning

When you take up exercise after a lapse of several years, you will have a bit of reconditioning to do before you can expect visible results. It takes about a week for you to get into shape to exercise. The soreness in your muscles doesn't usually reach its peak for three days and doesn't leave you for another three. After that you will begin to see changes. Even before your measurements register a loss, your figure will have smoother lines.

Once you are in good condition, it should be easy for you to slim an inch a month off the waist, half that much off the hips, and gradually improve the bust contour. At that rate, the results themselves will spur you on toward perfect proportions.

Grow Winter House Plants

Beautiful enough to be the star of your house plants, it's not the least temperamental. Like most plants it just wants a little of the right care. Give it a moderately sunny spot, sandy soil, and a medium amount of water.

In the same window the novel pickaback plant can share the spotlight. (The name comes from the fact that little green leaves grow "piggy-back" on top of the old ones.) This time it's a case of plenty of water and not too much strong sunlight.

For spots where there's no sun—a coffee table or buffet—there's always the popular African violet. It appreciates a weekly soaking with the whole pot submerged in water. But be careful never to get water on the leaves!

Duke and Duchess To Dine With President

Windsors to Have Luncheon at White House Today but Mrs. Roosevelt Won't Be There

BULLETIN

In a dramatic last minute announcement at midnight last night, it was learned that Mrs. Roosevelt, though still unable to lunch with the Windsors, will receive them at the Office of Civilian Defense on Dupont Circle at 10 o'clock in the morning. The Windsors took an earlier train than their schedule called for in order to comply with the new plans.

By Hope Ridings Miller

They're coming back again—the Duke and the Duchess of Windsor, of course, and a number of columnists who have had a Roman holiday writing about that "White House snub" are going to have to eat their words. Well, part of them anyway. For the former King of England and his Baltimore belle are going to have luncheon with the President after all.

HOPE RIDINGS MILLER

With the President, yes. But not Mrs. Roosevelt. Noon today will find her on her way to Chicago where, according to a statement at her press conference yesterday, she had an engagement to speak long before she knew the Windsors were planning a trip to Washington.

Now loyal as are the ladies of the press to the First Lady, a lot of them have been pretty perturbed that she hasn't made it a point to entertain the one American woman who managed to marry a former King of England. In view of the fact that Mrs. Roosevelt has entertained a string of guests recently, including Lord and Lady Mountbatten, it seemed only fair that the Governor of the Bahamas and his wife should be asked to break bread in the State dining room. So, at yesterday's conference her announcement that the Windsors were to be feted at the White House—at long last, but without benefit of hostess—had hardly settled when Mrs. Roosevelt found herself facing a barrage of questions.

Was there any foundation to the stories that she disliked the duchess? That she was dead set against having the Windsors entertained at the White House? That she had purposely arranged to be out of town today while the couple was being feted?

With more emotion than she usually displays, the First Lady made it clear that plans for the Windsor luncheon had been sprung on her at the last minute—or rather at tea time on Sunday. The President had told her then, and "it was too late" to do anything about her lecture in Chicago.

"Can't Cancel . . . at Last Minute"

Continuing, she quashed rumors that she is prejudiced against the duke and duchess and does not wish to meet them at her own table. "That's ridiculous," she said. "I should be delighted to see them here, but you can't cancel a contract made six months ago at the last minute. I must lecture in Chicago tomorrow, and that's that."

Arrangements for the party were made by the State Department, she continued, and powers-that-be there didn't fit their schedule to hers. "And even if they had, I would have been unable to cooperate at any time during the past weeks," she went on. "I haven't had one free minute since October 1."

She added that whatever "social lunching and dining" she had done recently had a heavy aura of business about it, or included personal friends, "and I have never met the Duchess of Windsor," she said.

From Chicago Mrs. Roosevelt will go on to St. Cloud, Minn., for another lecture. She will return East on Friday and go directly to Hyde Park where Crown Princess Juliana of the Netherlands and her two children will be her guests until next Tuesday. Also expected to spend the weekend at Hyde Park will be Canadian Prime Minister Mackenzie King, who will arrive Saturday.

American-Born "M. P." Coming Soon

Whispers and Drumbeats: You can add another to the list of distinguished American-born Britishers scheduled for a Washington visit this season. Arriving here in a few weeks will be Mrs. Beatrice Clough Rathbone, who in March, 1941, became a member of Parliament, succeeding her husband, Flight Lieut. John R. Rathbone. He was killed in bombing operations over Germany. The second American-born woman to hold a seat in the House of Commons, Mrs. Rathbone is the only daughter of Mrs. F. Roland Clough, of Boston. She was born in New Haven and atended the Ethel Walker School, Simsbury, Conn., and has two children, John and Pauline, who are now staying with their uncle, Paul L. Hammond, of New York.

Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Hurley have leased the Frederick Atherton house at 2412 Massachusets Avenue for the winter and will move there some time soon from Belmont, their Leesburg, Va., estate . . . After seeing attractive Peggy Wood in Noel Coward's "Blithe Spirit" last night, I can hardly wait to read her book of reminiscences, "How Young You Look," to be published November 5 . . . Mr. and Mrs. Sterling Lacy will entertain at luncheon on Sunday at their Virginia home.

Arrival of President Thrills Navy League Diners

Gay Uniforms Lend Color to Stately 'Black Tie' Affair

By Patricia Grady

The rustling of the emerald velvet curtains behind the speakers' table in the ballroom of the Mayflower Hotel last night made Washington officialdom and society desert their after-dinner coffee at the gala Navy League dinner to excitedly ask each other, "Do you suppose he's coming, after all?" And the Commander in Chief of the Army and Navy did come—despite his previously announced plans to the contrary—to give the properly dramatic climax to a thrilling event that combined the festivity of gay society with the forcefulness of our national defense viewpoint and program.

With the Marine Band playing, American flags on every wall, Army, Navy and Marine insignias flying, and miniature life savers labeled "U. S. Navy," hanging from the second-floor boxes, the Mayflower ballroom was the perfect background against which to display the long speaker's table at which sat the most distinguished of the Capital's masculine officials. Almost every member of the Supreme Court found his place at the table, interspersed with a number from the Cabinet and enough high-ranking officers to call a staff meeting of any of our defense corps. And at the small tables filling the main room and overflowing into the room beyond were the wives of most of those at the head table and a myriad of well-known Washingtonians from every branch of society but diplomatic.

Gold-Encrusted Uniforms Out Number Dinner Jackets

A "black tie" affair, the number of gold-encrusted uniforms outnumbered dinner jackets two to one. Indeed, everything had a service emphasis, from the mess call to the menu.

"I like beans," said Mrs. William Stanley, who, with her husband, entertained a table of friends. And it was a good thing she did. Navy bean soup started out the meal that included Navy best brisket, Mulligan, string beans, Marines and aviation apple pie—not to mention the good neighbor coffee. And after the dinner came the sentiments of the gathering as epitomized by Rear Admiral Emory S. Land. Said he, to thunderous applause, "The greatest navy in the world is the dream of every true American!"

Many Are Hosts To Large Parties

Among the many hosts were Maj. and Mrs. R. M. Stewart-Richardson, who had in their party Rear Admiral H. Pott, naval attache of the British Embassy, and Mrs. Pott; the assistant naval attache of the same embassy, Commander W. S. Jameson and Mrs. Jameson, Admiral Sir Wilfred French and Lady French and Admiral and Mrs. W. R. G. Dorling. Mrs. Lawrence Wood Robert, jr., entertained at a large table and Mr. and Mrs. Max Truitt brought a group of friends. With the William Stanleys were Justice Howard Stephens and Mrs. Stephens, who was wearing a pink blouse with her black skirt, and Miss Ann Callaghan. Mrs. Emory Land, in a lavender and white print, accepted congratulations on her husband's speech. Robert Fleming went from table to table greeting friends. Mrs. Irene Caldwell, in a black pleated chiffon dress trimmed in turquoise velvet, was with Mr. and Mrs. Charles Duell and Capt. and Mrs. Phillip B. Eaton.

Among the scores of others were, of course, Mrs. Frank Knox, who headed the list of patronesses for the event—her husband went to Detroit to deliver a Navy Day dinner speech—Dwight Davis, who had entertained the honor guests at a cocktail party in the Pan American Room before the party; Robert Lincoln O'Brien, Dr. Z. Barney Phillips, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel C. Roper, Senator Tom Connally, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Warren, Mrs. Clarence Lea, Mr. and Mrs. J. Lawrence Houghteling, and Gen. Albert Cox.

Party for Lady Patricia Latham Is Given at Martin Vogel Home

Former Premier Chautemps and Wife, Valentine Williams, Are Among the Guests

The party was for Lady Patricia Latham, attractive visitor who has been widely feted the past few days, but she was only one of several popular guests at the "after 6 o'clock" get-together given yesterday by Mrs. Martin Vogel and Baron and Baroness Stackelberg at the Vogel home on Woodland Drive.

Camille Chautemps, former premier of France, and his dark-haired wife who apparently doesn't speak a word of English, had a crowd around them from the moment they arrived. Valentine Williams, well-known British novelist, who says he hasn't "written a word since Munich," was flanked by friends, while his wife, formerly of the British stage, was telling an interested circle that she and her husband will spend the next few days in New York to close their apartment, and then will come back to Washington for the season. Mr. Williams is working with the British Trade Commission here.

Mrs. Vogel, receiving guests wherever she happened to be, wore a simple frock of black crepe, accented with a two-strand string of pearls, and a gardenia on one shoulder. Baroness Stackelberg, also attired in black, stood near Lady Patricia, who had chosen a black frock, softly draped and fashioned with a net bodice. A string of pearls was her only ornament.

Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Watson, with whom Lady Patricia is staying, were among those dressed for the theater, where they were going immediately after the party. Effingham Townsend moved from group to group and seemed to know everyone there, as did her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Martin Vogel, jr. . . . On her way to the Navy Day dinner, Mrs. McCeney Werlich was gowned in a black crepe frock, cut on simple lines. "They told us to dress up for the Navy party," she said, "and I did." . . . Clarence Hewes was urging everybody to come to the dinner at which John Cudahy is to speak next week. . . . Mrs. Henry Beall Gwynn, hatless and with a silver fox coat draped over her shoulders, chatted with the Allan Moultons. . . . Judson Bowles and Meade Patrick hovered around the guest of honor.

George Abell was telling friends he would be off to New York today, returning to town the end of the week. . . . Dr. Eugene de Savitsch was in a talkative threesome that included Mrs. William T. Mann and Mrs. Sims Snow. . . . Natalie Keeney Phillips chatted merrily with first one group and then another.

Mrs. Ollie James was there; also Mr. and Mrs. William P. MacCracken, Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Prochnik, Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Hatch and Col. and Mrs. M. Robert Guggenheim. Still others—to mention but a few in the throng—were Edward Van Devanter, Miss Peggy Wagner, denying reports of her engagement to Jimmy Parks; Mrs. Thomas Adams, Mr. and Mrs. Morris Cafritz, the Brazilian Second Secretary and Mme. Hugo Gouthier, Mr. and Mrs. Carlton Holdrege and several dozen more.

Alys Matthiessen, J. B. Okie Engaged

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph H. Matthiessen, of Marshall, Va., and Irvington-on-Hudson, New York, announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Alys V. Matthiessen, to John B. Okie, son of Mrs. Houston L. Gaddis, and the late Frederick W. Okie, also of Marshall, Va.

Brilliant Audience at Opening Of Astral Show at National

"Blithe Spirit" was the most brilliant thus far this season. Row on row of well-known Washingtonians, and a scattering of out-of-towners, accented the crowd that completely filled the better seats at the National Theater.

"Never knew this town had so many smart-looking people," said a photographer from a national fashion magazine, down from New york particularly to cover the opening. At that mment, he was turning his candid camera on the Argentine Ambassador and Senora de Espil, as they alighted from their car and made their way into the theater, through an enormous crowd.

Coming in a second later were Sir Anthony and Lady Rumbold, of the British Embassy, with a large party; Mrs. Sidney Lee with Mrs. Eugene Carusi, Miss Margaret Frazer in a party of four and Mrs. Davies Walker, accompanied by Col. Burdette Fitch.

Valentine Williams, who numbers Playwright Noel Coward among his acquaintances, and Mrs. Williams, who also knows him, was in the audience when Coward's story of one man, a medium, and a former wife from astral sphere entertained the crowd from beginning to end. Another author among those present was Mrs. Frances Parkinson Keyes.

Arriving almost half an hour after the curtain went up was a foursome, who created a stir in the center section. Producing their tickets and handing them to an usher, they stood in the aisle and obscured the view for quite a number of people while the usher had four women move to the row in front. Then the foursome was seated, and the show went on.

Although the audience was an exceptionally distinguished one, official notables were conspicuous by their absence. (Probably all went to the Navy Day dinner.) However, the record turn-out from residential and diplomatic circles more than made up for these celebrities not present.

Mr. and Mrs. William Edmonston Pearson arrived with their daughter, Miss Edith Pearson, and her fiance, McCullough Darlington.

Clarence Hewes was seen in the throng chatting with friends between acts. Mr. and Mrs. Edmund Pavenstedt were there, also Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Elliston, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Krock and Lady Patricia Latham with the Kenneth Watsons. Still others there included Mrs. Breckinridge Bayne, Mrs. Robert E. Lee 3d, several members of the British Embassy staff and many, many more.

Mrs. Lippmann Planning Tea For Daughter

A number of Washingtonians found in their mail yesterday an invitation from Mr. and Mrs. Walter Lippmann, and another name was added to the list of debutantes for 1941-42.

The young lady is Miss Gregor Armstrong, daughter of Mrs. Lippmann, and the tea planned in her honor is to take place at the Lippmann home, 1525 Thirty-fifth street, on Friday, November 7, from 5 to 7 o'clock.

Miss Armstrong's father is Hamilton Fish Armstrong, editor of Foreign Affairs magazine. She has visited in Washington frequently and was feted last Christmas at a dinner given by Mrs. Lipmann. Miss Armstrong is now a sophomore at Bryn Mawr College. Before entering there she studied at Milton Academy.

Kay Boyle Entertained Here, Bemoans Rain Marring Visit

Washington's weather man is not listed among Miss Kay Boyle's friends. Bemoans this writer, "The first day in 20 years that I have been able to crowd a visit to Washington into my schedule, it rains."

At the Shoreham for a brief stay, Miss Boyle went to Baltimore yesterday where she spoke before the emergency rescue committee. Back to Washington she was entertained at a cocktail party at the Shoreham by Mr. and Mrs. Watron Clay, of Nyack, N. Y., and Washington.

Since she has lived in Europe for many years, having come back to the United States the first part of July, Miss Boyle's books and articles have a definite European flavor, but she wants to go West and live on a ranch so that she can start writing about America. She says she feels like an American again since she has been teaching a class in creative writing and contemporary literature at Nyack, where she is making her home.

Two of Miss Boyle's books—one of concentration camps in France and one called "Armistice Diary," which tells about the first four months of the French armistice—are due out in the spring. A short story, "Let There be Honor," will appear in next week's Saturday Evening Post.

Accompanying Miss Boyle to Washington is Mrs. Caresse Crosby, the poet. Mrs. Crosby thinks the greatest compliment to her work came after the death of Lawrence of Arabia, when a visit to his room revealed his favorite books on a table at his bedside. One of the books was a volume of Mrs. Crosby's poems.

Aside from her writing, her teaching creative writing, and her work with the emergency rescue committee, which is devoted to freeing intellectuals from French concentration camps, Miss Boyle has time for skiing and horseback riding and doing illustrations for a magazine which her four children write. The children have interesting names, Sharon, Apple, Kathe and Clover. Each name was given for a definite purpose. When Apple was born, Miss Boyle and her husband had hoped for a boy to be called Apple Jack; but since they had a girl she was named Apple Joan. If when she grows up she becomes self conscious about being named Apple, then she can use the name Joan.

The Ledbetters On Honeymoon

Lieut. and Mrs. Selman Alfonso Ledbetter, jr., who were married recently, now are on a honeymoon trip through the Shenandoah Valley.

The former Miss Mary Gertrude Smith, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hubert Kenneth Smith, of 4927 Brandywine Street, and Lieut. Ledbetter, son of Mr. and Mrs. Selman A. Ledbetter, were married at the Elbrooke Methodist Church on Saturday, October 18, Dr. Walter M. Michael officiated at the 4:30 ceremony.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was wearing a gown of ice blue satin, fashioned with marquisette yoke, full train, and a fingertip veil of the same shade, held to her hair by a coronet of orange blossoms. She carried a handkerchief which had been used by her aunt, Mrs. Rosewell Smith for 40 years. The bridal bouquet was of gardenias, centered with a white orchid.

Miss Frances Lee Jackson was the maid of honor and was gowned in hyacinth-blue taffeta, with a Juliet cape of matching material. She carried a muff of pink carnations and blue delphinium.

Bridesmaids were Miss Rose Mary Riley and Miss Mary Bell, of Greenville, S. C., cousins of the bride. They wore shell pink dresses of the same pattern and design as that of the maid of honor, with Juliet caps of matching color, and carried muffs of fuschia carnations.

Following the ceremony there was a reception at the home of the bride's parents. The bride attended Averett College in Danville, Va., and Lieut. Ledbetter attended the Georgia School of Technology at Atlanta. Both are descendants of prominent Georgia families.

Several to Assist At Fields Benefit

A number of British and American young women will assist when the Variety Club brings Gracie Fields to Constitution Hall on November 1 for the British War Relief Society. The Misses Sheila Broderick, M. Harries, Jacinthe Underwood, Lady Maureen Noel and the Mesdames Charles C. Brown and T. R. Newton-Dunn are among the British contingent. The Americans who have agreed to help include the Misses Rhoda Armstrong, Barbara Baird, Mildred Dunn, Sylvia McNeale, Patricia Baker and the Mesdames Eugene Carusi, Jasper Dubois, Randall Hagner, jr., and C. Symington.

Hardie Meakin, president (chief barker) of the Variety Club, is honorary chairman of the club's committee working for the affair with Carter Barron acting as general chairman. Serving with them are John J. Payette, A. E. Lichtman, Rudolph Berger, Harry Anger, Gene Ford, Harry Krivit, Sidney Lust, Archie Engel, Eddie Norris, Dan S. Terrell, Frank LaFalce, Charles Stofberg, Bernie Harrison, Nelson B. Bell, Jay Carmody and Sam Galanty.

The British War Relief Society committee for the performance is under the chairmanship of Mrs. Robert Low Bacon and Mr. Thomas P. Morgan, jr., and includes Mrs. Shreve Cowles Badger, Philip Marshall Brown, G. Elmer Flather, William J. Fletcher, Charles Carroll Glover, jr., Frank R. Jelleff, Mark Lansburgh, Mrs. Roger Makins, John Newbold, Chauncey Parker, jr., Ord Preston, John Reilly, Mrs. Lewis Sanders and Mrs. E. G. Warren.

The Chapmans Fete Governor Of Michigan

The Assistant Secretary of the Interior and Mrs. Oscar Chapman had a chance to show off their new apartment at the Westchester to friends who dropped in to meet the Governor of Michigan, Murray D. Van Waggoner, at an informal 5-to-7 cocktail party yesterday afternoon.

Gov. Van Waggoner, who will return Wednesday to his home in Michigan, is in Washington for conferences with the national defense agencies in an attempt to settle the problem of the reallocation of labor in his domain which has recently become a major State arsenal of the Nation. At the party were his sister, Esther Van Waggoner Tuffty, and her husband, Harold Tuffty.

Mrs. Maury Maverick, who was wearing a green-trimmed rust hat with her checkered sports jacket, was deploring the housing situation. She is here for several weeks visiting her husband, who is now in the national defense setup, but plans to return to San Antonio, Tex., soon. Mrs. Raymond Clapper, setting off her black moire hat with a perky bow of cerise velvet, chatted with the former Assistant Secretary of State, Henry F. Grady, who has just returned from a special mission to the Far East. Mrs. Clapper herself had gotten into Washington only the day before from a speaking tour of the Midwestern States. The hostess, setting off her simple black dress with coral jewelry, was assisted by Mrs. Wendell Lund, who was wearing a black felt breton with her matching dress. Mr. Lund, the director of the unemployment compensation commission for Michigan, accompanied Gov. Van Waggoner on his visit to Washington.

Others at the party were Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Stokes—she in a chic humpty-dumpty hat of gay red suede—Mrs. Basil Manly, all in blue, who said she was expecting her husband to drop in later; Maury Maverick, Drew Pearson, Monroe Johnson and others who clustered around the dining room table which was centered with a bouquet of yellow and rust chrysanthemums and green candles in four silver candlesticks.

Miss Dunlop Is Engaged

Of wide interest in Washington is the announcement of the engagement of Miss Katharine Lyon Dunlop, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James N. Dunlop, of New York and Point o' Woods, Long Island, to Winthrop Greenfield Loomis, son of Mr. and Mrs. Archie Harwood Loomis, of New York and Norfolk, Conn.

Miss Dunlop is a descendant on her paternal side of William Cabell, one-time Governor of Virginia and chief judge of the Virginia Court of Appeals; also, of Paul Carrington, member of the Virginia Constitutional Convention of 1788, and of Cornelius Dabney, Huguenot settler in Virginia. She was graduated from the Master School, Dobbs Ferry, N. Y.

On her mother's side, Miss Dunlop is descended from Col. Robert Blackwell, who settled in Newtown, Long Island, about 1655. Blackwell's Island takes its name from him. She is descended also from Abraham Clark, signer of the Declaration of Independence; John Winthrop, of Massachusetts, and John Howland of the Mayflower.

The prospective bridegroom is a grandson of the late Archibald G. Loomis, former president of the Aetna National Bank, of Hartford, Conn., and later first vice president of the National City Bank of New York. Mr. Loomis is also descended from Capt. Joseph Wadsworth, of the Connecticut colony. He is now associated with the Brewster Aeronautical Corporation.

Miss Pat Jarrett, Of Australian Legation, Is Feted

On the eve of departing for her own Australia, "down under," Miss Pat Jarrett of the Australian Legation was entertained at luncheon yesterday in the private dining room of the Willard Hotel. The guest of honor, who will leave Washington on November 14, was gowned in black, over which she wore silver fox. With it she wore an exotic looking large-brimmed matching hat and a corsage of gardenias.

Miss Jarrett will take a plane for the West Coast and sail from Los Angeles on the Mariposa on November 15, which will get her to Australia the first week in December. She will rejoin the staff of the Melbourne Herald, which she left two years ago to come to Washington, and will start immediately on a series of articles about American women.

Those who attended yesterday's luncheon included Mrs. Richard G. Casey, wife of the Australian Minister; Miss Pat O'Malley, Mrs. John O'Donnell, Mrs. Marcellus Hughes, Mrs. Esther Van Wagoner Tuffy, Miss Alice Hagar, Miss Katherine Holmes, Miss Virginia Stanley, Miss Jackie Martin, Mrs. H. Williams Jones and Mrs. John O. Herrick.

400 Women Join in Rally Of Symphony Committee

By Martha McLean

Center of a throng of femininity, when the Women's Committee for the National Symphony Orchestra turned out almost 400 strong for a midcampaign luncheon yesterday at the Mayflower, the lone male present—J. P. Hayes, orchestra manager—let not his head be turned, stuck doggedly to the matter at hand and reminded his audience of their job to "acquaint the many newcomers and reacquaint seasoned Washingtonians with the Wednesday night concert series."

As no single seats will be sold this year, he brought out that although Washington is not the first to put their concerts on an all-subscription basis, it is the first major symphony city to do so.

Introducing Mr. Hayes was Mrs. Cloyd Heck Marvin, chairman for the Wednesday concerts. Mrs. Marvin, in turn, had been introduced by Mrs. Walter Bruce Howe, who is chairman of the woman's committee.

Seated at the speakers' table were Mrs. Reeve Lewis, Mrs. Edward McCauley, Mrs. Peter Belin, Mrs. George Myers, Mrs. R. H. Dunlap, Baroness von Boetzlaer, Mrs. George Garrett, Mrs. Edward Finkenstaedt, Mrs. Charles Henderson, Mrs. Corcoran Thom, Mrs. Edwin Watson, Mrs. Corrin Strong, Mrs. Milton King, Mrs. Foster Adams, Mrs. Harold Marsh, Mrs. Daniel Borden, Mrs. Edwin Parker, Miss Harriett Johnson, Mrs. Robert LeFevre, Mrs. Arthur Lyon and Mrs. Carl Droop. Busy directing photographers and seeing that arriving notables found their correct seats was Mrs. Robert H. Dunlap, who is handling publicity for the group.

Also noted among those present were Mrs. Carroll Glover, jr., Mrs. Stanley Woodward, Mrs. Adela K. Paine, Mrs. Eugene Carusi, Mrs. Robert Hooker, jr., Miss Emily Davis, Mrs. Randall Hagner, jr., and Mrs. John Wilkins, jr.

Mrs. Robert Wilson, who headed the Junior League at one time, was seen at a table made up largely of members of that group. At another table were Mrs. J. D. Burrus, Mrs. Harding Bancroft, Mrs. E. A. Hitchcock, Mrs. Gerard Smith, Mrs. Charles Jill, Mrs. Joseph H. Morey, jr., Mrs. James Moore, jr., Mrs. Townsend Munson, Mrs. Thomas E. Covel and Mrs. Gerard Miller.

Ushering for the occasion were Mrs. Dorothy Borden, Mrs. Fairfax Leary, Mrs. James Brown, Mrs. Livingston Hartley, Mrs. Lloyd Symington (the former Miss Nancy Glover), Mrs. Edward Page, Miss Maisie Howard, Miss Anne Wilkinson and Mrs. David Barry.

Barbara Kent Finishes Air Trip by Bus

The guest of honor had planned to arrive from New York via the skyways in her own plane, but due to yesterday's pessoup fog, Miss Barbara Kent, famous British aviatrix, was grounded just outside of Belair, Md.; finished her trip prosaically by bus, and arrived an hour late at the party given for her by Miss Elaine Darlington, at the latter's home on New Hampshire Avenue.

However, once she arrived the party went merrily on, with a group of guests mutually interested in aviation exchanging reminiscences and adventures. Miss Kent, who is here only briefly, is scheduled to make a series of personal appearances at the Bundles for Britain circus this week.

Many of Younger Set Attend Cocktail Affair

Guests of Miss Darlington and her parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Angus Garrett, were Felix duPont, Lieut. Comdr. Charles Thomas, Miss Barbara Mallory, Harry Schwartz, the hostess' brother, McCullough Darlington, and his fiancee, Miss Edith Pearson, Miss Audrey Walker, and Miss Sita Finkenstaedt.

Lord and Lady Halifax will head the list of notables occupying boxes at tonight's opening of the Miller's All-Star circus for the benefit of Bundles for Britain, at Riverside Stadium.

The three-ring circus will start at 8:30, with nightly performances at that time on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, and a midnight show on Thursday. The matinee performances starting tomorrow begin at 3:30.

Mrs. Wales Latham To Be Guest of Mrs. Garrett

Mrs. Garret, general chairman of Bundles, is having Mrs. Wales Latham, national president of Bundles for Britain, and Senora Angel Sanchez-Elia as her guests.

Many of the holders of boxes are planning dinner parties before going to the circus.

Lord and Lady Halifax will have in their box Admiral Sir Charles and Lady Little, Sir Arthur and Lady Salter, Col. and Mrs. Rex Benson, Air Commodore H. N. Thornton and Capt. Harold Balfour.

In addition to the circus, the crowning of "Miss Defense" and the baby champions in the contests sponsored by Bundles for Britain, will be two features of the four-day show.

Mrs. Burleigh Motoring to West

Mrs. William Burleigh, jr., daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Peters, of Cleveland Park, is motoring with her mother to the West Coast. From there Mrs. Burleigh will sail for Honolulu to join her husband, who is flying there from the East.

Mr. and Mrs. Burleigh will visit in Hawaii for a month before they return to the United States.

Mrs. Keyes To Go Southh

Now busy with lists for the advance copies of her newest novel, "All that Glitters," which will be off the presses in the next few days, Mrs. Frances Parkinson Keyes is already completing plans to depart for New Orleans to get material for another story.

When she will leave has yet to be settled, but it will be sometime soon. Mrs. Keyes plans to spend the winter there and lease her Alexandria home, Tradition, during that time. "All That Glitters," with the Nation's Capital as background, is being issued in a first edition of 45,000, which is 20,000 above the usual average for first edition, itself an indication of the demand for all of the Keyes' stories.

Mrs. W. W. Sloan Gives Luncheon

Mrs. Wintemute William Sloan entertained at luncheon yesterday in honor of some of the members of various committees of the Political Study Club, of which she is president. Following the luncheon guests stayed on to play bridge. Prizes were Defense Stamps.

15 Miners Die As Kentucky Blast Traps 48

By the United Press

Nortonville, Ky., Oct. 27.—Fifteen miners trapped by an explosion in the Daniel Boone Coal Mine were found dead tonight by a rescue crew.

The dead were part of a complement of 48 workmen which had entered the shaft shortly before a mysterious blast at 7:30 a. m.

The 33 remaining miners were pulled to safety earlier in the day. They had not entered the diversion channel in which their 15 companions were trapped and asphyxiated.

The first body was found tonight a half mile from the main air shaft through which workers entered the pit. Pushing further into the tunnel amid deadly gas the rescue squad found the other 14 bodies scattered along a quarter-mile stretch. The men apparently were overcome by gas from the explosion as they fought to return to the principal air shaft.

Bodies Being Removed

Under direction of Moss Pattison, Kentucky State mine inspector, workmen began removing the bodies. Pattison said it would take two hours to complete the removal.

The dead were:

The victims were from the towns of St. Charles, White Plains, Daniel Boone and Nortonville.

Survivor Tells Story

One of the rescued miners, Elbert Rayney, 30, described his experience as follows:

"We were working about half a mile from the entrance when we heard a muffled explosion and a strong gust of wind rushed up the tunnel. It was so strong it blew the harness off our mules and knocked us to the floor."

Lights went out, he said and the men were forced to crawl on hands and knees to find breathable air.

"About a third of the way we ran into black damp," Rayney said, "and some of the men passed out. We had to carry them to the entrance. We waited about two hours before the first man was pulled up in a barrel."

The men covered their faces with watersoaked handkerchiefs and shirts to purify the air as much as possible.

6 of 16 Killed In Bus Still Unidentified

By International News Service

Clanton, Ala., Oct. 27.—Six of 16 victims of the Montgomery-Birmingham Greyhound bus which crashed and caught fire with its passengers trapped inside last night, remained to be identified tonight.

The latest to die was W. P. Altman, 27, of Birmingham, the driver of the bus. Altman escaped from the burning bus, but suffered burns which proved fatal when he went back to it in a frantic effort to rescue passengers.

The body of one of the victims, Mary Eleanor Finney, of Buffalo, Ala., a teacher at Montevalle, Ala., was identified by her cousin, Lou Finney, Boston Red Sox outfielder.

Of eight injured in the accident, two remained in serious condition tonight, three were still hospitalized but were in less serious condition, and three were released from hospitals after treatment.

The heroism of Altman was praised highly by surviving witnesses of the tragedy.

Driver's Heroism Praised

"The bus driver came out the front door and could have gotten away without much injury," one witness said. "But he ran back to the safety door and cooked his hands getting it open. He had to pull the handles off.

"Then he went in and pulled out at least two people, their clothes in flames, before he collapsed."

Before his death, Altman was quoted as saying that a fire had somehow broken out in the bus and that he crashed it into a concrete bridge railing in his anxiety over the flames.

The fire, fed by gasoline, flared up into a roaring inferno immediately after the crash, and was visible for a distance of three miles. The accident occurred four miles south of Clanton.

Japan Reported Putting Deadline On U. S. Parleys

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

The Japanese government has served notice on the United States that if any accord is to come out of the long protracted negotiations between the two countries it must be reached before November 15 when a special session of the Diet will be convened in Tokyo to hear a report on the government's foreign policy, it was reliably learned here yesterday.

One of the main reasons for the downfall of the preceding Konoye cabinet was its failure to reach an agreement with the United States and the impatience of the Japanese army element. The army has now taken over with Gen. Hideki Tojo in the premiership and it is understood that the new cabinet, unwilling to drag out the negotiations indefinitely, has set a time limit for their conclusion.

If no agreement has been reached by then, the Tojo government is expected to renew formally its pledge of allegiance to the Axis and it would come as no surprise here if it should be the signal for a renewal of Japanese aggression either in the direction of eastern Siberia or in the Southern Pacific.

4 Tobacco Firms, 13 Officials Convicted on Trust Charges

GEORGE WASHINGTON HILL

S. CLAY WILLIAMS

By the Associated Press

Lexington, Ky., Oct. 27. — The billion-dollar tobacco industry's three largest companies, one subsidiary concern and 13 executives were convicted today on charges of monopoly and price-fixing in criminal violation of the Sherman Anti-trust Act.

The corporations convicted in United States District Court after 20 weeks of trial on all four counts of the accusation were the R. J. Reynolds, Liggett and Myers and American Tobacco companies and American Suppliers, Inc., a subsidiary of American Tobacco.

Officials Convicted

American Tobacco — George Washington Hill, 57, president; and Paul M. Hahn and Vincent Riggio, vice presidents, all of New York.

Reynolds—William N. Reynolds, 78, executive committee chairman, S. Clay Williams, 57, board chairman; James A. Gray, 52, president; and Edward A. Darr, James W. Glenn, 54, vice presidents, all of Winston-Salem, N. C.

Liggett and Myers—James W. Andrews, president; and William A. Blount, 43, and George W. Whitaker, 60, all of New York, and Edward H. Thurston, 65, St. Louis, Mo., vice presidents.

American Suppliers—James E. Lipscomb, jr., president, Louisville, Ky.

Those acquitted:

American Cigarette and Cigar Company, a subsidiary of the American Tobacco Company.

George Washington Hill, jr., of American Tobacco.

Robert E. Lasater and John C. Whitaker of R. J. Reynolds.

William D. Carmichael, Ben Carroll and Benjamin F. Few of Liggett and Myers.

Charges carried as penalty a maximum fine of $20,000 for each of the defendant companies, and a maximum penalty of $20,000 fine and four years' imprisonment for each of the executives convicted.

Death Beats Verdict

The 20th executive on trial, Charles F. Neiley of New York, a vice president of the American Co., died of a heart attack in Atlantic City today, and his name was omitted from the verdict.

William W. Flowers, board chairman of Liggett & Myers, who had been named as a defendant in the indictment, died June 2, a week before the trial began.

The four counts of the accusation charged the defendants violated the antitrust act criminally by:

1. Fixing prices and suppressing competition.
2. Conspiring and combining to monopolize the tobacco industry.
3. Attempting to achieve a monopoly.
4. Achieving it.

Federal Judge H. Church Ford deferred imposition of sentence. Defense attorneys were silent on the question of an appeal.

Judge Ford said he could not say at present what effect the verdict would have on the cases of five other major firms, 21 subsidiaries and 12 executives, named co-defendants in the accusation filed by the Department of Justice July 24, 1940, and remained out of the 20-week trial under an agreement with the Government whereby they would accept penalties if convictions resulted.

Among the defendants remaining out of the trial were Philip Morris, P. Lorillard, British-American, Imperial and Universal Leaf.

Tangled in Bed Clothing, Baby Is Suffocated

A two-month old child was accidentally suffocated in its crib yesterday after becoming entangled in its bed clothing.

Shortly after noon his mother discovered Roy Thomas Grimes, only child of Roy and Marion Grimes, unconscious and carried him to a nearby doctor's office only to be told the child had been dead more than an hour.

The mother is 19. Police were told she grabbed the infant in her arms and made a frantic dash for the physician's office only three doors from her home at 1110 E Street Southeast. The father was at his place of employment, Hutton & Jester Co., 1426 I Street Northwest, at the time of the tragedy. The coroner issued a certificate of accidental suffocation.

Allan Is Elected Head of Church Press Association

Robert Tate Allan, church editor of The Washington Post, last night was elected chief scribe of the Washington Church Press Association at its annual meeting at the Federation of Churches Building, 1751 N Street Northwest. He succeeds William S. Egbert, of Mount Rainier (Md.) Christian Church.

Other officers elected are Henry Sweinhart, First Baptist Church, assistant chief scribe; Miss Virginia Brand, of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints, recording scribe; Miss Lucille Cole, of St. Francis de Sales Catholic Church, Woodridge, corresponding scribe, and John Gross, of Douglas Memorial Methodist Church, fiscal scribe.

Principal speaker was William Moore, editor of the Prince Georges Post, of Prince Georges County.

Named as executive committee members-at-large were Mr. Egbert, Richard Spencer Palmer, of Calvary Baptist Church, and Mrs. Etta Zahn, of Ingram Memorial Congregational Church.

Roosevelt Acts to Consolidate CCC With NYA

President Roosevelt yesterday directed the preparation of plans for consolidating the Civilian Conservation Corps with the National Youth Administration, and the transfer of all CCC administrative duties from the War Department to the Federal Security Agency headed by Paul V. McNutt.

Mr. Roosevelt asked McNutt to draft plans for the consolidation "through proper legislative channels," in cooperation with Budget Director Harold D. Smith, and to "prepare and carry into effect" arrangements for transferring the administrative and supply duties of the CCC to McNutt's agency.

The request was made public by McNutt. He disclosed that the President had written him a letter declaring:

"In view of current world conditions, I feel that the War Department should be relieved from all activities which may in any manner interfere with its main objective—preparation for defense."

McNutt said the President intimated that he was considering sending a message to Congress explaining the need for consolidating the CCC and the NYA. Legislation would be required because the CCC is operating under an act of Congress while the NYA was created by an Executive order.

Several War Department units are engaged in CCC administrative and supply functions, including the Quartermaster Corps, the Finance and Adjutant General's departments, the Surgeon General and the Chief Signal Officer.

Her Plane Forced Down, British Aviatrix Arrives By Bus for Bundles Benefit Circus

A neat little "bundle from Britain" arrived in Washington last night by bus. Topped with chestnut-brown hair, and a pretty face, "the bundle" was dressed in brown trousers and a blue jumper.

She is Miss Barbara Kent, young British flier, here on a 2500-mile good-will tour for Bundles for Britain. The 22-year-old London girl left Philadelphia for Washington by plane yesterday morning, but because of bad flying weather, made a forced landing near Bel Air, Md.

Piloting a Piper cruiser, and accompanied by Miss Helen Peck, 24, American aviatrix, Miss Kent guided the plane through the mist, landing in a farmyard.

"The farmer came out to get us in one of the oldest cars I've ever seen," Miss Kent said last night. "I guess he thought we flew down from Mars."

The plane was left there, and the women fliers continued here by bus. "Thank heavens, that beautiful plane wasn't harmed. As long as we were able ot save the plane, I didn't mind riding the rest of the way by bus," added the visitor from Britain.

Before coming to the United States in February, Miss Kent spent 18 months in war work in England. After a year as a nurse in London hospitals, where she survived 78 bombings, she decided she wanted to join the R. A. F. She has been ferrying war planes from factories to airfields in Britain, and when she has completed 650 flying hours, she will be eligible to ferry planes across the Atlantic.

Miss Kent will make personal appearances tonight and tomorrow night at Miller's All-Star three-ring circus for the benefit of Bundles for Britain, at Riverside Stadium.

The circus talent is being supplied by stars from Barnum and Bailey, Ringling Brothers and other leading shows. L. C. (Ted) Miller is director. More than 1000 animals and entertainers are included in the cast.

The show will start at 8:30 tonight and will continue through Friday night. A special midnight performance is scheduled for Thursday. Matinee shows will be held at 3:30, starting tomorrow.

Boxes to the number of 100 have been set aside for members of the social, diplomatic and Government corps. Lord and Lady Halifax will occupy the No. 1 box and will have as their guests, Admiral Sir Charles and Lady Little, Sir Arthur and Lady Salter, Col. and Mrs. Rex Benson, Air Commodore H. N. Thornton and Capt. Harold Balfour.

In Army Forty Years, Col. Elliott Asks to Retire

By the Associated Press

Col. Charles B. Elliott, transferred recently from command of Fort Bragg, N. C., was reported authoritatively yesterday to have applied for retirement from the Army.

Elliott has been in service since 1901 and will be eligible early next year for retirement on terms opened to officers who have served 40 years. War Department compliance with his request is mandatory.

Elliott was transferred last week to duty at Mississippi State College.

A native of Washington, D. C., Elliott won the Distinguished Service Cross and other decorations for service in France in the World War, in which he was wounded. He entered the Army as an enlisted man, serving first in the Philippines, and three years later was made a second lieutenant.

He was given command at Fort Bragg July 3 after commanding the Thirty-fourth Infantry Regiment at Fort George G. Meade, Md., and Fort Benning, Ga.

Think Again, Brother

Informed he was to accompany a reporter on a daylight cavalry raid, Sergt. John S. Bardwell, former Washington News reporter, was most unhappy last night. He thought of many reasons why he shouldn't go. "I'm going to buy a bottle of liniment," said the reporter. "It's a fine idea," declared Bardwell, "I'll give it to the horse."

3 Lives Lost In Traffic In D. C. Area

Streetcar Kills Retired Merchant; Beltsville Woman Struck by Train

Traffic deaths this year 75
Fatalities, Oct. 27, 1940 58
Total fatalities last year 79

Three persons were killed, two by trains and one by a street car, and more than a score were injured on Washington area highways yesterday, as rain, fog, poor visibility, and slippery roads made travel hazardous.

The District's death toll rose to 75 for the year when Phillip Loketch, 63, of 4106 Fourteenth Street Northwest, a retired hardwar merchant, was fatally injured when struck by a street car at Fourteenth Street and New York Avenue Northwest.

According to police, Mr. Loketch had alighted from a streetcar at the intersection and walked in front of another streetcar, operated by Walter Scott, of Mount Rainier, Md.

Long D. C. Resident

A native of Poland, Mr. Loketch lived in Washington 45 years. He leaves his wife, Pauline, and two daughters, Mrs. Maxine Schoen and Miss Jeanette Loketch.

A 52-year-old mother of eight children was instantly killed when she walked into the path of a Baltimore & Ohio passenger train at Beltsville, Md., while her young son stood nearby.

The woman, Mrs. Blanche Dent, of Beltsville, was on her way to the Beltsville postoffice with her son, Leonard, 12, when the accident occurred.

According to the story obtained from the boy, his mother stepped from behind a northbound freight train into the path of a passenger train headed toward Washington. The engineer of the train, R. M. Bowman, did not know his train had struck the woman and did not stop, police said.

Mrs. Dent's husband, Percy, 61, is an employe of the Beltsville Agricultural Research Center.

Col. Dailey Killed

Col. Michael A. Dailey, 59, chief surgeon of the Army's Third Corps Area, was instantly killed when the car in which he was riding was struck by the Baltimore & Ohio's Royal Blue streamliner at a crossing near Jessups, Md.

His assistant, Lieut. Col. Howard E. Ashbury, of Dickeyville, Md., was taken to the Fort Meade Cantonment Hospital for treatment of serious chest injuries and lacerations of the head and hands.

The two officers were returning to Baltimore after a visit to the Fort Meade Base Hospital when the accident occurred, hospital officials said.

Col. Dailey, who was a native of Northeastern, Mass., received his degree of medicine at Harvard University in 1907. He was made a full colonel in 1938 and had been on active duty at Third Corps headquarters since August.

Car Overturns With 11

A woman and three children were hurt, and seven other children were shaken up when their auto overturned on Branch Road Southeast, a short distance over the Maryland line.

Mrs. Edwin R. England, who runs a children's boarding home in Clinton, Md., told police she was blinded by the lights of an oncoming truck and that her car swerved off the road. She was treated for minor injuries, as were three of her charges: Kenny Vann, 2; Ronald Kern, 2, and Edward Fink, 3. Four of her own children and three other charges, from 1 to 13 years of age, escaped unhurt. They all were taken to Casualty Hospital.

Police Car in Crash

Memorial Bridge was the scene of numerous minor accidents last night, police responding to 12 calls there between 4:30 and 6:30 p. m. A Park policeman became involved in one of these accidents while responding to another.

Private H. M. Berger had just settled an argument resulting from a crash when, according to Berger's report, a truck driven by W. B. Anderson, of Washington, ran into the police cruiser. Anderson was charged with reckless driving and with illegally driving a commercial vehicle across Memorial Bridge.

Another Metropolitan police car, responding to an accident call, was involved in a crash in which one of the police was severely hurt.

Crash With Woman's Car

En route to a hit-run call at Fourteenth Street and Rhode Island Avenue Northwest, the Traffic Division car collided with an auto driven by Katherine T. Forbes, 44, of 4700 Connecticut Avenue. Private Charles C. Harris, 35, suffered back injuries and was taken to Sibley Hospital. The police car caromed into a parked auto, which in turn smashed into a truck.

Meanwhile, at Fourteenth and Rhode Island, 10-year-old Robert Cook, of 1324 Fourteenth Street Northwest, had been struck by a hit-run auto and thrown 45 feet by the impact. The child escaped, however, with minor injuries and was released after treatment at Emergency Hospital.

Jeremiah Stauffer, 71, of 1214 Florida Avenue Northeast, was hit by an auto as he was crossing at Florida and Montello Avenues Northeast. He was taken to Casualty Hospital with leg injuries. The driver was listed by police as James N. Merriweather, 26, Negro, of 1450 B Street Northeast.

Marshall Pays Army's Tribute to Navy At Dinner on Sea Service's Own Day

Tells of Soldiers Marveling at Skill Of Iceland Convoys

Gen. George C. Marshall, Army chief of staff, arose at the Navy Day dinner at the Mayflower last night to convey what he called "the tribute of the Army to the power and efficiency of the Navy."

With deliberative emphasis the Army high command's top man, clothed in his dark blue dress uniform with a full general's gold stars on each shoulder, told the distinguished audience of Supreme Court justices, Cabinet officers, Administration lieutenants, Congressmen and high officers of the armed forces:

"During the critical days since the fall of France and the period in which we have endeavored to convert one and one half million men into an adequate military force, my greatest assurance has been that the Navy is already an actual rather than a potential force."

Marveled at Convoy

The lean, iron-gray-haired chief of staff said officers of the first Army contingent to go to Iceland, in communicating to him details of the voyage, had marveled over the efficiency of the Navy convoy. Every soldier, said Marshall, "was filled with admiration."

Marshall had further praise for Admiral Harold R. Stark, chief of naval operations, whose Navy Day speech from Chicago was heard by radio at the Mayflower dinner.

His relations with Stark, said Marshall, have been on "a basis hardly official but very largely personal," making for ideal cooperation between Army and Navy in the Nation's defense.

Dine on Navy Menu

Before hearing Marshall and President Roosevelt, the approximately 900 persons who attended the Navy League's celebration dined at $5 apiece on a Navy "officers' mess" fare consisting of:

Navy bean soup, pilot wafers, potato chips, pretzels, celery, olives, Navy beef brisket, mulligan, fat back and cabbage, string beans a la Marines, boiled spuds (ship ahoy), corn bread sticks, beer, aviation apple pie with American cheese and coffee.

Col. William B. Donovan, coordinator of defense information, was toastmaster at the banquet, which opened with invocation by the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Episcopal Bishop of Washington, and continued with music by the United States Navy Orchestra and other entertainment.

The Washington dinner was one of many Navy League luncheons and banquets throughout the country at which participants observed the establishment of the country's first line of defense in 1775.

Hearing Today On Bill to Cut Payroll Tax

A bill providing reductions in District unemployment pay roll taxes, estimated to save Washington employers about one million dollars annually, will be considered by the House District Judiciary subcommittee at 10:30 a.m. today in the House District Committee room.

Representative Dan R. McGehee (Democrat), of Mississippi, subcommittee chairman, announced yesterday that John R. Marshall of the District Unemployment Compensation Board and William H. Press, executive secretary of the Washington Board of Trade, would testify today.

The proposed measure would cut the employers' pay roll tax from 2.7 per cent to ½ of 1 per cent, and would reduce the reserve unemployment compensation fund from its present 24 million dollars.

Bearing on a House District subcommittee hearing to be held Thursday was a letter received by Chairman Jennings Randolph yesterday from Traffic Director W. A. Van Duzer in which it was proposed that different types of examinations be given drivers of taxis, buses and funeral cars in the District.

Van Duzer urged that bus drivers be given a more thorough physical examination once a year.

Representative John F. Hunter (Democrat), Ohio, chairman of the District Fiscal Affairs subcommittee, will preside at the hearing at 10:30 a. m. Thursday, when the measure proposed by Van Duzer will be taken up.

At the same time the subcommittee will discuss a bill authorizing the District Government to accept six million dollars from the Federal Works Administration for construction and repair work necessitated here because of the national defense effort.

A Senate Public Buildings and Grounds subcommittee yesterday heard Dr. V. L. Chrisler, of the Bureau of Standards, explain that a public address system probably would not be effective in the Senate chamber.

While no specific action on remodeling the chamber has been approved by the subcommittee yet, it is expected to recommend that the present heavy skylight roof be replaced with a lighter ceiling and indirect lighting.

Painter Falls 4 Stories; In 'Fair' Condition

After falling 40 feet from the ledge of a building, a 32-year-old painter was in "fair" condition last night at Emergency Hospital, although suffering from compound fracture of both legs and internal injuries. The painter, Edward Leach, of 4012 Third Street Northwest, had been scraping paint from the building at 2701 Fourteenth Street Northwest when he fell. The ledge is on the fourth floor of the building, an apartment house.

Off-Street Parking Hearing

A special Senate District Subcommittee under the chairmanship of Senator Harold H. Burton (Republican), of Ohio, will begin public hearings on the off-street parking bill and the House-passed 2-cent increase in the District gasoline tax at 9:30 a. m. today in Room 301 of the Senate Office Building.

Scheduled to appear before the subcommittee today are a representative of the Interior Department, Commissioner Charles Kutz, Director of Highways H. C. Whitehurst, and Assistant Corporation Counsel Vernon West.

Also testifying during the hearings, which will continue through Thursday, will be Washington I. Cleveland, of the American Automobile Association; George E. Keneipp, of the Keystone Automobile Club, and representatives of the Federation of Citizens' Associations and the Federation of Civic Associations.

Renah F. Camalier, Senate District Committee counsel, who will conduct the hearings with Senator Burton, declared: "These are hearings open to the public, and anyone who is a resident of the District and feels he has something to say on the matters involved is invited to attend."

He said answers will be sought to these questions:

Is an increase of 2 cents in the gasoline tax necessary?

What are the service costs involved in the inauguration of off-street parking facilities on the fringe of the downtown area?

Will bus and streetcar facilities be able to transport commuters from the fringe parking areas to downtown offices?

If a 2-cent gasoline tax should receive Senate approval, would the revenue allow the Whitehurst highway improvement plan to go forward in full?

District Pay Increases Await Congress' Action

Automatic pay increases for District employes under the Ramspeck-Meade Act must await Congressional action on a requested $115,000 deficiency appropriation, the Commissioners ruled yesterday.

In a report to the Commissioners from Auditor A. R. Pilkerton and Budget Officer Walter Fowler, it was pointed out that the District is literally "in the middle" of a peculiar situation.

The Budget Bureau, on one hand, has requested that no pay increases be granted until the money is available, while the Controller General has held that workers should get salary boosts, even though a deficiency is created.

The Controller General's ruling was made in a case involving employes at the Library of Congress, but was held applicable to the District.

Mason Invites Criticism From D. C. Natives

Commissioner Guy Mason last night asked the Washington Society of Natives for criticism—"all types, constructive or otherwise."

"When you find us (the Commissioners) not toeing the mark, come out and say so," the speaker said, addressing the society's first meeting of the season. There never has been a "miracle man" holding the office, he added.

Commissioner Mason stated his belief that "the people of any city should have some say in the way their money is spent and how their officers conduct themselves." However, the Commissioners must hold executive sessions from time to time "to keep the public from finding out how much we quarrel among ourselves."

President John A. Saul presided over the meeting of the Society of native-born Washingtonians. It was held in the Washington Club, Seventeenth and K Streets Northwest.

A resolution was adopted that the proposed Municipal Court merger bill be amended to require all judges appointed to the local bench to be bona fide residents of the District and practicing law here for the five years preceding their appointments. Also included in the resolution was that the Senate District Committee be petitioned for a hearing on this score and that Miss Etta Tauggert represent the society.

Opposition to a proposed bill raising the local gas tax was adopted in a resolution. The chairman of the membership committee repofted that communications had been received from 15 persons wishing to join the society. Delegates appointed to the Federation of Citizens Associations were Charles H. Bates, and Mrs. Maurice O'Connor.

Georgetown

Col. Archibald King was elected president of the Georgetown Citizens Association last night to succeed B. H. Meyer, who had completed two terms. J. B. Wyckoff and William B. Poland were elected first and second vice presidents, respectively. Joseph I. Cavanaugh was reelected secretary, and Maj. Wallace Streater was elected to another term as treasurer.

Restoration of bus stops eliminated in the gasoline conservation drive will be taken up by the association's public utilities committee. Members expressed dissatisfaction with the skip-stops now in force.

The Rev. Peyton Williams, the Rev. James A. McCarl, S. J. and W. Lowe Walde were made new members.

Mid-City

A. J. Driscoll was elected president of the Mid-City Citizens Association for his twenty-sixth consecutive term last night. Edith L. Grosvenor was elected vice president; other officers are John L. C. Sullivan, treasurer; M. E. Salsbury, secretary, and Frank B. Hoffman and George A. Warren, delegates to the Federation of Citizens Associations.

Max G. Pimes, retiring secretary who has been in the office twenty-three years, was voted an honorary life membership in the association. He is leaving the office because of moving from the community.

The association approved the pending bill to license those engaged in placing infants in private homes. It urged the proposed two-cent rise in the gasoline tax be cut to one cent. It approved the Commissioners' ban on double parking downtown and on loading and unloading on heavily traveled streets.

Northwest Council

The Northwest Council of Citizens Associations last night suggested that the District make use of downtown park areas as sites for underground garages. Favorable action was taken on the proposal of J. B. Dickman, secretary, who pointed out the garages would not only relieve the critical parking problem, but could also serve as air raid shelters, if needed.

The council also voted opposition to the proposed two-cent increase in the District gasoline tax.

Yale Club to Hear Cox

Oscar S. Cox, general counsel of the lend-lease program, will address members of the Yale Club of Washington at a luncheon today on the progress of the program.

The luncheon is scheduled for 12:30 at the Cosmos Club. Election of officers for the coming year will conclude the meeting.

Zoning Unit Asks Parking Off Streets

Suggests Changes In Laws to Require Facilities for Cars In New Buildings

A forward step in the program to ease the District's traffic problem was taken yesterday when the Zoning Commission recommended changes in the zoning laws to require off-street parking facilities for all new private building in the city.

Immediately after the action, the District Commissioners, who are members of the Zoning Commission, directed Corporation Counsel Richmond B. Keech to prepare the necessary legislation, and asserted that the measure would be sent to Congress this week.

The bill would give the Zoning Commission, in effect, the power to regulate off-street parking by requiring apartment houses, hotels, office buildings, etc., to provide facilities either by parking lot or garage for their occupants.

Such a move has long been suggested by traffic authorities and civic groups.

Off-Street Parking Indorsed

Meanwhile, yesterday the Board of Trade traffic committee indorsed pending legislation for municipally operated off-street parking facilities and at the same time urged Federal authorities to permit all-day parking along streets in the Mall area.

In a report by John Victory, chairman of the group's subcommittee on parking, presented at a luncheon meeting in O'Donnell's Restaurant, the Mall proposal was advanced as a means partially meeting parking problems imposed by defense activities here.

Although approving in principal provisions of the so-called "fringe" parking bill—under which the District would establish off-street facilities in outlying areas for subsequent lease to private enterprise—the committee offered strenuous objections to any ban on daytime parking in the downtown business section.

Explaining briefly contents of the parking measure, Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, director of highways, said the idea "is by no means a cure-all," but merely a step toward solution of a difficult situation.

Fringe Parking in Effect

Capt. Whitehurst pointed out that the city already has "fringe" parking and that streets as far north as the line of Taft Bridge "are now parked solid from early morning until dark." It is to free these streets for moving traffic that the off-street facilities have been suggested, he added.

A vote of confidence in the administration of Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer also was voiced by the committee. A resolution was adopted praising the "high caliber of work done by the Department of Vehicles and Traffic under the splendid and accomplished leadership of William A. Van Duzer."

Copies of the resolution, the committee agreed, would be sent to the Board of Trade, Commissioners and both District Committees of Congress.

Rush Hour Rules Nov. 4

At the same time Washington motorists were reminded by the Commissioners that pending prohibitions against standing, stopping and parking during rush hours on 32 principal arteries will become effective November 4.

Official notification of the forthcoming ban was published Saturday and under existing laws 10 days must elapse before enforcement begins.

The new regulations are aimed at commercial loading and unloading operations on congested streets during morning and afternoon peak hours.

Private motorists also receive a blow under the new rules. They will not be permitted to stop at curbs to discharge, pick up or wait for passengers between the hours of 7:30 and 9 a.m. and 4 to 6:30 p.m.

Glen Echo Elects Youth Regime To Curb Halloween Vandalism

Nineteen-year-old Johnnie Jones, Bethesda-Chevy Chase high school student, last night was elected mayor of Glen Echo, Md., and with a government of nine other boys and girls will run the town through Friday—Halloween—with the assistance, of course, of the adults already holding the town offices.

The third annual election of a youth government, held at the firehouse, went off smoothly. Campaigning for office took a new tack when Ernie Wood, 13, defeated for mayor, marshal, and fire chief, stood up for town council, abetted by a fistful of chocolates. Coincidentally, young Wood was elected this time.

Other members of the council are Hutch McCann, 20; Gloria Llorente, 16; and George Bolton, 9. Johnnie Deeboe, 13, is fire chief; Thomas Earl Meeks, 19, fire marshal; Grafton Lumsden, 16, and David Llorente, 13, assistant fire marshal.

The youth government was first elected three years ago under the auspices of the mayor, Mrs. Beulah H. McCuen, who says the idea has paid many times over in virtual elimination of vandalism during Halloween week. Vandals are the chief target of the youth government.

Zone Hearing Set on Changes To Meet Housing Emergency

In a move to ease Washington's acute housing problem, the Commissioners late yesterday set December 3 for public hearings on proposals to amend zoning regulations and permit rooming and boarding houses in restricted residential areas.

Voting to lift the existing ban on commercial enterprises in A-restricted and A-semi-restricted districts, the Zoning Commission emphasized that if adopted the new policy would last only for duration of the defense emergency and not longer than December 31, 1943.

Against Special Legislation

After a lengthy meeting yesterday, the Commission decided against sponsoring special legislation for the purpose and announced approval of tentative amendments to the regulations subject to public hearings.

Under the proposed plan, special permits must be obtained from the Building Inspector for lodging establishments either in present or future buildings in the two zones.

"Applications for such special certificates," said the proposed amendment, "shall contain an unconditional statement that upon the President's declaration of termination of the present emergency, or on December 31, 1943 (whichever may be earlier), all use of the dwelling or structure, or any part thereof, as a lodging, rooming or boarding house will cease and terminate."

Apartment Action Postponed

Action by the commission on a requested change in zoning regulations to permit construction of a proposed $700,000 apartment building at Sixteenth and Shepherd Streets Northwest was again postponed until a full commission is available.

Commissioner John Russell Young is ill and has been unable to attend two recent meetings of the group. Because of the application's controversial nature, the other members decided to await his return.

Farm Chemists Open Sessions Here; 350 Attend

Papers and discussions on the chemical analysis of everything from cordials to calcium fertilizers marked the opening of the fifty-seventh convention of the Association of Official Agricultural Chemists yesterday at the Hotel Willard, scheduled to continue through tomorrow.

About 350 delegates from all over the country, including many from Washington, attended the session yesterday, which were launched with a general meeting presided over by Dr. L. B. Broughton, of the University of Maryland, president of the organization.

Alcoholic beverages, soils, liming materials, fertilizers, food preservatives, containers, and general food topics were on the docket for discussion yesterday. Particular purpose of the association is the improvement of research and analysis methods in connection with Federal and State legal standards.

Other sessions on cosmetics, drugs, insecticides, cereals and coal-tar colors are scheduled, with a business meeting concluding the gathering tomorrow afternoon. An informal dinner and dance at 7 p. m. today is the only evening event listed.

Virginia Woman Stabbed to Death

Stabbed in the back with a butcher knife, Ethel Mahoney, 24, of 2 Slaters Lane, Alexandria, died early this morning in Alexandria Hospital.

Dollar Bay Wins at Laurel Despite Foul Claims

Texas U. Gridmen and Better Halves—The Cow Country Influence in Dress

The devastating grid machine which Texas University boasts this year has a total of seven married men on its roster. Shown with their wives here are the wedded stars who have helped the Longhorns to five straight victories to date: (Left to right, middle and front row) Mr. and Mrs. Mike Sweeney, Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Martin, Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Mauldin, Mr. and Mrs. Fritz Lobpries (top row) Mr. and Mrs. Speck Sanders, Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Mayne and Mr. and Mrs. R. Dollar Bay Survives Laurel Foul Claims

Rough Time Trails G. Ring's Mount, Jockey Says He Was Bumped

By Walter Haight
A Staff Correspondent

Laurel, Md., Oct. 27.—Two claims of foul marked the running of the Hollywood Purse, featuring the Monday program here in Howard County. However, the stewards after hearing the various versions and weighing them pressed the button to light the red "official" signals.

The finish stood with Dollar Bay, recently purchased by Gustave Ring, Washington builder, declared the winner by four lengths. Mrs. J. Y. Christmas' Rough Time was second and a half length in advance of H. G. Bedwell's Son Altesse, the favorite in the field of seven going a mile and a sixteenth.

Dollar Bay, after coming between horses with a wild rush, was accused of bumping Rough Time. Jockey Hilton Dabson, who rode Rough Time, registered this objection against Ken McCombs, who rode the winner. Then Mannie Berg, who piloted Son Altesse, made a claim that Rough Time bore in towards the fence and forced him to pull up sharply. All this happened or didn't happen at the sixteenth pole.

When the results board was lighted it showed a $14.70 mutuel on Dollar Bay who was making his first start for his new owner after coming from the Dixiana barn. Dollar Bay was clocked in 1:45 3-5 for the route.

Despite intermittent rain, the track remained fast. This was the first time there has been rain of any consequences during racing hours at this meeting. The smallest crowd of the season, some 6,000 customers, saw the day's sport.

Only one favorite won in the card and that was Good Conduct, winner of the third race. He was one of three winners riden by Jockey Paul Keiper and put the finishing touches on a $114 pay-off in the daily double. The twin wager had been started by Ingerfire, which surprised the crowd by stepping home at an individual pay-off of $60.80.

The mutuel was even larger on Phantom Player, winner of the second race. This 2-year-old took command at the first turn, led the remainder of the way and paid $84.30. The closest finish of the day came in the fifth event. G. R. Watkins' Greedan, sneaked through on the rail and was up in the final stride to beat out War Key. Jacsteal was a fast-closing third.

Many backers of War Key, a long-shot, didn't think their horse was beaten even after seeing the official photograph on display.

Army Is Replaced By Wake Forest On V.M.I. Schedule

By the Associated Press

Lexington, Va., Oct. 27.—Virginia Military Institute announced today a nine-game football schedule for 1942, seven with Southern Conference members.

Temple and Virginia are the two outsiders on the Keydet card. Wake Forest has been substituted for the Army, which downed V. M. I. this season.

Athletic Director R. B. Clarkson said that one other game might be added to the card for September 19. The schedule now lists Clemson as the opening foe in a game set for Lynchburg September 26.

The schedule: September 26, Clemson in Lynchburg; October 2, Temple in Philadelphia; 10, Virginia in Charlottesville; 17, Maryland; 24, Richmond in Richmond; 31, Davidson; November 7, Wake Forest, site undecided; 14, William and Mary; Thanksgiving, Virginia Tech at Roanoke.

Fordham Sees Purdue As Big Threat of Year

By International News Service

New York, Oct. 27.—The feeling at Fordham University tonight is that only one more hurdle stands between the Rambling Rams and another junket to a postseason bowl battle. Purdue's battling Boilermakers comprise the final obstacle, or else the Fordham followers are wrong.

Coach Jim Crowley preferred to wave aside all chatter about bowl bids.

"We've got to think about beating Purdue before anything else," Crowley commented. Before anybody could mention bowl business again, Sleepy James added that Pittsburgh, possibly St. Mary's and, of course, New York University hardly can be classified as pushovers.

Sentiment among the players and campus athletic circles, however, is that Fordham will have another bowl rendezvous if the Rams can get by the Boilermakers this Saturday. One of Crowley's aides asserted, "If we can't beat Pitt, N. Y. U. and St. Mary's with this team, then something's whacky in this game."

Even Crowley couldn't conceal the obvious fact that he is "sold" on the current Rams. He spoke mildly, saying only, "it looks like we have a nifty team, doesn't it." But there was a twinkle in his eye that advertised his complete satisfaction with the Fordhamites.

The Rams' line, perhaps, is not as tough and impregnable as some of its predecessors but the backfield is something else. With Jim Blumenstock, Joe Andrejco, Steve Filipowicz and Jim Noble as the spearheads the Ram rumble combination has proved one of the best offensive weapons on the Nation's football scene.

Fordham's ball carriers, amply bulwarked with sturdy replacements, performs with a flare that pleases Sleepy Jim. They do business with the originality employed by Crowley in his days as one of Notre Dame's Four Horsemen. He loves them.

Purdue, although defeated by Vanderbilt and Ohio State, has come along fast, but not too for Fordham's scouts. Based on reports from the spies, a new defense was set for the Boilermakers, and Crowley believes it will be effective.

Champ Bows In World Title Cue Tourney

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, Oct. 27.—Ralph Greenleaf stayed unbeaten in the World's Pocket Billard Championship tourney tonight while the defending champion, Willie Mosconi, of Philadelphia, was defeated in an upset.

Greenleaf staged a great uphill battle to defeat Joe Procita, Gloversville, N. Y., 125 to 100 in 14 innings. The 17-time former champion from Chicago won his fifth straight with an unfinished run of 88, the high run of the tourney to date.

Mosconi bowed to Onofrio Lauri, Brooklyn veteran, 125 to 114, in 21 innings. Lauri, aided by two runs of 57 and 34, piled up a 108 to 29 lead before Mosconi started clicking and pulled up within hailing distance.

Procita aided by Greenleaf's misfortune on the break took an early lead.

Greenleaf took an intentional scratch in the second to become minus 3 and Procita pocketed two before missing and scattering the ivories. Greenleaf clustered 12 points and Procita eight in the third, before playing safe.

Safe play continued except for Greenleaf's 20 in the seventh and two in the tenth, on which he left a ball hanging for Procita and the Brooklyn entry ran 26 before scratching. Greenleaf fared badly on a kiss shot after getting eight in the eleventh, leaving Procita open for a second string of 26 and an 86-36 bulge.

Scratches by both players in the twelfth and again by Greenleaf in the thirteenth left Procita an opening on which he ran 15, missing the lower right pocket, the third time in the match he had erred to that corner.

That set the scene for Greenleaf to run his winning string of 88.

Pa. Grid Team Decides One Sub Isn't Enough

By the Associated Press

California, Pa., Oct. 27.—Injuries to four men of the 16-man football squad of California (Pa.), State Teachers College caused the institution tonight to cancel the three remaining games on the 1941 schedule.

Dr. J. Riley Staats, head of the school's athletic council, said the men were hurt in last Friday night's game with Clarion Teachers at Charleroi, Pa., which attracted but 321 fans.

The Teachers had lost, by shutout scores, to Edinboro, Potomac State, Fairmont (W. Va.), Teachers and Clarion, who piled up a total of 120 points. Games canceled were with Grove City, Indiana (Pa.), Teachers, and Slippery Rock.

Dr. Staats said football would be resumed in 1942 if the size of the prospective squad warranted a resumption.

Coach Goes to Bat For Hurt Gridman —Delivers His Ice

By the Associated Press

Waynesboro, Pa., Oct. 27.—The teamwork Coach Ben R. Pollock teaches his Waynesboro High School football team doesn't end on the gridiron.

An example was the way Pollock went into action when he learned that star center Chub Woolridge might lose his Saturday ice delivery job because of an injured arm.

Peckinpaugh Is Slated for 'Front Office'

Cleveland, Oct. 27.—There's a chance that Manager Roger Peckinpaugh of the Cleveland Indians will move from a bench in the dugout to a swivel chair back of a mahogany desk in the Tribe's "front office."

President Alva Bradley is considering the Indians' pilot as a successor to C. C. Slapnicka, who resigned as vice president last month, but Peckinpaugs is "only one possibility."

"Naturally, I'm looking at our problem from every angle, so for me to consider Peckinpagh for the office job was strictly a routine matter," Bradley said today.

"I'm just beginning to work on this thing and may discover an entirely different solution before I'm through with it."

The "different solution" could come from the dozens of applications and recommendations piled on Bradley's desk when he returned from a Florida vacation—but probably won't.

"I guess I needn't even open the mail," he laughed. "The rumor circulators seem to have appointed at least three new managers while I was away, so anything I might do would only add to the confusion."

Coach Charley Dressen of the Brooklyn Dodgers, Manager Frank (Lefty) O'Doul of the San Francisco Seals and Bill Terry, manager of the New York Giants, have been mentioned as possible selections for the Indians' managerial job in event Peckinpaugh is moved upstairs.

Roanoke Quintet In Jubilee Meet In Square Garden

New York, Oct. 27.—The Twentieth Century-Fox quintet, national A. A. U. champions, will meet the Roanoke, Va., Legionnaires, and the Phillips Oilers, of Bartlesville, Okla., will oppose New York's Ohrbach five in the opening games of the two-game Golden Jubilee basketball tournament at Madison Square Garden, November 19. The winners will clash in the final game, November 24.

Steelers Offer Little Rest for Redskins

Pittsburgh Club Gave Bears Toughest Game Of Season Sunday With McDonough Out

Just when the Redskins were looking forward to using the full rookie crop and some experimental plays in Sunday's game with Pittsburgh, only team in the National Pro League without a victory, it looks as though the Steelers are on the comeback trail and might provide some rough opposition.

Against the Chicago Bears Sunday the Steelers lost, 34-7, but Bear coaches called their blocking and tackling the finest they have met this season and the Bears, with a 44-point-a-game average, had trouble all the way.

The Steelers were without the services of Coley McDonough, their star passer, who was out of the entire game with an injury but he will be available Sunday when Buff Donelli brings his club here.

The Redskin office reported an unusual heavy ticket demand from Richmond for the Steeler game as in the Pittsburgh backfield will be Art Jones, the All-Virginia back of last year who is one of the outstanding rookies in the league.

Hoffman's Condition Same

The Redskins are not counting on Bob Hoffman, the blocking back, for next week or several to come as Bob's condition remained unchanged yesterday in Emergency Hospital and even if released in the next ten days he will be too weak for active service. Bill Young faces at least another week on the sidelines but Wilbur Moore, the only mentionable injury in the Ram game, will be fit for heavy practice later in the week.

Sammy Baugh, who completed five of eight passes against the Rams, one for a touchdown, and averaged 62 yards on four quick kicks, won the weekly award of a suit of clothes for the most valuable player of the day. The Football Writers Association members voted equally for Baugh and Dick Todd, who ran 73 yards for a touchdown, but Baugh got the vote the second time around. Previous winners for home games were Frank Filchock and Joe Aguirre.

The Redskins will be on the road three straight weeks after Sunday's game, in Brooklyn, Chicago against the Bears and New York. They conclude the schedule at home with the Green Bay Packers and Eagles as visitors.

Transparenti Decisioned by Tommy Forte

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, Oct. 27.—Tommy Forte, hard-hitting bantamweight from Philadelphia, pounded out a ten-round decision over Lou Transparenti, Baltimore, tonight.

Forte came from behind to win his victory. He directed his attack midway in the scrap to the body, overcame Transparenti's lead and went on to pile up sufficient points to earn the unanimous verdict.

The fifth through eighth rounds were Forte's best, although he also won the ninth by a smaller margin.

Forte, at 119¼, spotted Transparenti 4 pounds.

G. W. U. Sad; It Can't Slay A Grid Giant

Things go from bad to worse for George Washington's luckless football team.

This time last week they were looking forward to the Clemson game, set for Friday night at Griffith Stadium, from several angles.

Clemson was unbeaten at the time with one of the best records in the country, and the game looked good from the crowd angle. G. W. had come out of its Georgetown beating with its morale up and was all set to upset William and Mary and then give Clemson a battle.

But bang! Last Thursday afternoon South Carolina upset Clemson, 18 to 14, in the annual State Fair attraction after leading, 18 to 0, at one time, and exploded Clemson as a wonder team.

Then G. W. took a 48-to-0 trouncing from William and Mary Friday night in Norfolk and never looked worse. They failed to score for the fourth straight game.

On top of that, Clemson will come up here with its bowl hopes shot and ready to tear G. W. to pieces.

Coach Bill Reinhart hustled his Colonials to the polo field yesterday and concentrated on strengthening the line, which, after several commendable performances, was way off last Friday.

British Sailors To Play Soccer And Rugby Here

Washington sports enthusiasts will be treated to something new when teams from two British aircraft carriers battle it out in games of rugby and soccer November 12 at Griffith Stadium.

Sponsored by the D. C. American Legion for the benefit of the British-American Ambulance Corps, and Bundles for Britain, the contest will bring together men from the H. M. S. Illustrious and the H. M. S. Formidable, now docked in Norfolk, Va. Clark Griffith is donating the use of the stadium.

Place-Kicking by a President's Son

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

POVICH

As near as we can make out, these are, in our own miserable shorthand, the notes we made on the Redskins-Cleveland game:

"Dumb punting." Now what could that mean except Parker Hall's kick that Dick Todd ran back for 71 yards and a touchdown in the first quarter? Anybody could have told Hall that no punt should ever be kicked toward Todd, on general principles. The Rams, however, did not make the same mistake twice. After that Todd incident, the gentlemen who did the Cleveland kicking pointed their punts very smartly into territory where Todd wasn't.

"Stiff arm." Oh, yeah, no description of the first Redskin touchdown could be complete without mention of the stiff-arm Todd applied to Safety Man Hall on his goalward gallop. It was a superb run by Todd but it was his stiff-arming of Hall that finally got him home. Faced only by Hall in the last 30 yards of his gallop, Todd and the safetyman jockeyed for the advantage with pace-changing tactics for fully 20 yards before Hall made his bid for the tackle. Then it was that Todd used the stiff-arm, a weapon as old as football itself, to get into the clear. It was a clever revival of football's lost art.

"T Formation." The Rams were desecrating the playground of the Chicago Bears with their version of the T-attack. In the opening period, the Rams made a few pitiful attempts to run from the T formation and then junked it for the rest of the game. With shoddy handling of the ball, they had been merely profaning the Bear's art, and hoodwinking nobody. In the second half, their chief gains were made with the old-fashioned reverses featuring little Dante Magnani and his speed. Elner Layden was eminently correct when he stated to this department last summer that the T formation in improper hands can be very easily butched.

"The Lines." That's where the Rams took the beating. Actually the Redskins won the ball game when they turned back Cleveland at the east goal with 3 yards to go for a first down on the 1-yard line, and three downs to make it in. The Cleveland line couldn't move as fine a plunger as Johnny Drake through the Redskins' defense and on last down, with a yard to go, the Rams preferred to gamble on a pass. At the other end of the field in the fourth quarter, the Rams' line couldn't move Drake across from the 6-inch line in two attempts.

"Very Smart." We mean that fourth-quarter touchdown of the Rams after Drake was stopped twice at the 6-inch line. It was a beautifully faked play on which Parker Hall raced around right end untouched. Too late the Redskins discovered that Drake, who bulled his way into the center of the line, didn't have the ball. Actually, the pass from center was flipped toward Drake, who faked taking the ball and let it pass through his encircled arms into the paws of Hall, who was in the tail-back position. Hall simply paced off the touchdown while the Redskin line was massed to stop Drake. That used to be one of Rockne's scoring plays. It beat Navy a dozen years ago.

"Drake." Small wonder they named this fellow all-league fullback last season. There hasn't been a harder line-hitter since old Bull Karcis used to drag entire ball teams on his back for Carnegie Tech, the Pittsburgh Steelers and the Giants. It wasn't Drake's fault that he didn't score two touchdowns when he was turned back twice inside the 4-yard line. He had to wade through his own line as well as the Redskins'. He made the first Cleveland touchdown possible, incidentally. He took a flanker pass from Hall at a time when the Rams needed 12 yards on fourth down, and made the entire 12 yards by lugging the ball through the Redskins. It gave the Rams a first down on the Washington ten, from there they got the touchdown.

"Sammy." That means nobody but Sammy Baugh, of course, and he, as usual, was more than slightly terrific. Those punts of his for 60, 70 and 80 yards were keeping the Redskins out of trouble all day. Downright amazing were his quick-kick boots of 67 and 72 yards. No wonder the guy holds the league record for average distance of punts, and who can say that his passing is a more valable item to the Redskins than his kicking? Why any football player in the league should be paid a higher salary than Baugh escapes us. That pass to Ed Justice which he sandwiched between two bullet-heaves to Bob McChesney in the second touchdown drive was a superlative thing, a lazy, floating lob that was timed to fall into Justice's hands far down field where Justice made the proper turn. Would you like a needle threaded at 30 yards?

Larson Ponders Reaction to Invitation To Bowl Classic for His Midshipmen

By Bill Boni
Associated Press Sports Writer.

New York, Oct. 27.—Despite considerable precedent to the contrary, there appears to be some chance that Navy's as yet unbeaten football team will consider an invitation to play in a post-season game if they finish their regular campaign undefeated.

The direct question was put to Coach Swede Larson at today's luncheon of the New York football writers, and the majors reply ran as follows:

"Offhand, my answer would be 'no,' chiefly because of our speeded-up graduation under which the current seniors will finish their courses December 19. But I'd like to see it put to the test, by means of an out-and-out invitation."

The last time Navy appeared in a bowl game was in 1924, when the Middies tied Washington 14-14 in the Rose Bowl. In 1930, the two service schools resumed gridiron relations in a post-season charity game which Army won, 610.

Larson, appropriately the main speaker (this being Navy Day), put in the season's best plug for a lineman that has been heard so far. Object of the major's admiration was Endicott (Chub) Peabody, 2d, of Syracuse, N. Y., the Harvard guard whose smashing defensive play was the main factor in giving Harvard a scoreless tie last Saturday.

"That boy," said Larson, "simply disrupted our offense—and we had considered it a pretty fine one. His tackling was fierce, and he made his tackles all over the field. He was the reason for our fumbles."

"How much," some one wanted to know, "does Peabody weigh?"

"The last time I saw him," was the response, "he weighed 310 pounds. That was when he crashed through to drive at least three blockers into our last-hope try for a field goal."

Wildcats' Waldorf Promises Minnesota 'Whale of a Game'

Conference Foes Clash To Sell Out

Mentor Concedes Gophers Strength, But Plans to Reach Peak for Battle

By the Associated Press

Evanston, Ill., Oct. 27—Northwestern, always a nightmare to Minnesota's Golden Gophers, concentrated today on plans for blasting Bernie Bierman's dreams of breezing to the 1941 Big Ten championship.

Coach Lynn Waldorf of Northwestern, whose players invariably reach their peak performances in November, promised that his lads would give the Western Conference leaders "a whale of a game"—and he's never been partial to overstatement.

"Minnesota undoubtedly has the edge over us, but Northwestern teams have a tradition for playing good ball against the Gophers, so we feel we have a chance," said Waldorf, puffing his pipe.

The teams will collide before a sell-out crowd of 65,000 in Minneapolis Saturday. Every ticket was sold two weeks ago. Northwestern's allotment was oversubscribed before the Wildcats had played their first game of the season, a month back. The game may decide the title.

In sheer, straight-ahead cracking power, Northwestern may not have quite the potency of the undefeated Gophers, but in Otto Graham, sophomore pitching marvel, the Wildcats have a lad who is the cause of the annual pre-game nightmare for the Gophers. Graham can pitch strikes at 50 yards and Minnesota's secondary defense has been vulnerable to an air attack in spots this campaign.

Young Graham, whose father is a band leader and music teacher in Waukegan, Ill., high school and whose mother is a church organist and also a music teacher, may prove to be the youngster who may turn Minnesota's marching song into a dirge Saturday.

Cats Dangerous

Northwestern's attack will center around its running and passing threats—the veteran, Bill de Correvont, and the sophomore, Graham.

Waldorf respects Minnesota's mighty forward wall, which will outweigh the Wildcats some 15 pounds per man. He believes the issue probably will be decided in a battle of lines, Northwestern's chances depending upon its lighter line standing off the furious Gopher charges.

Minnesota's juggernaut, champion five times in the last seven years, and halfway toward making it six times in eight years, must get ready to battle an eleven that has caused it more grief during the coaching span of Bierman than any other conference team. As far back as 1933, when Bierman was just getting started making the Gophers perennial champions, Northwestern surprised the favored Minnesota team with a 0-to-0 tie.

Since Waldorf took charge at Northwestern in 1935, these teams have met six times and each team has won three decisions. What's more, each has scored the same number of points—81.

The wildcats, who saw service against Ohio State, rested today while their mates went through a light drill.

The major problem confronting the coaches is right tackle, where the one-two players are injured. Veteran Leon Cook has been out two weeks with a knee injury and Sophomore Tony Samarzia, who was brilliant against Ohio State, now is out with a similar injury. This leaves only Sophomore Leo Vincent available for the position.

Badgers Get Vacation

Ted Damos, senior right half, was named captain for the intersectional game against Syracuse here Saturday. Mark Hoskins, regular starting right half, may start at left half Saturday in place of Bud Seelinger, who is still hampered with a leg injury.

Purdue Squad Starts Drills For Ram Game

By the Associated Press

Lafayette, Ind., Oct. 27.—All even for the season thus far, Purdue's Boilermakers started preparations today for what may be one of their hardest football battles of the season—the clash with unbeaten and untied Fordham at New York Saturday.

The injury jinx continued to hover over the Purdue camp. Team physicians said Kenny Smock, sophomore left halfback, who was hurt in the Iowa game, probably would not be able to play against Fordham. Co-Capt. Tom Melton, who missed the Hawkeye tilt, is expected to be back, however, for the clash with the Rams.

Ramblers Rest

South Bend, Ind., Oct. 27 (AP).—Notre Dame's first team had a day of rest today as a reward for its showing in Saturday's 49-to-14 gridiron victory over Illinois, but Coach Frank Leahy sent the third and fourth stringers through a long scrimmage.

The second team had a look at formations which Leahy expects Army to use against the Irish next Saturday and then held a brief dummy scrimmage. Scout Bill Cerney told the squad Army is 75 per cent better than a year ago when Notre Dame barely eked out a victory.

Hoosiers See Movies

Bloomington, Ind., Oct. 27 (AP).—Indiana University's first string football squad, cheered by reports from Madison, Wis., that Sophomore Center John Tavener was not seriously hurt in Saturday's game with Wisconsin, spent today's practice session looking at pictures of last year's tilt with Iowa. The Hoosiers will invade the Hawkeye stronghold Saturday.

Word received from Madison was that Tavener had only a bad laceration over his right eye. For a time it was feared he might have suffered a fractured skull.

Marquette Captain

Milwaukee, Oct. 27 (AP).—Jimmy (Limey) Richardson, Marquette's ace passer, today was named game captain for the home-coming battle Saturday against Mississippi.

Richardson has completed 34 of 47 passes in four games. Eight of his tosses went for touchdowns and none was intercepted.

On the Line

—With CONSIDINE

WHAT INTERESTS YOU, BUDDY?

FOOTBALL?—Let us not kid ourselves, or worship false football gods, Jimmy Conzelman, of the Chicago Cardinals, bluntly told the New York football writers. "The outstanding coach in this country, and the man who has had more effect on the game's course than any coach since Rockne, is George Halas, of the Chicago Bears."

CONSIDINE

No coach gives nearly as much time to his team as Halas, his Chicago coaching rival pointed out. No coach has nearly the number of movies Halas has in his vast grid library. He has a tremendous file of plays, all cross-catalogued. He has a file of the leading scoring plays of football history, and eternally works at variations of their themes. He works until midnight or 1 a. m. every night, then appears with limitless vitality at 7 o'clock the next morning.

"I'll call him some mornings at 7 o'clock, trying to beg one of his discards," Conzelman said, "and that big Bohemian will be so wide awake that he'll ask me how my family is. I'm not interested in anything that time of morning, especially a family. All I'll want is one of the Bears he doesn't want."

His squad virtually lives with him. He has quarters for them in his office, and when he isn't drilling them on the field he's blackboarding them. He's with his assistants 17 or 18 hours a day. The man never goes stale, never gets tired. He has imparted his own zest for living to his hardened pros.

"The great thing he has done," Conzelman said, "is convince them that the game is fun. He has built plays that please their vanity, that make them proud of out-thinking and outwitting the other guy. He's got the greatest football organization in history. You know, he's a graduate engineer—Illinois. That's probably where his orderly mental processes come from. His ability to pick men is downright eerie. He saw Sid Luckman on one of the worst days Luckman ever had—and predicted that he'd become the best quarterback the pro league ever saw. There never was a coach who could bewilder or dismay another team as well as Halas can."

BASEBALL?—The player who apparently made the sharpest imprint in the public mind, during the World Series, was not one of the Yanks who turned on that blistering heat, nor Wyatt, who won the lone Dodger game, nor even old Fitz, whose noble career probably ended when Marius Russo's line drive crippled him.

Judging from the blizzard of mail that poured into Ebbets Field, and which is still coming in, the central figure of the series was Mickey Owen. The Dodger management sent bundles of letters to him for many days after the series. In fact, he's still getting mail from all parts of the country and our territories—all of it sympathetic, the management has learned.

Incidentally, Larry MacPhail is back from the Canadian wilds with a moose scalp at his belt. He dauntlessly tracked down his fiery denizen of the wilds some 200 miles north of St. Jovite, Quebec, which is 200 miles north of north.

A profligate user of the long distance phone himself, Larry nontheless cautioned his staff to refrain from calling him while he was on the trip. A call to him would have cost $200—for a plane would have had to be sent to lug him to the nearest invention of Don Ameche.

RACING?—If you believe there's no sentiment in racing, how about Jane Kilmer's gesture in bringing 26-year-old Exterminator up from Court Manor, Va., to Pimlico? Old Bones, about whom there are more endearing stories than any horse since Black Beauty, will lead the field to the post for the Exterminator Handicap next Thursday.

As it will turn out, the appearance of the game old gelding will insure Al Vanderbilt of a capacity crowd, whereas his Pimlico Special, scheduled for the same day, promised to be something less than a lure. But the fact is that Exterminator was ticketed to make the trip—his first trip to the races in 16 years—some time before it became apparent that the Special would have to stagger along without Whirlaway, War Relic and Alsab. Mrs. Kilmer knows that the old campaigner isn't long for this world. And she wants a new generation to see the amazing old fellow, who is called the "Abe Lincoln of horses" by his first trainer, Uncle Henry McDaniels.

Army Eleven, Facing Irish, Drills In Rain

By the Associated Press

West Point, N. Y., Oct. 27.—Despite the rain, Coach Earl Blaik sent the 11 Army players he hopes to start against Notre Dame out of doors today for a workout on the muddy field. The remainder of the squad drilled in the fieldhouse.

Maines Returns

Syracuse, N. Y.—Syracuse's hopes for victory in its intersectional game with Wisconsin at Madison Saturday took a lift as Tommy Maines, regular left halfback, returned to action. He has been idle 10 days because of a knee injury.

Violets Block

New York,—New York University, preparing for Penn State's visit Friday night, spent two hours on blocking. Bill Stoll, reserve guard, suffered a broken ankle against Holy Cross and will be out for the year.

Harvard Rests

Cambridge, Mass.—Harvard's varsity, which fashioned the 0-to-0 draw with Navy last Saturday, was excused but Coach Harlow ordered a scrimmage for Wednesday to sharpen his charges for the big three opener with Princeton.

Yale's Hopes Buoyed

New Haven, Conn.—The return to action of two first stringers and a first class sub buoyed Yale's hopes as Coach Spike Nelson put the squad through a brief but rigorous workout.

Brown Rehearses

Providence, R. I.—Brown players rechecked individual assignments and rehearsed old plays to improve the timing as they preened themselves for their coming visit to the Yale bowl.

Three Jaspers Out

New York—Three Manhattan regulars were injured in the Jaspers' upset triumph over Villanova and will not be in the lineup against Detroit University Saturday. The squad went through a 40-minute blocking workout.

Eagles Work Hard

Newton, Mass.—Boston College's squad was given a stiff drill on fundamentals as the Eagle coaching staff sought to eliminate ragged blocking and tackling which has cropped up in recent contests.

Geyer Spurns Rest

Hamilton, N. Y.—Colgate regulars were given a day off but Indian Bill Geyer refused to rest and spent the time slogging up and down the rain-soaked field to improve his condition. Cornell stopped the halfback completely.

Rams Rest Up

Tiger Reserves Work

Fod Cotton Out of Football For First Time in 20 Years

Former Catholic U. Coach Directing Norfolk USO Club

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

The George Washington University football entourage had hardly settled for breakfast last Friday morning in Norfolk when a visitor was announced. He was a familiar figure to the coaches and school officials, for Forrest G. (Fod) Cotton had been around Washington for a decade.

Cotton is a Norfolk resident now. His official title is director of recreation, Norfolk USO Club, operated by the National Catholic Community Service.

Fod went to Norfolk in mid-July, just six weeks after he was officially out as assistant football coach and head basketball mentor at Catholic University. He accepted the USO post although his first love is coaching, as by midsummer the college staffs were all pretty well filled.

He Misses Those Games

This is the time of year a former coach gets plenty lonesome, and Fod showed it. Of course his job now is working with young fellows but he misses that Saturday ball game, the job of keying the boys up all week long, getting the fever himself, and then the letdown.

This is Fod's first fall season out of football since he left Notre Dame and Knute Rockne in 1923, with a reputation as one of the finest tackles ever to represent the South Bend school. He went directly to St. Ambrose College, in Davenport, Iowa, and for eight years was head coach of just about all sports, with football his baby. He took up basketball coaching at St. Ambrose as a case of necessity, and carried his knowledge to Catholic U., where he turned out some fine teams. He moved to C. U. as assistant football coach to Dutch Bergman in 1931.

Host to G. W. Party

Cotton took several members of the G. W. party to his USO Club in Norfolk and spent the morning talking over old times and getting the lowdown on the gridiron front. Max Farrington, graduate manager of athletics, was in the party as was Johnny Busick, publicity director, Johnny Baker, assistant coach and George Lentz, trainer who worked with Cotton at Catholic U. for seven years.

Fod has made a big hit with the service men who use the club, 99 per cent of which are sailors. Word of his football prowess has made the rounds and the boys respect him. The frequent visitors walk up the flight of steps with a newcomer and upon entering often point to Cotton with the remark, "See that guy over there, well don't get tough because he was all-American at Notre Dame."

FOD COTTON

He Can't Stay Still

"That was nearly 20 years ago," laughed Fod. "Those kids could probably run me ragged now." Cotton proudly showed his spacious club quarters. He has radios, magazines, books, table tennis, puzzles, checkers and the more popular radio and recording machines for the sailors, with lockers and 100 bunks on the third floor. He was afraid he would have to miss the G. W.-William and Mary game that night as a dance was scheduled and it was Fod's job to be around.

While Fod was pouring questions into his guests at the rear of the big room, somebody put the Notre Dame Victory March on the phonograph up front and Fod jumped out of his chair and threw a block, like the Cotton of '23.

His new job often takes 12 to 14 hours a day of Fod's time and he has little opportunity to look into athletics. He was forced to turn down a bid to coach a local pro team as he did have the time to spare. His recreational duties will probably keep him away from basketball this winter, but if Fod has his way he'll be back on the football front before too many years.

Panther Spirits Up As They Prep for Bucks

Pittsburgh, Oct. 27 (AP).—The four-times beaten Pitt Panthers displayed new life today as they started practice on a rain-sogged field for their fourth Big Ten opponent, Ohio State.

Their spirit was up due to the sudden discovery of two new scoring threats, Fullback Johnny Ross and Halfback Bill Dutton, who by slashing last-minute runs scored the Panthers' first touchdown of the year against Duke Saturday.

"Surprise Ohio," was the watchword. The homecoming game is expected to attract 50,000 or more spectators.

Tech Juniors Trip Young Colts

Eagle Hockey Stars Sign Pro Contracts

Special Dispatch to The Post

Montreal, Canada, Oct. 27.—Hal Dewey, high scoring wingman, and Ross Knipfel, aggressive defenseman, today were lost to the Washington Eagles following their signing of contracts to play professional hockey In so doing they followed the lead of Norm Burns, their teammate of a year ago, who is reported to be making the grade with the New York Rangers of the National Hockey League.

Coach Redvers Mackenzie today announced the passing of Dewey and Knipfel as he sent nine signed players through their first fall workout at the Montreal Forum. Dewey rather unexpectedly has signed with the Cleveland club of the American Hockey League and Knipfel with Pittsburgh of the same circuit.

Dewey played several years of brilliant hockey under Mackenzie at Atlantic City and put in a year with the Montreal Royals prior to joining the Eagles two years ago. Knipfel came to the Eagles directly from Canadian junior ranks in 1939-40.

The players under contract thus far are: Leigh Dickie, goal; Len Burage, Art Lessard, Rolly McLenahan and Keith Allen, defensemen; Art Thompson, Paul Courteau and Leslie Hickey, wingmen, and Kenny Ullyot, center.

Gordon Praschke, rotund wingman and a holdover from last season; an alternate goalie, and Albert Tilson, a rookie center, are players who may report any time now.

Hal Dewey Signs With Baron Club

Smith Falls, Ont., Oct. 27.—(AP)—Hal Dewey, high-scoring right winger with Washington of the American League the past two seasons, today signed with the Cleveland Barons.

N. C. Harriers Win at Maryland

North Carolina's crosscountry team ran away from the Maryland harriers today to win, 15 to43, having the first five men to finish. Richard Van Wagoner won the 4-mile race in 21:25, and was followed by Doug Moody. Arthur Truex, Mike Wise and Frank Hardy.

Sterling Kehoe, who finished sixth in 22:57, was the first Maryland scorer. Bob Condon, Stuart Tooley, Jud Lincoln and Stan Kihn were the other Maryland scorers.

Hunter Gets Pheasant After Firing All Shells

Valley, Idaho, Oct. 27 (AP).—Pheasant hunting for the first time, Walter Wittwer used two boxes of shells but failed to connect in 50 attempts.

Noggin-to-Noggin Football Lifts Vandy to Top of Heap

By the Associated Press

Nashville, Tenn., Oct. 27.—A fellow who was stand-in for the star in his undergraduate days at Vanderbilt has lifted the Commodores from the bottom to the top in the Southeastern Conference—and in the short span of a year and a half.

He is 36-year-old Coach Henry R. (Red) Sanders, understudy in the mid-twenties to Bill Spears, one of Vanderbilt's greatest quarterbacks.

The formula Sanders has drilled into his boys, who have overpowered five straight opponents for the lone unblemished record in the Southeastern has been simple, noggin-to-noggin football.

Just Straight Football

There has been no legerdemain, no razzle-dazzle, nothing more complex than a reverse pass play which clicked for two touchdowns against Kentucky, but the Commodores have won from Purdue, Tennessee Tech, Kentucky, Georgia Tech and Princeton, with the score close only against Purdue.

The chunky, black-haired Sanders was beckoned to Vanderbilt two years ago when Ray Morrison transplanted his "aerial circus to Temple.

Moving in from Louisiana State where he was backfield coach, Sanders recruited Paul (Bear) Bryant from Alabama to tutor the line and Herc Alley, former Tennessee end, to coach the wingmen.

They Had the Will to Win

This trio went to work earnestly, but the material wasn't there and the best they could do last fall was trip three "breather" foes, tie Kentucky and drop the other major games.

But they had imbued the squad with a will to scrap this fall and the result has been a hard-charging, gang-tackling aggregation that never quits.

And to top it off, 20 of the 35 squad members are sophomores which certainly enhances Commodore prospects for the future.

M. A. Golf Pros To Offer Wiffy Another Term

Thursday's annual meeting of the Middle Atlantic P. G. A. members at Indian Spring will undoubtedly find the membership voting another president's term to Wiffy Cox but whether the Congressional pro will accept or not is known only to Cox.

In addition to the election of officers for the 1942 season two delegates will be selected to attend the annual convention in Chicago in November. Other problems of the association will be discussed.

The meeting has been called for 8 p. m.

Pumpgun, Paying $18.90, Wins Good Harvest at Empire

Vintage Port, Olympus Beaten Out

Veteran Campaigner Scores by a Head in 3-Way Photo, Giving Owner a 'Double'

By the Associated Press

Empire City Race Track, N. Y., Oct. 27.—Pumpgun, a 6-year-old gelding which has been racing well in claiming events, stepped up and scored a thrilling triumph in the featured Good Harvest Purse here this showery afternoon. In adding his name to the long list of improved horses of the season, the veteran gave his Denver owner, C. U. Yaeger, as well as Trainer H. T. Bray and Jockey Robert Robinson a consecutive double. The same combination had accounted for the previous race with the favored Feathery.

Pumpgun, an $18.90-for-$2 hazard, wore down Sanford Stud Farms' gray 4-year-old Vintage Port by a head in the three-way photo finish. Another head back came the Barrington Stable's Olympus. The top-weighted Napper Tandy was favorite and again disappointed as he wound up well out of the picture. The mile and a sixteenth was covered in 1:45 2-5 over a track still fast.

Napper Tandy was the fourth beaten choice in the first five races decided on the program that inaugurated the final week of the regular New York racing season.

The recent winner Here Goes began as if fully decided to repeat. He stole a daylight advantage over Vintage Port, but the latter drew up to virtually even terms with the pacemaker as they approached the far turn. While this pair fought for supremacy, Pumpgun was gaining from fourth place, just behind Napper Tandy. Here Goes and Vintage Port held on stubbornly, but Pumpgun's dying bid was not to be denied. Robinson urged the long shot to the front just as they reached the line. Olympus' move came a bit late.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—INGERFIRE, $60.80, $24.30, $15.70; SNOWTOP, $18.40, $10.70; RECOGNIZE, $29.90.

INGERFIRE was rushed to the front at once, set a good pace and staved off the closing bid of SNOWTOP while under pressure at the close. SNOWTOP improved his position gradually to the stretch and closed gamely. RECOGNIZE saved much ground and hung on well. BAYBERRY was off slowly and closed a gap.

SECOND RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1000; claiming. For 2-year-old maidens. Start good. Won easily; place same. Went to post at 2:04½. Off at 2:05½. Winner, H. C. McGehee's b. g. (2), by Strolling Player—Bright Phantom. Trained by J. V. Stewart. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:46⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—PHANTOM PLAYER, $84.30, $14.80, $6.10; GAY CALL, $4.40, $3.00; SMUG, $3.20.

PHANTOM PLAYER came through on the inside to take command at the first turn, was rated after drawing clear and won with speed in reserve. GAY CALL was shuffled back entering the backstretch, went to contention boldly, but was tiring at the end. SMUG was prominent to the stretch and weakened thereafter. BERTHA'S GIRL was not a prominent factor.

THIRD RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place same. Went to post at 2:35. Off at 2:35. Winner, G. R. Watkins' b. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—GOOD CONDUCT, $4.20, $3.60, $2.90; SCOUT ABOUT, $26.40, $12.60; PALKIN, $4.90.

GOOD CONDUCT shook off CRIMSON LANCER to open a good lead, was not threatened thereafter, winning easily. SCOUT ABOUT was in the first flight from the start and closed willingly, but was no match for the winner. PALKIN could not keep up early and closed some ground. MOROCCO D. showed an even effort while saving ground.

Daily Double, INGERFIRE and GOOD CONDUCT, Paid $114.00

FOURTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1000; claiming. For 2-year-old maidens. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 3:04½. Off at 3:05. Winner, H. C. McGehee's ch. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BALLYARNETT, $24.70, $9.10, $6.00; BILL'S RITA, $3.70, $2.70; PRETTY LADY, $3.10.

BALLYARNETT was in the thick of contention from the start, wore down PRETTY LADY to take command and assumed a long lead to win easily. BILL'S RITA was steadied while close up, responded when placed to a drive, but flattened out in the final stages. PRETTY LADY was sent to the front at the first turn and weakened gradually after a half. COLLEGE WIDOW went evenly.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1500; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:34. Off at 3:34½. Winner, G. R. Watkins' b. h. Two-dollar mutuels paid—GREEDAN, $7.90, $4.90, $2.80; WAR KEY, $14.70, $5.30; JACKSTEAL, $2.50.

GREEDAN was not hurried in the early stages, came to the inside while improving his position and responded to pressure to be up in the concluding strides. WAR KEY assumed a long lead at once and was tiring gradually in the final drive. JACSTEAL dropped far out of it for a half, rallied gamely and closed with a bold rush. GEORGE LAMAZE was a keen forward factor to midstretch and faltered.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1500; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won handily; place driving. Went to post at 4:06. Off at 4:07. Winner, G. Ring's b. g. (4), by Sweep All—Uncle's Lassie. Trained by H. H. Battle. Value to winner, $1000; second, $300; third, $150; fourth, $50. Time, 1:45⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—DOLLAR BAY, $14.70, $8.20, $3.30; ROUGH TIME, $6.60, $4.60; SON ALTESSE, $2.50.

DOLLAR BAY was steadied for the half, came between horses to improve his position when placed to a drive and drew out to win handily. ROUGH TIME shook off TROIS PISTOLES to take the lead, drew out and appeared to shut off SON ALTESSE inside the sixteenth pole. Berg's claim of foul against ROUGH TIME was not allowed. SON ALTESSE was rated early, rallied when placed to a drive in the turn, but was taken up when in close quarters on the rail. HAPPY HUNTING closed full of run from a sluggish beginning.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1200; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:36½. Off at 4:36½. Winner, H. G. Bedwell's br. h. (5), by Gino—Caprice II. Trained by L. G. Bedwell. Value to winner, $850; second, $200; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:33⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—GINOCA, $6.50, $4.20, $2.80; BANKER JIM, $7.50, $4.00; MISS BRIDEAUX, $2.90.

GINOCA sulked while closest to the pace of BANKER JIM, responded when shaken up and wore down the pacemaker to hold away to the end. BANKER JIM was taken to the front at once, could not resist the winner, but held on willingly. MISS BRIDEAUX raced evenly and showed a good effort. DUSKY FOX, within striking distance from the start, failed to rally.

EIGHTH RACE—One and three-sixteenths miles. Purse, $1000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 5:06. Off at 5:07. Winner, Mansfield Stable's br. h. (5), by Jacopo—Pola Negri. Trained by A. Allen. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 2:02.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—JANEGRI, $8.00, $3.80, $3.20; BALLOTANT, $3.20, $2.60; SIR BROADSIDE, $4.40.

JANEGRI, much the best, came around horses to take command leaving the backstretch and drew out to win easily. BALLOTANT was well placed from the start, responded willingly when placed to pressure, but was no match for the winner. SIR BROADSIDE was outrun early, came on the inside to improve his position and closed gamely. ERINS GIRL closed with good energy.

Selections at Laurel

Dear Al.

At the most, the Pimlico Special will be a three-horse race. Market Wise and Haltal are sure starters while Pictor, although his invitation has not been accepted as yet, probably will go postward with the other two. By the way, Exterminator, now 26 years old, arrives at Pimlico today. Old Bones, as many fans like to know him, must be mentioned whenever good horses are a source of conversation. He will lead the field to the post in Thursday's Exterminator Handicap, at two miles and 70 yards (That's the right distance, too). Peanuts will be in the van with Exterminator when the ancient gelding is shipped up from New Market, Va. Peanuts is the pony which has long been Exterminator's companion. Jockeys Sterling Young and Maurice Peters reported to the clerk of scales they were suffering from heavy colds and cancelled their engagements for the day. P. S. Baird arrived here with the horse Jabert and following the Maryland fall season, will go to Charles Town. James O'Brey, shipped his string of horses to Rockingham Park for the remainder of that meeting. Mort Mahoney, mutuel manager at Pimlico, will reach the Baltimore plant Thursday morning. Roll call for mutuel clerks was held at Pimlico Sunday with Mahoney's son Jack in charge. Agent E. Yowell has taken over the book of Jockey Robert (Red) Howell. Johnny Deering maintains his place at the top of the jockey standings with 16 winners, four more than George Woolf and Johnny Breen. Sterling Young has 11. See you on the rail—BILL.

First race—EPISTLE seems the best suited of the 2-year-olds gathered for this sprint. Needs only the right ride. NEWFOUNDLAND is better than generally rated and could surprise. MYSTIQUE will be right there if sent postward.

Second race—Buck Langhorne gets the call in the day's steeplechase. He likes the local course and I'm going to string along. FLEMAR looms as a prominent contender. BELL MAN begins to figure when they are as cheap as these.

Third race—CARTEL appears to have found the right spot in this field of Maryland-breds. Likes the route and the weight assignment. STAR CHARTER and LER-LIN are possibilities.

Fourth race—POMIVA has stretch punch and will be right there, if not the winner. BECOMLY has won two over this track and is the one for the top sprinter to beat. MACK'S DREAM for the minor award.

Fifth race—TRUE CALL whipped fine ones last week and should come right back despite high weight. COERCION won last out and gets in light. DARK IMP is improving and is ready to be a serious factor.

Sixth race—UMBRIL gets my call in this distance affair for juveniles. Has shown closing ability and deserves the pick. BEST REWARD and FIRE BROOM to take care of the place and show awards.

Seventh race—HISTRIONIC won easily last out and should come right back with another winning effort. BOGERT and GOLDEN MOWLEE for the other cash positions.

Eighth race—DECATUR looks like the day's best best in the finale. Needs only some help from the saddle. BOUNDING COUNT and YANKEE LAD will battle it out for second money.

Best bet—DECATUR.

Dodgers Top Major League Attendance

Brooklyn's 1,215,772 Is Record

Two Leagues Show Decrease From '40 Total; Detroit Hit Hardest of All

By the Associated Press

New York, Oct. 27.—Major league baseball attracted ten and a quarter million fans through the turnstiles during the 1941 season, but it was a year of mixed success.

Unofficial figures assembled since the close of the campaign show the American League drew 5,220,519 and the National League 5,029,689 for a combined total of 10,250,208, gain 181,389 over last year.

This was a decrease of 31,883 from 1940, which means that in spite of war tension, higher costs of living and other obstacles, major league baseball almost held its own.

Yet it was a chaotic year which saw some clubs making great gains and others taking incredible nose dives.

Tigers Lose 400,436 Fans

The Detroit Tigers, who won the American League pennant and drew more than a million admissions in 1940, saw their attendance fall off 400,436 and the New York Yankees, who overwhelmed all opposition and regained the world championship, dropped 24,253 on their season's attendance.

Thus Detroit's attendance collapsed because it didn't have a winning team and the Yankees' lagged because they were too good.

The red-hot race in the National League was a mint for the pennant-winning Brooklyn Dodgers and the St. Louis Cardinals.

The Redbirds increased their gate 287,590 and the Dodgers went up 244,772 to pass the million mark for the second time in three years. Their total of 1,215,772 was a new record for a Brooklyn club.

Four other clubs in the senior circuit suffered decreases ranging up to 210,344 for Cincinnati, where interest withered when the Reds couldn't stay on top.

The big business done by Brooklyn and the Cardinals, however, caused the National League as a whole to gain 281,589 over last year.

The American League slipped back 213,272 because of the Tigers' reversal, but four clubs showed gains. The most surprising increase in the junior circuit was the 209,484 step-up experienced by the Philadelphia Athletics, who gave old Connie Mack one of his best years financially since the A's great pennant years.

His success contrasted with a loss of 104,820 by the Philadelphia Phillies, who would have been damaged even more seriously except for a lucrative series with the magnetic Dodgers at the end of the season.

ROTC Ring Tourney at Md. in Finals

Semifinals of the second annual R. O. T. C. Boxing Tournament sponsored by the Pershing Rifles Drill Company were staged last night at College Park with 15 bouts on the program.

Eleven of the matches ended in decisions, 3 in T. K. O.'s and one by knockout. The latter was scored by M. Becchio over H. Esten in the first round.

Finals of the tourney which opened with 118 prospective champions in the field will be held tomorrow night at the College Park Coliseum at 7:30. Referee will be Bobby Goldstein, new Maryland U. fight coach.

Puss Smells a Puff as Fighters Train Here

Jay D. Turner, 215-pound, 6 foot 3 Texas heavyweight, who started training yesterday at Turner's Arena for his eight-round headline bout there next Monday night with Jimmy DeChard, is holding "Mitts," Joe Turner's Arena pet, as Ken Overlin, the former middleweight king, points his stogie at her. "Mitts" didn't like the cigar, but did like Heavyweight Turner, who once played college football against Slinging Sammy Baugh. Turner resumes training at 12 noon today at the Arena. He has fought two semiwindup bouts on Joe Louis cards

Turner Starts Drills for Bout With DeChard

Turner spent an hour at the arena limbering up under the watchful eyes of Ben (Evil Eye) Finkel, the Slobadka Starer. Finkel is handling the strapping Texan pending the arrival of his regular trainer, Willie Ketchum, the latter part of this week.

DeChard entered the last week of his maneuvers at the gym of his manager, Frankie Mann, in the Northeast. The former Golden Gloves champion trained last night, and had Earl Lowman, former Golden Gloves title holder from New York, as one of his sparmates. Lowman, incidentally, is scheduled to fight Jabbo Kenner, giant heavyweight, in a 6-round added attraction on the Monday card, and last night went through a bruising session with DeChard.

Turner today will renew an old acquaintance with Sammy Baugh, the Redskin pass pegger, having played against Baugh in college back in 1933. He will watch Baugh work out with the Redskins, and Baugh in turn will watch Jay drill at the arena.

Turner doesn't think DeChard will give him much trouble, for he plans to "body punch him to death," as he put it. The Texan moves fast, punches speedily and hard, in the opinion of Trainer Finkel. He is a fine heavyweight contender, who has fought semiwindup matches on the Louis-Baer (beating Babe Ritchie) and Louis-Nova, beating Joe O'Gatty.

Tiny Weehoyas Win Over St. Albans, 26-7

The Georgetown Prep Midget eleven trounced St. Alban's midgets, 26-7, yesterday behind the fine play of Jackie Harrell. Young Jackie scored on touchdown runs of 82 and 60 yards. George Foley and Jim Guyer also tallied for the winners.

Tommy Gomez Defeats Beech by Decision

Tampa, Fla., Oct. 27 (AP).—Soldier Tommy Gomez, of Camp Blanding, Fla., took another step along the comeback trail tonight by winning a 10-round decision from Tiger Neville Beech, of Memphis, Tenn. Both weighed 178 pounds.

Glover Park Wins

Glover Park A. C. took a 12-0 grid victory over the Gibson Grays yesterday. Tony Bickle registered the first score on a 70-yard run and Bill Beckwick the latter on a 15-yard dash.

Lion Will Return

New York—Adam Spiegel, first-string wingback who suffered a broken collarbone in a scrimmage before the season's opener, will be in the Columbia lineup against Cornell Saturday.

Uncle Sam Can't Pay Freight On Traveling Grid Show

Cunmngham

"I got six tickets . . . took whole family . . . most important thing to me was chance for the kids to get a look at the Midshipmen . . . seems a regrettable decision especially in this year when we are practically at war . . ." This is from the letter of a Boston gentleman sorely disappointed because the Navy football team visited Harvard Saturday, but the Midshipmen stayed at home. And it does seem a shame, but wait a minute.

It resolves itself into a matter of finances, and Harvard football revenue hasn't been sufficient of late years to warrant free spending. It appears that any institution willing to pay the expenses can have 1000 Midshipmen or West Point Cadets to go with the football game. It's a magnificent stage dressing but it runs into money. It costs, to be precise, $30 a head to carry the Midshipmen to Boston from Annapolis, which means that 1000 of them would come to $30,000, and 1000 of the best seats in the middle of the palaestra, which, otherwise, might be sold for big dough.

The Future Generals come to $15 a treatment, as of Boston, because the haul is just half as far. Somehow the understanding's been around that the athletic associations of the two Academies took care of these matters, but that doesn't chance to be correct.

Navy Worried About Army

The Navy, incidentally, is beginning to see spooks. Reports on basic Army strength are disturbing their otherwise pleasant dreams. They aren't worrying about any particular ups and downs of the soldiers. What disturbs them is how good Army will be by the Army-Navy date.

It doesn't seem to make sense, at least it wouldn't have a year ago—but Army might be a good bet against Navy when they finally square off.

Navy's Bill Busick and Minnesota's Bruce Smith are unquestionably two of the great backs of the year, and if the Minnesota captain can get himself sufficiently recovered from injuries and strike his proper stride, he's a practical certainty for All-America honors. Busick has a bright chance, but Smith is almost a sure shot, especially when the strength of his supporting cast is figured in.

Which brings young Mr. Smith up into personal focus, and, at least, it couldn't happen to a handsomer guy. Here's real Hollywood, but the funny part of it is he won't Holly. The Minnesota captain is the No. 1 heart throb of the Minnesota campus. They say the coeds swoon in his region and the Twin City debutantes park their Packards on streets just to see him walk past.

He's six feet, flaxen blond, with a profile and dimples. His shoulders are magnificent, his waist as trim as a lightweight's, and he practically flies through the air with the greatest of ease as he spearheads that Bierman attack. He glides in a copyright "off-balance" style that consistently fools the best tacklers in a league where they tackle.

But he's a queer sort of hermit who's in it but not of it, except the football portion. That's his to the hilt. As for the rest, he strolls through the pleasant paths without touching a blossom. It's not that he's a fat-head nor a queer duck. He just isn't interested, or rather it's that he's interested just in football and books.

For one thing, he's consistently passed up the kids of various fraternities for all the fact that he is, by all odds, the biggest prize on the campus. The Senior Prom is the most magnificent social event of the annual year. Men plan for weeks, the coeds make this glamorous social event an entire career. But it will hold forth this year without the Minnesota football captain in white tie and tails.

That's where he goes, as a matter of fact, when all the university goes somewhere else. He lives in the little town of Faribault, some 60 miles away, and that's where you find him when he's not in his room or somewhere around the gymnasium. As soon as the ball game is over, he's out the side door and gone. Somebody else can strut around Sundays and enjoy the admiring campus glances, or replay the great victory verbally upon the fraternity house divan.

State Plowed Out Football Star

The gent who really scored the touchdowns is in his little home town having Sunday dinner with Mom and Dad. That seems to be all there is to it. Suspicious sleuths, some from metropolitan newspapers, have penetrated that rural fastness on the still hunt for secret romance, but it's always no soap. He hasn't got a girl there either, at least not that anybody's ever been able to locate.

It's apparently just the folks, and his own trundle bed.

Once or twice, it's been funny.

Last year, for instance, after his long solo run defeated Michigan, he went home as usual, and a terrific Sunday blizzard snowed him in for two days. Bernie Bierman was wild, for his star was missing the practice. After running the backfield for two days without Smith, the coach took his woes directly to the Governor, and State snow plows came to the aid of the Minnesota football department by plowing its star out and returning him to the campus. It worked. His runs beat Purdue.

Smith's a deadly triple-threater, a great passer, a long-distance punter and a fast and powerful runner who can shake a tackler loose and start fast at a new angle. His Conference average last year was 91.5 yards per game (in six games) or an average of 6.37 yards per single effort.

He was knocked cold in the minor tussle with Pittsburgh Saturday before last, but if he can rebound to his former status and maintain it, there's your season's All-America left halfback.

Virginia Sets Hunting Dates, Divides State

By the Associated Press

Richmond, Va., Oct. 27.—The commission of game and inland fisheries today divided the State into three sections in fixing the hunting season on quail and rabbits.

The season will be from November 15 to December 31 in the first section, embracing largely those counties west of the Blue Ridge and in southwest Virginia.

The season will be from November 20 to January 20 in the second section, embracing principally the counties east of the Blue Ridge and north of the James River.

In the third section the season will be from December 1 to January 31.

November 20-January 20—Accomack, Albemarle, Amelia, Amherst, Appomattox, Buckingham, Caroline, Charles City, Chesterfield, Cumberland, Elizabeth City, Essex, Fluvanna, Gloucester, Goochland, Greene, Greensville, Hanover, Henrico, James City, King and Queen, King William, Lancaster, Louisa, Mathews, Middlesex, Nelson, New Kent, Northumberland, Northampton, Nottoway, Orange, Powhatan, Prince Edward, Prince George, Richmond, Spotsylvania, Warwick, Westmoreland and York.

December 1-January 31—Bedford, Brunswick, Campbell, Charlotte, Dinwiddie, Franklin, Halifax, Henry, Isle of Wight, Lunenburg, Mecklenburg, Nansemond, Norfolk, Patrick, Pittsylvania, Princes Anne, Southampton, Surry, and Sussex.

The season is the same length as that proclaimed for 1940-41. The season was closed by order of the commission about five days early last year when investigators and sportsmen asserted that quail were very scarce.

In addition the commisaion today made it illegal to carry a gun into national forests except during the hunting season unless the gun is in a case or taken down.

It affirmed the Federal migratory game laws for Virginia as to bag limits and open season.

Under a new ruling, recommended by the advisory council, the commission made it lawful to hunt bear or deer for the first five days of the hunting season in Allegany, Bath, Highland, Frederick and Shenandoah regardless of snow. Hunters have gone to a great deal of expense in the past to arrange a hunt, often traveling hundreds of miles, only to find lawful shooting blocked by snow.

Lee's 393 Set Tops Federal Duckpinners

Dick Lee, of the GPO quintet in the Men's Federal League at Arcadia posted a 182 game and 392 set to spark his team to highs of 619 and 1753, but his boys lost the odd skirmish to FHLBB mainly because of Folger's 371 set. FBI No. 2 scored a sweep over Treasurers.

ODD FELLOWS

Ray Crosman, Eastern, topped the Odd Fellows League at Brookland with a 15 single and with Walter Lund's 366 the pair aided in a two-game win over opponents. Jack Hodges, Golden Rule, rolled high set of 384 which sparked his quintet to team highs of 613 and 1743. Izzy Katz, Covenant, had 377 for a near high set while Chalmers Groff had 376 and Frank Cross 361.

TAKOMA

The Bureau of Standards League at Takoma Recreation was led by J. H. Courtney with a 146 single for his BTU team while a 392 set garnered set honors for E. Ross of the Engineers. The two teams divided honors for the night, the Engineers with a 605 game and the BTU's with a 1663 set.

NAVY

Harry Tew, of Paymasters, with 150-386 helped his team to a two-game win over Bureau of Engineering in the Navy League at Arcadia. Supplies & Accounts, aided by Madson's 383 and Jaquettes' 369, won team highs with a 603 game and 1722 set and managed a sweep over Aeronautics as well.

GEORGETOWN

The Veterans of Foreign Wars League at Georgetown was paced by Kelly, Follow Me, whose individual highs of 150-383 helped his team to a sweep over John Lyons. Follow Me Defense rolled high team game and set of 548 and 1639, respectively. Front Line and John Lyons Auxiliary also won all three from opponents.

FRIENDSHIP

Chevy Chase Presbyterian No. 1 laced out team scores of 586-1700 at the Ice Palace to win all three tilts from Clyde Kelly Class in the Friendship Church League with Beckwith's high single of 142 the main help. Brooks' 372 for Eldbrooke Bible Class enabled the team to sweep Presbyterian No. 2. Chevy Chase took all three from Eldbrooke.

BAKERS

Bill Canada's 159, for Sanico Office, Dutch Kamm's 139-399 for Schneider's Dandee and Howard Sours' 141-400 for Bond Bread topped the Bakers League at Convention Hall. The Bond Bread boys, however, were best as a team, for they totaled 625 and 1700 to post new season records.

CONVENTION HALL

Hap Burtner's son, George, was top man in the Commercial League at Convention Hall when he totaled 137 and 366 to spark his G. W. Cochran team to high game of 613. The Tru-Blu boys, however, won set honors with 1686. E. M. Bryan, with T. Taylor supplying the main punch with a 129 game and 352 set, enabled his team to win the odd game from Mars to remain in the lead.

Morris Brown Leads Negro Football List

By the Associated Press

Atlanta, Oct. 27.—Morris Brown College, of Atlanta, thundering toward another Negro football national championship, paced the Nation's unbeaten and untied teams this week after disposing of second ranking Florida A. M. last Saturday, 20 to 0.

The powerful Purple Wolverines, led by star Fullback John (Big Train) Moody, held the Rattlers to a net loss of 5 yards by rushing for the afternoon, and prevented completion of a single pass.

Only four unbeaten, untied teams remained in the national championship race after a weekend of upsets. Morris Brown headed the list with five straight wins and 115 points, against 17 for opponents. North Carolina College for Negroes at Durham ranked second, and Lane College, of Jackson, Tenn., third, each with four wins. Morgan, of Baltimore, was fourth with three straight.

Steers Pull Upset

A major upset of the weekend saw the Texas Steers, of Tyler, Tex., beat favored Langston (Okla.) University, 18 to 7, snapping a streak of ten consecutive victories. Greensboro (N. C.) Agricultural and Technical College sprang a similar surprise, beating West Virginia State College, 26 to 6. Shaw University, of Raleigh, N. C., and Johnson C. Smith, of Charlotte, previously unbeaten and untied, fought to a scoreless deadlock which dropped both out of the top rank.

Morgan and North Carolina College led the colored intercollegiate athletic association race, with Shaw third. Morgan, credited with 70 points against three league opponents, was the Nation's only Negro team with goal line uncrossed.

Morris Brown and Lane, each victor over three league foes, topped the Southern Intercollegiate Athletic Conference, while Kentucky State and Wilberforce led in the Midwestern conference with a single league victory each. Prairie View, unbeaten but once-tied, paced the Southwest Athletic Conference.

Moody is Leader

Morris Brown's giant fullback, Moody, scored seven points against Florida A. & M., running his season's total to 41 and gaining undisputed national leadership. Albert Gannt of Florida A. & M., previously ahead of Moody, dropped to second place with 37. Jumping Joe Jenkins, Morris Brown halfback, was third with 34.

Three of the four unbeaten leaders faced tough opposition next Saturday. Morris Brown crashes into Alabama State College of Montgomery in a league encounter. North Carolina plays upset-minded Shaw, and Lane collides with Florida A. & M.

Mrs. Sadtler Heads Service Club Golf Body

Mrs. W. F. Sadtler will head the women's golf affairs at the Army and Navy Club next year and will be assisted as chairman of the golf committee by Mrs. R. T. Schlosberg. Mrs. M. M. Maxwell will be in charge of the Friday tournaments, assisted by Mrs. J. F. Foy.

Other new officers elected by the Service Club linkswomen were: Mrs. W. E. Mackintosh, secretary; Mrs. E. T. King, publicity; Mrs. G. K. Heiss, handicap; Mrs. M. J. Torlinski, District chairman; Mrs. W. R. Slaguhter, ringer chairman, and Mrs. A. C. Olney, team captain.

Mrs. N. A. Chapin was low net winner in the Turkey Tournament while Mrs. C. B. Magruder captured gross honors with a 91. Other turkey prize winners were: Mrs. W. E. Mackintosh, 96-20, 76; Mrs. D. O. Hickey, 100-21, 79; Mrs. J. Y. York, 99-20, 79 and Mrs. P. Haugen, booby prize with 119-16, 103.

Yvon Robert Back In Wrestling Wars At Turner's Arena

Yvon Robert, former world's heavyweight wrestling champion, Thursday night will make his first appearance at Turner's Arena in a year. Robert, now holder of the Canadian title, will meet Fred (Legs) Grobmier, Des Moines scissors expert, in a special 30-minute bout.

Also arranged yesterday was a 30-minute match between Babe Caddock, cousin of the more famous Earl Caddock, and Jim Austeri, the Italian ace.

Feature honors will be divided between Nanjo Singh, the "Cobra Clutch" king, and Pat Fraley, meeting in one double windup match, and Big Jim Henry (the Green Hornet) and Paul Boesch in the other.

Robert is the gent who lost his world's title at the Arena about five years ago when he suffered a broken leg in a bout with Cliff Olson. He is regarded as the classiest Canadian wrestler ever to come out of that country.

DeGroot to Assist Kerr in Coaching Eastern All-Stars

By the Associated Press

Rochester, N. Y., Oct. 27.—Dudley S. Degroot, head coach of football at the University of Rochester, announced tonight he had accepted an invitation from Andy Kerr, of Colgate, to act as one of the coaches of the Eastern team which annually meets the West for the benefit of the Shrine's crippled children's hospital fund in San Francisco on New Year's Day.

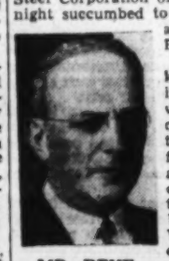
William Beye, U. S. Steel Official, Dies

William Beye, 60, vice president and general counsel, United States Steel Corporation of Delaware, last night succumbed to a heart attack at his home in Pittsburgh.



MR. BEYE

Mr. Beye, well known in Washington, was also vice president in charge of industrial relations for U. S. Steel and led its recent negotiations with the United Mine Workers over demans for a closed shop in United States Steel Corporation mines.

Born in Chicago, Mr. Beye studied at the University of Wisconsin and Lake Forest College, practiced corporation law in Chicago until 1937, when he was elected a U. S. Steel official.

He was a principal figure in the labor relations of U. S. Steel and is credited with being the author of the Illinois workmen's compensation law.

Leland Class Fetes New Students

New students at Leland Junior High School were guests of the ninth grade yesterday at a dance and entertainment in the school gymnasium. Evelyn Cohen was chairman of the student committee in charge, assisted by Al Earnest, decorations; Patsy Fitzgerald, refreshments; Betty Reed, Peggy Babcock and Adele Anthony, program.

Miss Maude Duvall, counselor at the school, was chaperone. The gym was decorated, with a Halloween motif.

Smith Says World Needs Godly Mothers

"If you ask me what the United States and England and the world need most, I'll tell you in two words —godly mothers," Gipsy Smith, white haired evangelist who is currently conducting a city-wide revival here, declared last night.

From the rostrum of the First Congregational Church, Smith launched the second week of his preaching series by addressing himself to the women of the congregation, urging a particular feminine responsibility for bringing families to the ways of religion.

"Woman's qualities for goodness, when she starts to be good, are far above any man's," he asserted.

"Your place is in the home," he shouted then. "You are the homemakers. And in your family life, you're building destinies, you're hoisting stars—or else you're digging dungeons, you're forging chains."

Charging that modern children were being lost to God because "they've lost their faith in their parents' religion," he warned that it was a mother's duty to set an example to her husband and her children and thus "lead them to Jesus."

Telling the story of an Englishwoman who was "born again" at one of his revivals, and who then converted her husband and six sons through prayer, he stated:

"When God comes into a woman's heart, it makes all the difference in the world."

"The Devil isn't going to wait for an introduction to your babies," he shouted again, striding back and forth across the stage. "He'll step right in and take 'em. And it's a woman's duty to keep her husband and her children from the Devil."

The Rev. Howard Stone Anderson, pastor of the church, shared the rostrum with Smith, and music was furnished by the Gospel Chorus of the Third Baptist Church. The nightly meetings are scheduled to continue through November 2.

Owen J. Cleary, Formerly of D. C., Dies in Pittsburgh

Owen J. Cleary, 59, former Washington resident, died yesterday in Pittsburgh after an illness of more than six months. Mass will be sung Thursday at 10 a. m. in St. Martin's Church and burial will follow in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Mr. Cleary was born in Washington and was graduated from Gonzaga High School. While there he was manager of the Aloysius basketball team. Later he went to Pittsburgh, where he had lived for the last 30 years, and entered publicity work.

He leaves two brothers, Frances J. P. Cleary, 45 Randolph Street Northwest, and Daniel A. Cleary, 1010 Fourteenth Street Northwest. The Potomac Council of Knights of Columbus, of which he was a member, will pay its respects tomorro wnight in Taltavull funeral home, Fourteenth Street and Spring Road Northwest, where his body is resting.

D. C. Driver Strikes, Kills 235-Lb. Buck

Hagerstown, Md., Oct. 27.—George Semyan, Washington, D. C., driving the car owned by William Haft, Washington, struck and killed a 235-pound 13-point buck deer near Licking Creek, on the National Highway, 18 miles west of here yesterday. The deer darted across the highway. The car was damaged but the occupants escaped injury.

Auto Quotas Held Unfair To Big Three

Gen. Motors' Head Says Large Firms Curtailed More Than Smaller

By the Associated Press

New York, Oct. 27.—Alfred P. Sloan, jr., chairman of General Motors Corp., indicated today in a statement accompanying the big automobile firm's quarterly report that he believed the three larger motor manufacturers had suffered a greater curtailment of production by Government decree than smaller car makers.

"In connection with the priorities program for the automobile industry," said Sloan, "there have been established allotment ratios among individual producers.

"In establishing these individual quotas, a differential has been created by the Government between the three larger producers and the remainder of the industry; that is to say, the automobile production of the three larger producers has undergone a greater curtailment than the average of the industry as a whole. . . .

Willing to Sacrifice

"The question naturally arises, whether workers who have served or are serving General Motors should lose their employment and in the aggregate receive relatively less work in favor of workers employed elsewhere; also whether the 17,000 General Motors dealers, as individual merchants, should receive a relatively smaller percentage of merchandise to sell as compared with competitive dealers.

"The fact that everybody must do his part in the defense program is accepted. General Motors for one not only proposes to do its part but more. . . .

"But General Motors believes that the policy behind the sacrifices now demanded of everybody should be to maintain the relative position as among producers within industry.

"That is to say, the policy should not be to use the emergency as a means of abritrarily readjusting the competitive position of the units within any industry."

Nets 94 Cents a Share

The corporation's financial report for the quarter ended September 30 showed consolidated net profit of $42,997,929. After allowing for preferred dividends there was a balance equal to 94 cents a share on the common stock.

This compared with $53,59,568, or $1.18 a share, in the June quarter and $15,597,030, or 34 cents a share, in the September quarter last year.

Provision for United States and foreign income and excess profits taxes amounted to $37,633,000 for the latest quarter against $73,208,000 in the preceding quarter and $12,577,000 in the third quarter of 1940.

Sloan disclosed that deliveries under defense contracts and orders from General Motors United States and Canadian plants during the third quarter amounted to $115,900,000 in contrast with $75,200,000 in the second quarter and $56,600,000 in the first quarter.

Dividend Slash For Am. Tobacco Stock Is Likely

New York, Oct. 27 (AP).—George W. Hill, president of the American Tobacco Co., today recommended a slash in the company's common stock dividends after citing an increase in taxes of "over 35 per cent of last year's earnings per common share."

Hill said in a letter to stockholders he would recommend a dividend of 75 cents a share on the common and common "B" stock, payable December 1, in place of he usual dividend of $1.25 per share.

The letter estimated 1941 sales volume at $334,328,000 compared with $285,752,878 in 1940. Under 1940 tax rates, Hill said, net income this year was $32,550,000 against $28,311,782 in 1940.

Excess profits tax and the increase in Federal taxes over 1940, however, amounted to $8,652,000, which would cut 1941 earnings to $23,658,000 or $4.53 a share, compared with $5.55 a share earnings in 1940.

"The increase in taxes amounts to some $1.96 per common share," the letter said. "There is no prospect of an early repeal of these taxes."

Commercial Credit Acquires Chicago Firm

New York, Oct. 27 (AP).—Announcement was made today that Commercial Credit Co. of Baltimore has arranged to acquire for cash the assets of National Bond & Investment Co. of Chicago.

Payment will be made at approximate book value of National Bond Investment and its subsidiaries.

Stock Brokers Warned on 'Hasty' Sales

Chester T. Lane, general counsel of the Securities Commission, issued an opinion yesterday warning stock brokers that hasty sales of securities bought in large blocks for the purpose of raising the price of securities may be unlawful.

Lane's opinion was based on an inquiry from a broker who said that he thought a certain, unnamed security, was selling at too low a price on the financial market. This broker proposed gradually to buy a large number of shares of this particular security with the hope of boosting its price and later reselling the securities at a profit.

Lane replied that if the broker resold these securities at the time when the market price was high as a result of his own purchases he might be violating part of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 which prohibits manipulation of securities.

Lane added that the broker could avoid the potential violation by holding the securities a reasonable length of time after the price went up, so that when the securities were sold the price could not be attributed to the effects of the broker's original purchases.

OPM Urges New Plant for Electric Alloy Steel

The Office of Production Management recommended yesterday that the Reconstruction Finance Corporation finance the construction at South Chicago, Ill., of the first plant in this country specifically designed to produce electric alloy steel. Republic Steel Co. will operate the plant.

The new installation, part of a steel industry expansion program approved by OPM, will have a capacity of 504,000 tons of alloy steel ingots a year. Of this amount, 317,000 tons will be converted at the plant into bars, rods and shapes to be finished elsewhere into aircraft and ordnance parts.

First units of the South Chicago plant can start production in eight or nine months and the entire plant can be in operation in about 15 months, it was estimated by W. A. Hauck, OPM steel consultant whose report on the project formed the basis for the recommendation of OPM Director William S. Knudsen.

Cost of the expansion was not disclosed. OPM officials said no other plant in the United States was similarly designed, with every unit built for the production of electric furnace alloy steel.

The new project calls for development of a coal mine at Elkhorn, Ky., to produce coking coal for the plant. Hauck said ample power was available to run the electric furnaces and "a trained operating and supervisory force is at hand."

Virtually all the electric alloy steel now produced in the United States is going into defense manufacture. An increase in the, supply is of "utmost importance, Hauck asserted.

'Middle Man' Gets 49% of Food Prices

The Agriculture Department offered figures yesterday to show that there is a good-sized difference between what the housewife pays for most food items at the grocery store and what the farmer gets for the raw materials.

On the basis of prices prevailing in September, farmers were said to have received only 51 per cent of the consumer's bill for 58 principal food items. Processors, distributors and transportataion agencies were said to have received 49 per cent.

The farmer's share was largest for meat items. Of the average retail price of 26.9 cents a pound for pork products, the producer got 21.1 cents, or 78 per cent, the department said.

The Department said the farmer received 69 per cent of what retailers charged for lamb products, 50 per cent of the price for poultry, and 50 per cent for dairy products, including milk, butter, cheese and evaporated milk. Of the average price of 46.9 cents a dozen consumers paid for eggs, farmers were said to have gotten an average of 30.3 cents, or 65 per cent.

The farmers' share of most items was said to have been less than half. That share for some important products was reported as follows: White flour, 48 per cent; white bread, 18; corn meal, 43; corn flakes, 23; crackers, 11; potatoes, 50; peanut butter, 41; apples, 38; oranges, 32; navy beans, 52; macaroni, 19, and rice, 33.

The Department said that the part going to farmers was larger than a year ago, when the farm value of the 58 major foods was 42 per cent of the cost to consumers. It explained that advances in farm product prices had been sharper during the past 12 months than had retail prices.

Officials said it was quite probable that the advance in retail prices would catch up with the rise in the farm prices, with the spread between what the consumer pays and the farmer gets widening again.

Voorhis Assails Contract Award to Alcoa

Representative Voorhis (Democrat), of California, told the House yesterday that the award of a Government contract to the Aluminum Corporation of America for construction of three new aluminum plants and other facilities would put the corporation in "an even stronger monopolistic position" than previously.

"The reason given for proceeding in this way is, of course," Voorhis said, "that due to greater experience Alcoa is supposed to be able to get these plants built quicker than anybody else could do. But there is not one word in this contract requiring Alcoa to complete construction within any given period of time whatsoever. The very thing, therefore, which is given as the reason for this astonishing arrangement is not in any way assured by the terms of the contract. I simply take this occasion to ask why!"

Priority Rating Given Private Plane Repairs

The OPM has extended its priority preference rating on aircraft repair parts and accessories to civilian-operated airplanes.

The priorities division explained that the Nation's 84,152 certified pilots "can only maintain their flying ability through a continuity of flying experience."

"More than 80 per cent of the certified aircraft in the United States today are being used for training purposes," the OPM statement said. "The remaining 20 per cent represent the only available means by which the existing reservoir of pilots may keep up their flying time. The new order is designed to keep ships in the air."

The OPM extended through November and December the priorities assistance begun in April for manufacturers of airframes, aviation engines and propellers.

The extension was ordered to prevent any lapse in aircraft production "while a new type of order for the industry is being studied by OPM experts," the announcement said. No "new type" order was available.

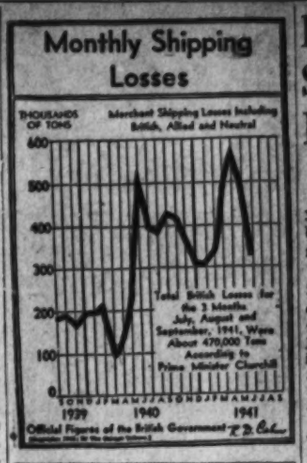
Stewart-Warner Corporation reported third quarter net earnings of $599,839, equal to 47 cents a share on the capital stock, compared with $317,439, or 25 cents, the third quarter last year. Earnings for the nine months period amounted to $1,370,111, or $1.08 a share, compared with $994,684, or 80 cents, the first nine months of 1940.

Union Carbide & Carbon Corporation reported net income for the quarter ended September 30 was $10,916,770, equal to $1.18 a share, compared with $11,004,553, or $1.19 a share in the September quarter of 1940. Earnings after taxes were $16,471,636 in the 1941 quarter against $14,403,473 in the comparable 1940 quarter. Reserves for estimated depreciation and other charges were sharply higher, however, at $5,360,120 against $3,109,528, accounting for the decline in net income.

Consolidated Edison Co. of New York and subsidiaries reported for the quarter ended September 30 net income of $4,393,051, equal to 14 cents a share on the common stock, compared with $4,239,753, or 13 cents a share, in the 1940 period. For the nine months ended September 30 indicated consolidated net income was $25,505,358, equal to $1.51 a share, against $27,416,620, or $1.66 a share, in the same period last year.

Anaconda Wire & Cable Co. reported for the nine months ended September 30 preliminary net profit of $2,146,580 after provision for Federal taxes, equal to $5.09 a share. This compared with $917,845, or $2.18 a share in the 1940 period.

Otis Steel Co. reported for the September quarter net profit of $345,711 after provision for taxes, equal after dividend requirements on the $5.50 preferred stock to 17 cents a share on the common stock. This preferred stock is in arrears on dividends. In the September quarter last year net profit was $464,665, or 30 cents a share on the common.



Cotton Leads Renewed Drop In Key Staples

By the Associated Press

Liquidation of general uneasiness forced commodity futures prices lower yesterday, traders citing disappointing war news, opposition to the proposal for large crop loans and poor demand from commercial interests as causes.

Cotton future lost $1.05 to $1.35 a bale in steady selling by commission houses.

Chicago wheat was off 1¾ to 2¼ cents a bushel. Corn lost ⅜ to ¾ of a cent and rye ⅞ to 1⅜ cents. Soybeans were ¾ cent lower to ¼ cent higher. Livestock prices were steady to higher, hogs gaining 10 to 20 cents a hundredweight.

New York cottonseed oil declined ¼ of a cent or more a pound. Hides eased and cocoa and coffee each lost about 1-29 of a cent a pound.

The Associated Press weighted index of 35 spot staples at wholesale was up slightly at 91.34 per cent of the 1926 average from 91.28 per cent the previous trading day.

Review Refused In D. C. Bank Case

The receiver of the District National Bank of Washington failed yesterday to get a Supreme Court review of a decision that an insolvent bank is liable for the payment of taxes on gross receipts the same as any other business.

Justus S. Wardell, the receiver, appealed from the District of Columbia Court of Appeals. He contended that while he had collected rentals from receivership properties and netted profits, he was not engaged in business in the District of Columbia under the provisions of the District's 1937 revenue act. He maintained that under the provisions of Federal law, the tax is abated because "the payment of such tax would diminish the assets of the insolvent bank necessary for full payment of all its depositors."

Sears Declares $2 Dividend

Chicago, Oct. 27 (AP).—Sears Roebuck & Co., directors today declared a $2 a share dividend on the common stock payable December 10 to stockholders of record November 10. This will bring total dividends for the year up to $14.25, same as for 1940 and 1939.

The company's statement announcing the dividend said that although gross sales are running about 30 per cent ahead of a year ago, directors' action indicated earnings after taxes will be about the same as in 1940.

Akron, Ohio, Oct. 27 (AP).—Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co. today voted a dividend of 37½ cents a share on common stock and one of $1.25 on $5 preferred, payable December 15 to stock of record November 15.

$38,000,000 Utility Issue Is Awarded

Chicago, Oct. 27 (AP).—A syndicate headed by Halsey, Stuart & Co. was the successful bidder today for an offering of $38,000,000 Central Illinois Public Service Corp. 3⅜ per cent bonds, maturing 1971. The group's bid was 105.7898. Kuhn, Loeb & Co. of New York submitted the only other bid, 105.1269.

Chicago Grain

This break carried prices almost 5 cents below the peaks reached Friday, which marked the crest of last week's recovery.

Opening losses of about 1½ cents were partly recovered around midsession but then selling was renewed due partly to weakness of cotton. Traders expressed belief that some of the early orders represented profit-taking but when the market weakened again later they blamed selling on uneasiness regarding price legislation, war news, reports of a clash on the Russo-Japanese border and the Presidential speech scheduled for tonight.

Closing quotations on December and May wheat were 1.13⅛@1.13¼ and 1.18¼@1.18 respectively, with the nearby delivery once again below the Government loan rate for No. 2 grades here. Corn finished ⅜@¾ off, December 75⅜@75¼, May $1; oats, ¼@½ down; rye, ⅛@1¾ lower and soybeans ¼ off to ¾ up. Lard was 12 to 17 lower.

Bank Loans Show First Dip In 26 Weeks

By the Associated Press

The Federal Reserve Board said yesterday that business loans of banks declined last week for the first time in 26 weeks.

In 101 leading cities, commercial, industrial and agricultural loans of banks declined 12 million dollars to a total of $6,556,000,000. These loans have been rising with few interruptions ever since the beginning of the defense program, and now are $1,810,000,000 higher than a year ago.

The board's 101-city member bank condition statement gave the following summary of assets and liabilities on October 22, together with the increase or decrease since the previous week and the corresponding week last year (in millions of dollars):

Britain Relaxes Income Blockade Of U. S. Film Firms

New York, Oct. 27 (AP).—Dow, Jones & Co. reported today that executives of leading motion picture companies have been advised a new agreement with Great Britain providing a larger cash income for American film producers from British film rentals has been concluded.

The Business News Service said it was understood the terms of the new agreement, to take effect for the year beginning November 1, provide that American companies may receive half of the $32,000,000 funds now blocked in Britain and that $20,000,000 may be exported to the United States during the coming year from current income.

During the year ended October 31, 1941, American producers were limited to receiving $12,500,000 from Great Britain and during the preceding year they were allowed $18,000,000.

Pepsi-Cola Reports $7,550,000 Net

New York, Oct. 27 (AP).—Walter S. Mack, jr., president of Pepsi-Cola Co., today announced the company estimated that operating profits for the nine months ended September 30 on a consolidated basis, including the old Pepsi-Cola Co., were approximately $12,050,000 after all operating charges but before Federal income and excess profits taxes.

This, he said, compared with $6,480,000 on the same basis (Loft and Pepsi-Cola combined) for the like 1940 period.

After provision for Federal income and excess profits taxes, also nonrecurring losses of $3,000,000, for which adequate reserves previously had been established, net profit for the nine months was estimated at about $7,550,000, compared with $4,200,000 in the like period a year earlier.

Steel Rate to Set Record at 99.9%

New York, Oct. 27 (AP).—Steel production for the current week will set a new high record at 99.9 per cent of capacity, the American Iron & Steel Institute estimated today.

This would top last week's rate by 2.1 points and compare with 96.9 per cent a month ago and 95.7 per cent a year ago.

On this basis the week's production of steel ingots would total 1,650,533 net tons, also a new record high. The previous peak was 1,625,750 tons for the week of October 13.

New York Cotton

New York, Oct. 27 (AP).—Cotton futures slipped 21 to 27 points today on fairly broad liquidation that failed to stir up much trade demand.

Weakness in grains and uneasiness over the Far Eastern situation coupled with labor strife to discourage buying sentiment. Other factors were the slowness of the gray goods market and reports of opposition to higher parity loans for farm products.

Cotton cloth sales were reported small. The drop in the average price of spot cotton to 15.98 cents a pound "tripped" the gray goods ceiling 1⅛ cents a pound downward, meaning print cloths as of tomorrow will be on a 42½-cent-a-pound basis.

Port receipts Saturday, 19,304 bales; port stocks, 3,345,350.

Dr. Jagers Dies; Was One of First Woman Physicians

Funeral services for Dr. S. Jones Jagers, 92, of 3244 Thirty-eighth Street Northwest, who died at her home early Sunday morning, will be held today from Hysong's funeral home, 1300 N Street Northwest at 11 a. m. Burial will follow in Arlington National Cemetery, where she will rest beside her husband.

Dr. Jagers was born in Ashland, Ky., in 1849. She graduated from the Eclectic Medical School in New York City about 1886 and immediately began private practice there as one of the first women physicians. Her husband, Frank P. Jagers, a Civil War veteran, died in 1917.

In 1905 Dr. Jagers and her husband moved to Washington. Later they visited abroad living for several years in France and England. Dr. Jagers upon her return to Washington gave up her medical practice.

She was the parliamentarian of the local chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution for many years and was a member of the Daughters of 1812.

Indictment Upheld Against D. C. Bakers

Justice T. Alan Goldsborough yesterday upheld an indictment returned last spring, accusing 7 companies and 12 persons of maintaining noncompetitive prices for bread in Washington.

The indictment was brought under the Sherman Antitrust Act after an investigation directed by Attorneys Harold L. Schilz and warren P. Cunningham.

House Elects Cooper Speaker Pro Tem

Representative Cooper (Democrat), of Tennessee, was elected Speaker pro tem of the House yesterday to preside during the absence of Speaker Rayburn (Democrat) of Texas, who is at home for a brief vacation.

FUNERAL DIRECTORS 3

In addition to all the things you would expect to find in a funeral arrangement, CHAMBERS offers you something more for your money . . . a funeral complete in every detail, with 60 or more individual services! The total of all these important services added to all the other deluxe features included with every CHAMBERS funeral give you what we believe to be the greatest value in Washington, and one of the greatest in the world.

IN CASE OF DEATH, CALL CHAMBERS . . . the largest undertaker in Washington, whose reliability and dependability have been proven by the fact that he conducts more funerals in one month than the average undertaker in a year. Trust CHAMBERS with your problem as so many have already done to their complete satisfaction.

LEGAL NOTICES 4

INTERSTATE COMMERCE COMMISSION.
Finance Docket No. 12545. Fort Dodge, Des Moines & Southern Railroad Company Reorganization. Notice of submission of plan of reorganization. The United States District Court for the Southern District of Iowa, Central Division, and the Interstate Commerce Commission have approved a plan for the reorganization of the Fort Dodge, Des Moines & Southern Railroad Company, pursuant to Section 77 of the Bankruptcy Act. The plan is being submitted for acceptance or rejection to the holders of allowed claims of the following classes: Class 6, Fort Dodge, Des Moines & Southern Railroad Company first mortgage 5 per cent bonds. Class 7, Fort Dodge, Des Moines & Southern Railroad Company ten-year 7 per cent debenture bonds, series A, due June 1, 1933. Class 8, Claims, interests or securities of whatever character, other than those above enumerated in the foregoing classes," against the debtor (the Fort Dodge, Des Moines & Southern Railroad Company) or its property, whether or not the same be represented or evidenced by written instrument. Only those holding such securities or claims on October 15, 1941, will be entitled to vote on the plan. Holders of such securities or claims who shall not promptly receive a ballot by mail may obtain one, together with copies of plan of reorganization, the commission's reports thereon and the opinion and order of the court approving the plan, by writing to the Interstate Commerce Commission, Washington, D. C. Separate ballots have been prepared for each class entitled to vote on the plan. Therefore, in making requests for ballots the commission should be advised of the class of security or claim for which ballots are desired and the number of ballots required in each class. In order that a ballot may be valid, it must be filled out, in duplicate, and filed with the commission on or before December 15, 1941, or the envelope containing ballot, mailed in continental United States, must bear postmark showing it was placed in the mail on or before that date. Ballots executed by persons residing outside continental United States, in order to be effective, must be returned to the office of the commission in Washington, D. C., not later than December 15, 1941. W. P. BARTEL, Secretary. October 15, 1941.

"The first five classes (to which submission is not being made because their interests are not adversely and materially affected by the plan) embrace expenses of administration and operation during reorganization and during the prior receivership, claims entitled to priority under the six months' rule (i. e., the six months prior to February 18, 1930, the date of the appointment of the receiver), claims for personal injuries to employes, taxes and special assessments and claims other than those enumerated in the court's order classifying claims which are entitled to priority in payment by virtue of the laws of any date or of the United States.

Listen! with Glynn

Frankenstein had nothing on Bob Burns, the Arkansas comedian you hear over WJSV every Tuesday night.

They both created monsters over which afterward they had little or no control.

With Scientist Frankenstein it was a mechanical man who did all sorts of damage.

With Bob Burns it's a so-called musical instrument—which for want of a better name is known as the bazooka.

Now when Mr. Burns was young, the bazooka was a very good gag. In fact, a large part of Mr. Burns' rise to fame can be attributed to it. But now that he's getting older and a little bit shorter in the wind, it doesn't seem like such a breathless idea—or, rather, that's the trouble, it's too goshdarned breathless.

Ordinary wind instruments are operated with a lip valve. But the bazooka is just a plain piece of lead pipe, requiring a prodigious amount of work from the lungs. Attempts have been made by experts to do something to remedy this, but the trouble is that the bazooka no longer sounds like the bazooka when it's improved.

So it's Bob Burn's blessing and curse. It brought him fame, but nowadays it knocks him almost cold for a few minutes every time he uses it.

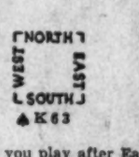
Contract Bridge

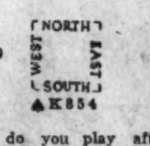
Defense is not the easiest department of contract bridge but it might easily be called the most important. To cover or not to cover is always a problem but in actual play, whatever you decide, do it quickly. Here you can take all the time you want, and declarer won't catch on.

1. You hold the South cards in this situation:



What card do you play after East, the declarer, leads the ten?

2. You hold the South cards in this situation:



What card do you play after East, the declarer, leads the queen?

3. You hold the South cars in this situation:

The Answer

If you get stuck, here is the solution:

1. South should cover the ten with his king, forcing declarer to play dummy's ace. If North happens to hold the queen, nine, they will make a tenace over dummy's jack and will take two tricks. If declarer has the queen, nine, it does not matter what South plays.

2. If South plays his king in this situation he will establish dummy's spades. He must not cover, hoping that his guarded king will prevent the suit from being run.

3. South should force out one of dummy's honors by covering the jack. If North holds the ten it may win on the third round.

THE HECHT CO.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

- Fifty-five years ago today the Statue of Liberty came into our possession.
- On Bedloe's Island, the Gateway to America, this immortal monument was dedicated on October 28th, 1886 . . .
- With a world at war . . . with millions in the grip of conflict .. Americans pay tribute today to their symbol of Freedom, their emblem of Democracy . . . their Statue of Liberty.
